But at least I'm not an anonymous COWARD who hides because of that yellow streak running down that hunched back of yours. I know what I heard, and N4CND clearly used profanity directed towards W4AMP. I wish that I'd have recorded it, because I would send it in. The station will be set up so I can

Too much paranoia here. I have had multiple ham rigs - as well as scanners, mobile phones, and GPS receivers - in my vehicles for years. The only time a cop ever made any comment about all the radio stuff in my vehicle was to tell me that my installation looked very impressive. (But then again, my license plates are my call sign, which no doubt helped)

That is what happens in my state with respect

are caught with a firearms in a vehicle, then you are arrested. That even goes for family members.

SO you want to have to go thru the hassle, take time to go to court, risk having your equipment damaged because some rambo cop was too gung ho (Ah am th' law 'round hyar, boy) to take time to examine your papers and find out that you are not doing anything wrong? I don't think so--not me. If some rambo, fat-bellied dep'ty sheriff takes my radio(s) while ignoring the license I am trying to show him, I guarantee you I'll do everything I can to sue the SOB and his agency and cause him as much trouble as I can.

Not true. "Presumed use" is valid grounds for assumption of linear amplifier use, but NOT for transceiver use.

ANYONE can purchase and hook up any type of amateur transceiver. Only if an unlicensed user TRANSMITS does a violation occur.

20,000 plus newsgroups are available on usenet. It allows you to post (semi) anonymously, and most people accept that, flames and trolls. Most people accept that they don't know the true identity of the person at the other end of the message. (Although it does tend to prove Oscar Wilde's claim about men and masks.)

...except for the rec.radio.amatuer.* newsgroups.

A few people expect you to post a callsign, (if you have one) thus giving away information about yourself. With the publicity about internet stalking and identity theft, you'd be foolish to post such information. If I'm to be branded as an anonymous coward, simply because I have a different opinon, so be it.

FCC Focusing on Role of Former Licensee as Contest Op
NEWINGTON, CT, Dec 5, 2001--The FCC is looking into whether a South Carolina amateur broke any rules when he let former licensee Herb Schoenbohm, ex-KV4FZ, operate during a recent contest. Stephen S. Reichlyn, AA4V, rented and operated from Schoenbohm's station in the US Virgin Islands as AA4V/KP2 during the CQ World Wide SSB Contest the weekend of October 27-28.
After the FCC was alerted to the operation, Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth wrote Reichlyn on November 13. He requested further information on the role of the "former licensee" whose location and equipment Reichlyn had used. Although the letter did not mention Schoenbohm by name, Hollingsworth subsequently confirmed to the ARRL that Schoenbohm was, indeed, the "former licensee" in question.
Following a legal odyssey that lasted more than five years and ended at the doorstep of the US Supreme Court, the FCC was successful last year in its efforts to deny Schoenbohm's Amateur Radio license renewal application. The FCC had turned down Schoenbohm's application citing his 1992 felony conviction on federal fraud charges and on character issues. His interim operating authority expired earlier this year.
Hollingsworth's letter was prompted by an e-mail said to have been authored by Reichlyn that outlined Schoenbohm's role. The information in the e-mail--forwarded to the FCC by another amateur--suggested that Reichlyn may have let Schoenbohm operate while Reichlyn was absent or asleep and in violation of FCC rules governing third-party communications.
FCC rules consider an unlicensed individual who communicates via Amateur Radio to be a third party and require that a licensed control operator be present at the control point, "continuously monitoring and supervising the third party's participation." Such a third party also may not exchange messages with stations in countries with which the US does not have a third-party traffic agreement. That list includes the UK and most of Europe.
The FCC also may have to consider how its refusal to renew Schoenbohm's license affects his legal status as a third party. An individual whose license was revoked or suspended or surrendered for cancellation following revocation, suspension or fine--or who is under a cease-and-desist order relating to amateur operation--may not serve as a third party at an Amateur Radio station.
In his November 13 letter, Hollingsworth asked Reichlyn to list specific operating times and operators, to describe his "exact location" during times AA4V/KP2 was on the air and to detail when he was asleep while others operated. Hollingsworth also asked for a copy of the AA4V/KP2 contest log and for records of any other transmissions made as AA4V/KP2 between October 1 and November 5.
Reichlyn responded November 18 with a five-page explanation and more than 150 log pages of his contest and non-contest operation from the US Virgin Islands this fall. The FCC provided copies of Reichlyn's letter and some of the log pages to the ARRL at the League's request.

Reichlyn confirmed that he had rented Schoenbohm's station for the event and that he and another operator planned to travel to the US Virgin Islands to participate in the contest. When the other operator had to back out at the last minute, Reichlyn opted to attempt a solo operation. During the contest, however, he asked Schoenbohm to fill in briefly on two occasions, Reichlyn said--for about an hour and a half on October 27 and again the next day for about a half hour. He said Schoenbohm "was fully supervised by me as I was resting in the same room" on both occasions.
Reichlyn said Schoenbohm agreed "reluctantly" to spell him when he was not feeling well and on the second occasion while he "ate and rested." He said no one but he and Schoenbohm operated during the event, and that, to his knowledge, Schoenbohm never used the station without his supervision and oversight.
Reichlyn said he "certainly would not have asked him [Schoenbohm] to help me" if he had any reason to believe it might violate FCC rules. He also pointed out that Schoenbohm would not be likely to risk any violations himself since he had taken an Amateur Radio exam since losing his license and was "awaiting a favorable ruling on his license application" from the FCC. Schoenbohm vowed last year to return to Amateur Radio. Hollingsworth confirmed that Schoenbohm's license application is pending within the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau.
"It is now obvious to me that perhaps my choice of using Mr. Schoenbohm as a relief operator was poor but nonetheless, I would not have knowingly jeopardized my license to achieve a higher score in a radio contest or for any other reason."
Reichlyn, who said he's been licensed since 1967, told Hollingsworth that he would cooperate with the FCC in resolving the investigation. Hollingsworth told the ARRL that the case remains open and the inquiry continues.

Sure "Mysterian 2000" anything you say about using an Anon. Ok? Crow@ovnet.com How about Raven? Remember that Anon Woger?

Oh you say you are going to use a recorder now? So noted and forwarded to Riley Hollingsworth. That way he will know to expect jamming using recorded sounds coming from Glendale WV

Rave on Woger, fuckin loser. Big Marie wants her bed pan changed now!!!!!!!

Yes. Tis true. He waits for Big Marie to doze off and then sneaks into her bedroom to abscond with one of her house dresses. He then sneaks ever so quietly out to the carport and there, under the cover of darkness, he dons Big Marie's house dress, dabs on a bit of cheap makeup and heads off for a lively eveing at the Pink Triangle Bar and Grill. Roger occasionally stops on the way to these dances to purchase a cucumber and some masking tape. He tapes the cucumber to his leg and prances to and fro with that mincing little walk of his and just has a gay old time. No wallflower is that Roger!

Until you can reference an actual case where a licensed ham has had "some rambo, fat-bellied dep'ty sheriff takes my radio(s) while ignoring the license", this is all just paranoid supposition. Relax...

If you pursue legal hobbies (and use legal equipment) , you won't need an attorney.

By the way, nobody has a "right" to use a radio transmitter. It is a privilidge which is granted by the FCC (check the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, there's no mention of a transmitter in either). And that which they grant, they can take away... Just like the DMV and your "right' to operate a motor vehicle on a public highway.

Now we know who the real jammer is! Poor fat-arsed AMP was so busy second-guessing who was jamming him and triple guessing from whence they came that he overlooked his butt-buddy a few miles away in Glen Dale, West By God Virginia!
Neat plot, you two! AMP stirs up the group (knowing he is not wanted) and Woger jams so dimmy can blame it on others. OH, wait just a minute here! Didn't dimmy get in trouble with Riley about this same sort of thing just last year? Remember? Dimmy was coordinating with a buddy on 220 mHz as they talked about who they were going to jam on the HF bands. Riley got Dimmy O'Brien for that and sent a nice little letter of warning to W4AMP.
You should have heard the garbage that AMP spewed for several weeks after that letter. The congenital liar told everybody and anybody who would listen that the tapes that Riley had in his posession were forgeries! Yeah. Right. Like Dimmy would never, ever, in his wildest imagination jam, harass, intimidate, lie, or spread false rumors about those with whom he is angry. The really sad (and sick) part of all of this is that Dimmy lied so often and so vehemently that the sicko even believed his own lies!
There are two things one can count on when it comes to Roger and Dimmy.
1) Everything they have said is a lie.
2) Everything they are going to say is a lie.

One last word of warning. Do NOT post comments about W4AMP. He will do one of three things.
1) He will spam you and swear on his Navy Code of Good Conduct Book that he would never do such a thing.
2) He will send you magazine subscriptions, make hang-up calls to your home at three a.m., and, if he can find out who you work for, he will call/write your employer and accuse you of nefarious acts.
3) Lastly, if all else fails he will threaten you with legal action. His favorite ploy is to email you or your ISP while he poses as an attorney. Of course it is common knowledge that he cannot afford an attorney and that he actually owes unpaid bills to Atlanta area attorneys who have blacklisted him. Hell...he can't even pay his car repair bills or his rent on time. All this from a tawdry, self-proclaimed, big bucks "enjuneer" who cashes his paychecks at a fly-by-night 24 hour check cashing shop. So much for that 90,000 dollars a year, eh?

One of the locals here had it happen in the suburbs. He just called the chief, who reprimanded the officer and returned the scanner the next day.

Hello, from Plano.

I was in Texas Towers just yesterday, and took a friend with me who just passed his Tech, and we both felt like we had done something wrong by stepping inside their business. That killed the excitement of a new license in a hurry.

I've been to TT a dozen times in the three years I've lived here. I can't say I've ever had a pleasurable experience. I guess I keep thinking it will change.

So you ARE an anonymous COWARD. Any "stalking" can be dealt with through law

Actual case: in Kentucky, about 5 years ago. Police harassed a 14-year old boy on his bicycle. Boy was a licensed ham, carrying a Radio Shack HTX-202 2m HT. Police confiscated his radio under Kentucky's strict anti-scanner laws...even though this was NOT a scanner, could NOT be modified to receive out-of-band (an HTX-202 cannot), and he was exempt from the law anyway, as a licensed ham.

Correct. But the difference is that the motor vehicle privilege is granted by a state agency. The radio privlege is a FEDERAL grant, which is NOT to be compromised or interfered with by any state or local law enforcement agency.

So you're saying you're advocating illegal jamming to interfere with Indiana. We have one of the most pro gun set of laws in the country. One of the oldest personal protection permits. But you had better have a permit if you have a handgun in the vehicle.

Rifles and shotguns are a bit different. Even a kid can have one, if he has written permission from his parents. But too many have gone to jail because dad left his handgun in the car.

Rob,

You are exqactly right, so don't let other's comments get to you. 6 is a great band. Good DX possibilities, virtually all modes, small antennas, and available radios for modifications and home brew projects. The only thing you have to watch out for is TVI. Its right beneath channel 2 and you can easily cause problems with neighbors or your own TV.

Have fun with it. That's what this hobby is all about.

The state and local authorities do have the right to verify that you are within legal federal guidelines.

It is time for you independent cusses to start toeing
the line. Just shut up (you have the right to remain silent, USE IT), say "Yes, sir", "NO, sir" and do as you are told.

And that is proper procedure. The local police to have the right to verify that you are within federal guidelines. That may mean that you will have to hire an attorney to settle things. But then if you can not afford attorneys then you should not be in the hobby.

If you can not afford to have attorneys then you really should not be in either the radio hobby or in the shooting hobbies. Modern America requires that you have an attorney for everything you do.

And the cops do not hassle decent people, especially if they know them. What cops go after are those who look like they are trouble makers.

Drive a decent, newer car but not too expensive.
Dress well, a bit conservative. Wear short hair and avoid the hillbilly beard look. Learn to speak as if you were college educated. Do that and the cops generally leave you alone.

Which was fuffilled when the ham license was produced. If Buford T. Justice then proceeded to confiscate equipment & further harass a licensed ham, him and his department should have legal action taken against them for harassment, unlawful detainment, and false arrest.

Shouldn't be a problem around here; KDTN ch 2 is educational

Sorry but modern America has become rather expensive place to live. Part of that is that we settle all disputes in court.

Plus, since Sept. 11th, there has been less willingness to put with "redneck" attitudes.
Or anyone with any type of attitude. If you will not "play nice", the cops will find a criminal charge to stick you with. Something that will put you away for a few years.

When you deal with police, all they want to hear is "Yes, sir", "No, sir". No arguments about your "rights". Get mouthy with them and you might lose a few teeth and do a night in jail then be charged with interference of the duties of an law enforcement official.

It is much better to be known among the police
as a good guy. That takes effort. Join the FOP.
Work in Emergency Management. Take time to say hi to cops, let them know who you are.

Remember, the turn over in law enforcement is high. The average cop lasts about 5 years. So you constantly have new guys on the force. And they do not have a clue who you are. So the average newbie will want to be a bit gung ho. Put up with him, humor him. DO NOT argue with him. He WILL win.

I know that this is a pain in the ass, but this is modern America. No one knows anyone else.

Are you an attorney? My attorneys say differently. He does have the right to stop you and verify that you are legal. He can stop you to just check out the fact that your car is working condition. He can stop you to see if you are drunk. And he can stop you to see if you have the proper license to operate a radio.

Local cops do have the right to enforce federal laws.

So what? Why does all that force them to be rude?...
The few times I've walked in there, they weren't exactly "manning the phones"..
They were sitting in the back (of the showroom) talking to each other, reading mags, or whatever.. Not taking phone-orders, or anything else which they'd be loosing $$ on by taking the time to wait on me properly...

Guys, the phones make those people more money than any number of walk-ins ever will. The phone orders are their bread and butter. They stay alive by doing volume. No volume, no store. Walk-ins are a PITA. Be glad they are doing you a favor by leaving their door unlocked and save the high expectations for someone that relies on tips for their living.

TT did not create the current system of selling amateur radio equipment. Their distributors did. Blame the distributors if you want to give someone a hard time, but be prepared to pay a lot more for your goodies should they come around to seeing it your way.

I agree totally W6DKN, I am sure there a few cops around the country who get over zealous over some things, but do these people honestly think a LEO wants to lose his job over harrasing a Ham or Cb operator. You have got to be kidding me, most police for starters have Mobile Video Recorders in their cars which records the auido and video from a traffic stop. These same cops are out there risking there lives so you can live a safe life, now there out here picking on radio operators etc. I don't know about the rest of you guys but where i am at the cops have more important things to do and when called upon to invesitgate a CB/rfi complaint I am sure they will do what they are trained to do. Before all this can happen towns/States must enacted ordinances etc for the cops to enforce along with these ordinances comes a set of guidelines a SOP(Standard Operating Procedure) must be followed, they will be trained in what to look for, if needed or they may call an expert in to help. You guys are acting like they will send these cops out tearing cars apart without any training in what to look for. Many Leo's are Hams what are you gonna lie to them about? Before a cop uses a gun he is trained with it, before he uses a radar he is trained in its use and the principles of operation, before he goes after gang members he is familiar with there "colors" tatoos, etc. Why will this be any different?
I can see the headlines now.

Rouge Cop Suspended with out pay for false arrest of a suspected "freebander" who had a rci 2950 hidden under his seat along with a Palomar 250. After an investigation was held the cop has been suspended indefinitely since the radio did not have a mike and the operator said he was only listening officer and wasn't able to transmit. But a further review of the suspects vehicle and a power mike turned up in the glove compartment. This is still under investigation, they are going to have an expert come in and check the radio with a Spectro- Goinometer this device will tell when the radio was last keyed and on what frequency.... Stay tuned for details...

Who says that he would "arrest". What the normal procedure would be is to take the equipment, issue a court citation then let the courts and the attorneys settle it out.

This is often what happens when the cop is not totally familiar with the law or the ham does not have his license on him.

What you should not do is argue as you are not going to win. The street is not the place to settle such issues, the courts are. And no cop is going to let you get out of control and argue with him. He will call back up and arrest you for resisting law enforcement (non compliance is a crime). You may get the radio back but you will pay a fine for being a jerk.

EXCEPT in the case of unlicensed/CB operation, of which the FCC has granted enforcement authority to local agencies. This is the simple concept that many are failing to realize.

Case number, court docket, disposition ? How about something that can be researched to determine the actual facts surrounding the incident? For all I know, this was a juvenile out after curfew, drinking a beer, with a can of spray paint next to a brick wall... :>)

I realize it perfectly. I also realize that most LEOs will err on the side of "revenue enhancement" and use their newfound authority to harass LEGAL, LICENSED radio operators.

Wait and see. Anyone want to venture a guess as to how long it will be before we read in QST about the first ham being falsely arrested and having his equipment wrongfully confiscated because of this?

I'm not a lawyer. I don't carry around specific court docket numbers in my head. But this case is well-known and documented. I believe the ARRL had to intervene on the boy's behalf, threatening legal action, in order to get his wrongfully-confiscated radio returned to him.

Would you at least have his name, call sign, or some reference to this "documentation" that one could gain access to? I am really just curious to see exactly what the circumstances were surrounding the incident. Having been a former police officer, my guess is that there was more to the story than just the possession of an HT, that got the kid arrested... (there usually is)

From the ARRL web:

FCC Focusing on Role of Former Licensee as Contest Op

NEWINGTON, CT, Dec 5, 2001--The FCC is looking into whether a South Carolina amateur broke any rules when he let former licensee Herb Schoenbohm, ex-KV4FZ, operate during a recent contest. Stephen S. Reichlyn, AA4V, rented and operated from Schoenbohm's station in the US Virgin Islands as AA4V/KP2 during the CQ World Wide SSB Contest the weekend of October 27-28.
After the FCC was alerted to the operation, Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth wrote Reichlyn on November 13. He requested further information on the role of the "former licensee" whose location and equipment Reichlyn had used. Although the letter did not mention Schoenbohm by name, Hollingsworth subsequently confirmed to the ARRL that Schoenbohm was, indeed, the "former licensee" in question.
Following a legal odyssey that lasted more than five years and ended at the doorstep of the US Supreme Court, the FCC was successful last year in its efforts to deny Schoenbohm's Amateur Radio license renewal application. The FCC had turned down Schoenbohm's application citing his 1992 felony conviction on federal fraud charges and on character issues. His interim operating authority expired earlier this year.

Hollingsworth's letter was prompted by an e-mail said to have been authored by Reichlyn that outlined Schoenbohm's role. The information in the e-mail--forwarded to the FCC by another amateur--suggested that Reichlyn may have let Schoenbohm operate while Reichlyn was absent or asleep and in violation of FCC rules governing third-party communications.
FCC rules consider an unlicensed individual who communicates via Amateur Radio to be a third party and require that a licensed control operator be present at the control point, "continuously monitoring and supervising the third party's participation." Such a third party also may not exchange messages with stations in countries with which the US does not have a third-party traffic agreement. That list includes the UK and most of Europe.
The FCC also may have to consider how its refusal to renew Schoenbohm's license affects his legal status as a third party. An individual whose license was revoked or suspended or surrendered for cancellation following revocation, suspension or fine--or who is under a cease-and-desist order relating to amateur operation--may not serve as a third party at an Amateur Radio station.

In his November 13 letter, Hollingsworth asked Reichlyn to list specific operating times and operators, to describe his "exact location" during times AA4V/KP2 was on the air and to detail when he was asleep while others operated. Hollingsworth also asked for a copy of the AA4V/KP2 contest log and for records of any other transmissions made as AA4V/KP2 between October 1 and November 5.

Reichlyn responded November 18 with a five-page explanation and more than 150 log pages of his contest and non-contest operation from the US Virgin Islands this fall. The FCC provided copies of Reichlyn's letter and some of the log pages to the ARRL at the League's request.
Reichlyn confirmed that he had rented Schoenbohm's station for the event and that he and another operator planned to travel to the US Virgin Islands to participate in the contest. When the other operator had to back out at the last minute, Reichlyn opted to attempt a solo operation. During the contest, however, he asked Schoenbohm to fill in briefly on two occasions, Reichlyn said--for about an hour and a half on October 27 and again the next day for about a half hour. He said Schoenbohm "was fully supervised by me as I was resting in the same room" on both occasions.

Reichlyn said Schoenbohm agreed "reluctantly" to spell him when he was not feeling well and on the second occasion while he "ate and rested." He said no one but he and Schoenbohm operated during the event, and that, to his knowledge, Schoenbohm never used the station without his supervision and oversight.

Reichlyn said he "certainly would not have asked him [Schoenbohm] to help me" if he had any reason to believe it might violate FCC rules. He also pointed out that Schoenbohm would not be likely to risk any violations himself since he had taken an Amateur Radio exam since losing his license and was "awaiting a favorable ruling on his license application" from the FCC. Schoenbohm vowed last year to return to Amateur Radio. Hollingsworth confirmed that Schoenbohm's license application is pending within the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau.
"It is now obvious to me that perhaps my choice of using Mr. Schoenbohm as a relief operator was poor but nonetheless, I would not have knowingly jeopardized my license to achieve a higher score in a radio contest or for any other reason."
Reichlyn, who said he's been licensed since 1967, told Hollingsworth that he would cooperate with the FCC in resolving the investigation. Hollingsworth told the ARRL that the case remains open and the inquiry continues.

---------- end bulletin ----------

As far as I am concerned this whole thing stinks on ice and Herbie is the smelly fish! There is no doubt in my mind that Herbie used this guy Reichlyn to do an "end run" to get back on the air to stir up shit. That's what Herb knows best how to do you know!

But in some ways I'd have to argue that you are nearly as bad. I'd make that statement based upon some of the foul comments you've made about him. If he is talking bad about you then just walk away, ignore him. In the meantime, flaming away just puts a bad light upon you and draws into question your motives/ethics.

Not only that, but also one has to consider the "proof" provided lacking sufficient impetus to drive such serious actions. If said data is true then one must back it with more solid evidence. How about tape recordings of on-air violations.

Incidentally, I don't recall anything in Part 97 discussing the use of vulgarity, etc, in this medium (internet, usenet, etc).

I don't know who PKB is, but unless it's a conviction that's a matter of public record, you could be held libel for calling someone a child molester. However, the fact that you exhibit the intelligence of a garden slug, I doubt that you'd stand a chance. I suggest that you find a man that has a high sperm count and ask him to fuck you in the ear, because you need some brains. Maybe then you'll be able to post something that is above that of a suttering mongoloid.

Just how many different LEGAL rigs are there anyway? Must be hundreds since CBs have been made for years by many diffenernt companies. Many are out of buisness. My point is that there isn't any COMPLETE list of "legal" CB rigs to begin with.

>As far as other services, there's only one mobile FRS rig that I'm

You do NOT need a license to have a rig that is legal for other services. Many ham rigs, especially older ones, can broadcast on CB frequencies without ANY mods at all. Owning one is neither illegal, nor is it prima facia evidence of any illegal operation.

>OTOH, if you're using an export CB as your mobile 10m rig, I'd >recommend having a copy of the applicable sections of Part 97 in the

See the problem? Odds are the ordinance (assuming it is true) is NOT targeted at mobile ops at all, but rather the illegal home illegal CB operator...AND that is where the access issue runs up against the search warrant issue, etc.

All not relavant since the rules/laws for possession of radios is not at all similar. Indeed, no state has a law that requires having a license to have any of the CB radios or FRS radios. A few (less than 10) states prohibit having a radio receiver capable of receieving police (public frequencies) in the car.

Not likly, too expensive and very little payback

Until the FCC exempted ham transcievers, there were a handful of states where that could and did happen...with both mobile rigs and HTs in some cases. NJ changed its own law several years before preemption by the FCC. Once the law was changed, one case that had been pending against a NJ ham was dropped.

You make the case for exactly why the LEOs don't need or want to get involved in FCC matters.

Cops that aren't familiar with particular laws don't usually bother trying to enforce them.

No one is suggesting such resistance. The issue is that there is no complete body of information that would ever "guarantee" proper enfocement because there are just too manny types of legal radios out there now.
The cops would rather write 5 speeding tickets than deal with one convuluted "illegal" radio summons.

What he is saying is correct. Most police officers (while in their heart they think that what they are doing is the right thing) won't have the proper training for such an enforcement. Shooting a gun can remove a life, but taking ones radio equipment is merely an inconvenience to someone.
NEVER argue with a cop, as a friend that is one says, "I'm God right then, are you going to tell me I'm wrong?" He's right, no matter what you say to him, if his mind is set, he will do what he thinks is right.

Good god, I've never heard such whining, paranoia, and blatant attempts at stampeding hams than I've heard from some of the more illegally-minded CBers in this thread.

The Tacoma ordinance was passed as a response to out-of-control outlaw CBers using huge illegal amplifiers causing consumer interference complaints. The FCC does not have a staff of 300,000 on the job so the local LEO's are forced to deal with it. (Don't forget WHO caused this situation to come about. Not the FCC. Not the cops. The outlaw CBers did. Without THEIR shenanigans there would BE no Tacoma Ordinance)

Somehow this has situation been "spun" into lots of wild predictions about pot-bellied cops hassling licensed amateurs about their mobile rigs.

If the cops in your area are as corrupt and dumb as some are saying (can't recognize one radio from another, can't recognize an amp, can't tell a ham license from a fishing license), then believe me, you got troubles that go FAR beyond radio enforcement. I'd move to another town.

Original story published in the April 2000 issue of Sporadic Waves

DX Gone Crazy? International DX on the eleven meter free-band is there for the taking just about everyday on sideband. AM is also giving up rare contacts. But one of the better known frequencies for international DX contacts, 27.555 USB, once a jewel of pleasant listening and international contacts, has unfortunately deteriorated rapidly over the last few months, morphing itself into a vile cesspool, spewing forth all it's bile and waste, due to a small, intellectually-challenged, rapid group of angry, self-loathing and pathetic operators who have taken it upon themselves to take up a permanent-like residential status there, and in the process, completely abdicated any civil, polite conversation.

27.555 has long been an international world wide contact frequency. Standard protocol has always dictated one makes a contact and QSY's to another frequency for their conversation, thus leaving the call frequency open at all times for contacts. This small but nefarious group is attempting to jam, interfere, and prevent any DX contacts from being made on frequency. In case you haven't listened in on 555 as of late, the frequency has literally become a key down fest with language that one would be embarrassed to hear in the company of children, while only those blowing ridiculous amounts of power are being heard. Some incredibly rare and difficult DX contacts have effectively been nullified because so many operators are choosing to fight fire with fire....in other words, many are pumping up their wattage rather than surrender the frequency. While I can somewhat empathize with the operators who are attempting to defend this bit of DX space, especially the ones who are located outside of the U.S. and are permitted to transmit there, I can't seem to shake the old adage that keeps playing in my mind, "If you are not part of the solution, you are part of the problem."

Power wars are not going to solve anything. The frequency has so much trash on it that it is already beginning to sound like the frequencies many have attempted to elude. While 27.555 used to be an everyday stop during my channel surfing activities, it no longer is. Oh, I occasionally flip there in hopes that the channel may somehow have become civilized again, but as soon as I hear the hate and discontent, I no longer have the patience to listen for a far off exotic station just to have them get keyed on as they give the frequency they are QSYing to. It is easier to change the frequency.

Other operators around the world are also gravitating to nearby and other frequencies. In the last 2 weeks, I have heard France, Italy, Germany, the U.K., and Holland comment on what a sad state 27.555 has become due to the selfish and inconsiderate actions of a few. 27.415 to 27.595 is yielding great DX. It appears that operators are still making their contacts, they are just working a little harder to get them. Instead of relying strictly on 555, many long time ops who USED to utilize that frequency exclusively are found hovering close by. Since January, I have counted no less than 30 countries on frequencies close to 555. While 38 LSB(27.385) continues to be a productive DX channel, it mirrors 555 in language, harassment and abuse. Not surprisingly, the perpetrators on 38 claim the same geographical locale as the offenders on 555, which is more than likely true, as I noticed that when the skip conditions begin to fade from the blathering idiots on 555, the same occurs on 38.

The normal procedure, when a police officer is uncertain of a law, is to assume that the civilian is in the wrong. As one cop told me, you can always unarrest a guy. If he acts like a jerk, well then "everyone is a sinner, it is just a matter of finding the right sin".

Cops do survive doing this. Often they are backed up by the courts. Now you might live in small town where everyone knows each other. But in medium to large communities, the cops do not know everyone.
Unless you are very well politically connected,
you will not get the cop in trouble.

You are correct, in part. This did come about because of out of control "outlaw CBers". And for the most part the cops will not hassle lawfully licensed hams.

However, and this goes for every community,
if the cop does stop you and does ask about your radios then he might assume that you are there to interfere with him. Newbie cops can be a bit paranoid. They do not like any civilian who acts out of the normal. And radio nuts are like gun nuts, not normal. They have a passion for their hobbies.

It is not that the cops are corrupt. It is that they are fearful. Too many lose cannons in society.
Too many drug dealers, terrorists, and just pain old farts with big mouths. Too many guys who see themselves above the law.

All it takes is one shooting, like the one up in Goshen last night, and every cop within 200 miles is on high alert. Given what happened on Sept. 11th, they are now looking for those who might be terrorists. And a car full of ham gear looks very suspicious. Given that many hams are gun owners as well, and you might have a young cop who is going to over react.

Just look at Cincinnati. They take young men from the suburbs who have been told all their lives to stay out of certain neighborhoods, especially after dark and make them cops. Then their first assignment is those exact neighborhoods.
Guess what? You have a fearful, inexperienced cop in a place where he is totally out of his league. Guess what happens? He winds up over reacting and shooting some young black guy. Which results in a riot as it did last spring.

Guys, you live in a too sheltered life.

They may be working class. In my state, cops are being hired with degrees especially in the big cities.

But cops do profile. College educated types are often given a break, if they do not talk back.

Think about it, blacks are profiled all the time.
As are folks with long, dirty hair or beards.

It does happen. And cops are going to be on edge with the aftermath of Sept. 11th. A ham, with a car full of radios, does look like a terrorist. Given that hams are often gun owners, and you might have a gung ho young cop who wants to make a name for himself.

Besides profiling has been going on with blacks for sometime now. It is really bad on the east coast, from Boston right down to Florida. The cop does not know you. For all he knows, you are a trouble maker. Shooting your mouth off just makes it worst.

And remember, gun owners have had to deal with this for some time now.

5533. ENFORCEMENT: AMATEUR RADIO ROAD RAGE MUST STOP

From Amateur Radio Newsline <http://www.arnewsline.org>
ENFORCEMENT: AMATEUR RADIO ROAD RAGE MUST STOP

The FCC's chief ham radio rules enforcer has told those attending the Ft. Wayne Indiana Hamfest that the time for on the air arguments has come to an end. Riley Hollingsworth, the FCC's Special Counsel for Amateur Radio enforcement told the forum that Amateur Radio road rage must stop now and that the bickering on our frequencies can do nothing but hurt Amateur Radio in the long run.

Hollingsworth also says its time for more hams to get involved in public service. Jack Parker, W8ISH, of Amateur News Weekly, has that part of the story:

"Hollingsworth says that it is now time for hams to use frequencies responsibly. He adds that now, more than ever, is the best time for all

Amateur Radio groups to seek out and establish working relationships with local emergency response agencies.

Since September 11th, Amateur Radio and its potential has moved into a prominent position on the national front. But he stresses that we must move quickly at a local level to establish our place in the overall emergency response plan.

Reporting from the Ft. Wayne Hamfest, for amateur News Weekly, I'm Jack Parker, W8ISH."

Hollingsworth's views are echoed by many who are already involved in organizing ham radio emergency communications on a local level. They say you can never have to many well trained volunteers. (Amateur News Weekly)

What have in amateur radio is a bunch of old farts who are grouchy as hell. Nothing worst than someone old enough to know better who acts like he is still in junior high!

First off, you would not win. They would find other things to charge you with. One cop stopped an local attorney who made a fuss.
They found all sorts of things to charge him with.

It is worst in LA or NYC but all

How does the cop know that you are not

No they will not. Why? Because gun owners already have to put up with this type of enforcement.
And look at how blacks are profiled for "driving while

And how does that young cop know that you are not some type of terrorist? All those radios could be used to spy on the police so that you can try to overthrow the US government.

That is how young cops think. It is worst in LA or NYC, but it happens everywhere.

Look at how blacks are profiled. It seems that "driving while black" is a crime in many big cities.

Maybe what we need to do is register your radios with the local police. After all, radio transmitters could be used in espionage or terrorism. How do the police know that you are not some right wing nut planning to overthrow the government?

Or a left wing ecco terrorist? Or just an old fart with too much attitude?

And probable cause can be manufactured.

I suppose next you'll tell us the police are "racially profiling" the millions of Mexicans they arrest near our southern border, due to their being in this country illegally.

Shame on those cops! They should be looking for blonde-haired Swedes instead.

While we're at it, let's be sure we also register our firearms. Then, when the time for confiscation comes, it will be more convenient for the police...since they will be able to take our guns and our radios at the same time.

give you a chance. He does not have to.

A few $10,000 fines and most of these assholes will be off the air. Or in jail.

The point being is that this is how cops operate. And we had a stock broker shot in his own home here by the police last May. He had come home drunk and had left his car (and keys) at the bar.
Broke into his house. A neighbor noticed and called the police. The cops showed up, woke him up. He came up with a knife and they shot him. Big stink.

That could just as easily happen to you if you talk back.

$10,000 dollar NALs may well be part of the problem. If there is a choice, I would think most people would give another individual a second (or third or fourth) chance rather than hitting them with a $10,000 fine. What we need are some $100 or $200 fines for offenders with no serious previous records. Fines that, like traffic fines, would most likely not be forgiven. Some sort of progressive type fines. Even drunk drivers get a relatively 'modest' fine for first time offenders (like $500 to $1000 fine, plus lawyer costs, plus the fact their insurance will double for 10 years). After that, jail is a reality - as it should be. Once a pattern develops and a few low level fines are levied, once that big NAL hits, it is time to NOT forgive and forget. Just like the banks, take the house. Unfortunately, the FCC is being taken as a joke. Fact is, we NEED some sort of frequency allocating/enforcement organization so all can share the spectrum equitably.

The numbers speak for themselves. Look at arrest and prison records in any area where there is a substantial black population. You will notice that the percentage of blacks incarcerated FAR exceeds their percentage of the general population.

Now, I suppose you're going to tell me this is only because the system is "racist", right?

An interesting sidenote here: were he to do the same thing today, his actions would likely be legal.

Most McDonalds drive-thrus use 154.570 or 154.600 for the clerk's transmit frequency. Under the new MURS service, both of these frequencies are now license-free, with up to 2 watts of power and CTCSS tones.

I don't know about the Radio Shack stores in Texas, but the Radio Shack.Com in my area sells Amphonol pl-259 silver connectors. They might cost a buck or so more, but they do appreciate me visiting their store.

Even the local Ham Radio Outlet on the other side of Phoenix from me is happy to help me when I walk into their store. Even visiting the HRO store in San Diego, the manager there was great to talk with, even though I couldn't find a thing I needed that day.

But if the people at TT like having the personality of a door knob..... so be it.

Well, your position is stupid and erroneous. The "horse" obviously ain't dead, and this is the type of thing that can and may well affect amateur radio operators for decades to come. It's public record; it's a public activity; and the amateur radio public has every right, maybe even an obligation, to discuss it. Hopefully the discussion will focus on issues rather than personalities, but it is still a valid topic.

Anything is possible. Look at 09-11-01.

Can you cite any specific references or are you speaking as a young cop? or just talking out your backside.

Of course they are never doing anything wrong. The blacks are profiled because it has been constantly shown they commit more crimes as a race. Cops profile people everyday ...criminals...this is what they are trained to do. Perhaps you had better take a look at the statistics of the black population and there driving skills. If you were a cop and a car with 4 Catholic nuns or a car with 4 young black men drove by who would you think would draw attention to the police. Which car would the cop have a better chance of finding something illegal?
Past statistics show of course the young black males. Is that profiling I guess you could call it that. Lets use the same example with a car load of Mexicans and a car load of girls from a nearby college. Who would you pull over if you were a cop. The Mexicans because statistics show they are more likely to be illegal and not possess a drivers license. Is that profiling no that called doing your job. Any one with a towel on there head or of Middle east decent is getting stopped going in and out of NYC is that profiling?

Look it is worst in places like LA or NYC.
In Chicago they have shot a number of unarmed individuals. And that is a very liberal city ran by democrats. In fact the more liberal the community, the more likely that you will have cops who are heavy handed.

My guess is that you live a fairly sheltered life.

What is your beef with "young cops" Young cops are more in tuned to electronics etc than the old cops. Cops use 2 to 3 different radios, walkie talkies and yes even scanners in the cars radios so they are not exactly foreign to them

Blame the U S Attorneys' offices who will not start forced collection action on agency administrative forfeitures (the things that the FCC issues, for example) unless they are in the vicinity of $10K or more. So the rule is - levy the legal maximum and plea bargain down.

What we need is better back-up of FCC actions by the US Attorneys'

A lot of these guys go off to Carribean spas for dx contest weekends simply to roll up huge scores, my own club usually fields several of 'em per contest. It's a helluva lot easier to put an existing pile of hardware on the air than it is to do a from-scratch dxpedition, path of least resistance, etc. This guy Reichlyn oughta known better than to latch up with Herbie just to save the effort of transporting and putting together a station. Herby is nothing but trouble, ya stay away from those types. Reichlyn obviously used some bad judgement in the company he keeps but if in fact he did supervise all of Herby's operations the FCC has no squawk on him. And you can bet that there is no way Riley is ever gonna determine with any certainty that Reichlyn

I saw it as well. I didn't see any reason to take note of his call at the time, but it WAS in QST. And according to the article, he was hassled by the cops and had his "scanner" confiscated. Once it was determined that he was a licensed ham, the radio was returned (or replaced, I forget which).
Perhaps you can search the QST archives for the exact story. While you say it won't be a problem from your perspective as a former cop, it WILL become a problem for the licensed ham who happens to run into Sgt. Rambo of Podunk County. It certainly becomes personal then. You see, I have run into those kinds more than once even when I hadn't done anythng to attract their attention. One example: as a member of the USAF Auxiliary, Civil Air Patrol, I once was called away from my lunch to respond to a light aircraft crash south of the local airport. Air crashes are normally the purvey of USAF, CAP, and then NTSB investigators. When I arrived at the scene, having been appointed on scene commander by the NC Wing Incident Commander, I had orders to deactivate the ELT (the emergency locator transmitter). On scene was a young NCHP trooper who was busy shooing everyone away and making damn sure everybody knew HE was in charge.
I was in uniform, and I crossed the tape to turn off the ELT (FAA wanted it deactivated and such were my orders). After all, by virtue of being appointed at the state level the scene was MINE, not his. This trooper, all jut-jaw and Marine OOORAH, came over to me and told me to get the hell out of there. I attempted to explain my purpose and present my credentials whereupon he makes certain everybody on scene hears him tell me to leave the scene or be arrested. OOOOOO-KAY! (Under my breath, muttering all the while, " you a-hole SOB, I'll fix you, you stupid bastard"). I returned to my car, got on the HF radio and called the state ES coordinator and informed him of the incident. It didn't take long for the trooper's loudspeaker to blare out a call.
(edited for brevity) "Trooper ------, you have a young 1st Lt there on scene, right? 10-4. You WILL allow LT. ------- to deactivate the ELT AND take command of the scene as well! You WILL cooperate with this officer and carry out whatever tasks he assigns you." All well and good, except for him: All of the people that he strutted before and threatened me in front of heard this radio call! LOL! There was more than one snicker and grin among the group.

The trooper stared daggers at me, and I just smirked at him and assigned him to traffic control and told him I would handle the crash scene. Every now and again, I would mock his mannerisms behind his back to peals of laughter amongst those of us who were guarding the crash itself.
Yes, he deserved it, he ASKED for it, and he GOT it. He didn't handle being taken down a peg well at all! LOL!

Thankfully, such officers are few and far between, and I do, indeed, respect law enforcement officers--at least those who conduct themselves in a professional manner. I have many friends in law enforcement, but I have also run into a few that I would like to see fired. Some of them have been fired---like the SC state trooper who was caught on his own camera screaming obscenities at a lady while dragging her forcefully out of her car.

It's all good-----except for the poor ham who is doing what he is licensed to do and happens to run into one of those sturmgruppenfuhreren with an IQ of 70 and a head full of his authority.

Aaron, is there truly a new law in Tacoma? No one has actually found one to exist.

Additionally, I agree that the law, if it exists, is targeted at illegal high power CB ops...from home locations...NOT from cars.
The high power home illegals are the ones that cause constant ongoing interference. No one much cares about an illegal power amp in an 18 wheeler rolling down I-5.

I can understand warnings for spurious emissions, accidental out-of-band, etc. However, he's sending out multiple warnings on blatantly intentional violations. Sure, there's the occasional accidental oprofanity when someone has a near miss on the highway, and sometimes people honestly forget to switch the VOX off before they crank up the stereo, but http://www.arrl.org/news/enforcement_logs/shows several cases where there can hardly be any doubt that the violation was not an accident.

$10k is the maximum. They can reduce it when the circumstances warrant. However, I do agree that there should be an established

Reichlyn is really one of Herbie's closet butt-buddies or he genuinely was ignorant about fuzzy zipper's sorrid past on ham radio. I find it very hard to believe that one could be a ham since the late 60's, and yet not be in the ham bands on a near-continous basis since 1978, which is as far back as my knowledge of the 8-ball goes.

And it was AMP who suggested making a midnight call to tear down towers and antennas. Just goes to show, you put a CB'er on Ham Radio and he's still a CB'er.

both having received letters of greeting from Riley Hollingsworth. If Riley'd make AMP retest as he did Roger, they'd almost be twins!

Oh don't worry about Aaron, Bill.
You have just been introduced to one of the three rec.radio.cb trolls. He claims to not even be a cb'er or ham, but touts the agenda of a Crusade to rid the airwaves of export radio's and amps via the only source he knows.....
Rec.Radio.CB.
He even tries to quell free speech, just discussing amps or export radios, he will label you a federal criminal. If you have your picture taken along side an export radio or amp, he will label you a federal criminal. Even if you said to have used one, but are not now or plan to in the future
he will label you a criminal.
Yes a true believer in wiping out the worlds supply of export radios and linears, just by trolling Rec.Radio.Cb.

And I will not argue with him on the scene. If he ignores my license, fails to find out, or know, the procedure I will see the SOB in court IF he takes my equipment. He WILL get in trouble because part of that equipment was purchased with Department of Defense funds. He damn well better produce it in the same condition it was in prior to confiscation or he will answer to someone lots more "connected" than me. Don't tell me a cop is above the law he is sworn to enforce and, therefore, I "can't" get him in trouble for falsely taking private property because he ":thinks" the civilian is wrong.

I don't get into arguments with cops--I know better. But you better believe that whatever legal avenues I have against a Rambo cop, I WILL use them. Hey, I am a vindictive person, what can I say? LOL!

Why would you think that that's spam? The definition of spam, as I remember it, is someone advertising something that's not appropriate. Now, if I thought I could offer something to someone that they were griping about from others, I'd probably go ahead and offer too. This guy was certainly being honest, saying that he probably wasn't the cheapest, so I don't think he was lieing. Maybe you should rethink your definition of spam?

"Spam" is simply uninvited solicitation thru email or postings...
If he wants to advertise, take it to the web where he can register his website with search-engines...
And WTF would you do if everyone who could fit your definition of non-spammer started.. advertising their biz here? Never seen it happen in other ng's, huh?... I sure have... MOST spamm, err.. good-ol' boys (or

Yes, after Smiley Riley generates a mountain of worthless paper to the perp, Smiley will stamp his feet and jump up and down.
Brings to mind a current open case in the Atlanta area. The perp has a FCC enforcement record dating back to the late 70s on CB.
In 1990, the perp went world wide with a ham license. He immediately came to the attention of FCC enforcement and has ever since been collecting violation notices from the FCC, except for the times he's been incarcerated. He responds to all violation notices with a simple,
"not me, fake tapes, someone else, I am being picked on unfairly, etc.....ad nauseam." An engineer at Powder Springs said when they closed the monitoring station, they forwarded a paper file on the guy that was almost 12 inches thick! Smiley Riley's credibility in this case is seriously questioned. A Congressional Aide looked at the case and had some specific comments about FCC inaction, saying the case was going to provide some good ammo when the FCC comes begging Congress for this and that.

PA-SitRep is a free, 100% non-commercial, nonprofit, e-mail list and web site that I run at my personal expense..

The PA-SitRep emergency traffic e-mail list is a tool that will enable you to monitor and report on major emergency situations throughout the State of Pennsylvania including weather emergencies, natural disasters, environmental disasters, civil disturbances and threats of terrorism, major fires, manhunts, and Amateur Radio Emergency Net activations.

The PA-SitRep message posting protocol caters to the users of text messaging capable digital cell phones as well as users of regular internet e-mail. Messages posted to the list may be recieved with just about any digital cell phone which allows PA-SitRep subscribers to keep up do date with MAJOR emergency situation reports posted to the list while mobile or away from other news sources such as TV or radio.

Subscribers are encouraged to utilize their home, work and cell phone e-mail addresses for receiving messages from the PA-SitRep e-mail list.
Subscribers are also encouraged to post major emergency situation reports that directly relate to Pennsylvania, but posts must consist of confirmed and accurate information.

Message volume on PA-SitRep is EXTREMELY low and users may subscribe and unsubscribe at any time.

If you'd like to subscribe, please visit the following address:

And N4CND has drove by AMP's house doing stuff as well. From the way

I'm a Canadian retired old fart who has taken up the hobby again after a lapse of 25 years. I'm brushing up on my CW speed (currently at 12wpm) and haven't got on the air yet. Maybe you can help me with a few questions.

1) 25 years ago I belonged to the ARRL and they handled my qsl cards. I sent them my outgoing cards in an envelope and they passed them on. I got incoming qsl cards mailed to me in a self addressed stamped envelope which I had provided. On the ARRL website, I get the impression that they will not handle the outgoing cards if you are Canadian. To get the outgoing facility, one must join a Canadian club (RAC).
Can anyone enlighten me as to the correct procedure for Canadian hams?

2) I made a QRP CW tranceiver kit called an SW20+ which I bought on the net from Small Wonder Labs. During my qso's, how do I describe my rig? Is it a sw20 kit, home brew or just an SW20?

3) What is the proper procedure for using an RIT?

Tnx

Riley operated for about an hour today on 14313, around 11:30 a.m. EST, as all the 313 regulars lined up for a chance to kiss the sheriff's butt.

Public relations? Hardly. Think again. Bureaucrats work on Saturdays, only for special reasons.

As each 313 regular checked in, an employee in Columbia, MD, sat in a quiet room, clicking a mouse a few times as each regular checked in. Inside of less than 60 mins., government data bases were fed SIT (Special Identification Techniques) data on approximately 30 stations who are 313 regulars. New voice samples, bearing & range, Signature Analysis Data for Radio Fingerprinting, and other data now reside in a government data base.

Looks like the BARFies will be jamming at their own risk.

Yes Bill just do a look up on Google of Landshark, or The Landshark, you will see he has trolled rec.radio.cb for the past 4-5 years, he has changed his habits this past month for fear of being turned into his ISP. Something he is fond of doing to other people but to no avail. But don't take my word for it like I said Google will reveal all you need to know abnout this guy. BTW, I am supposed to be kill filed from this guy and he still responds to my posts what does that tell you he wants to engage in conversation. He is really really mad about the posts he made in alt.sex... he made these posts a few years back and didn't know he would run into a buzzsaw to call him on it. I say hey fine If your into hooking up with Transsexuals go fo it, but don't be mad when you get caught. True Story!

W4AMP is a loser. A bottom feeder. It will not take long before everybody realizes it. Pretty soon he will stab his friends in the back because that is what he always does. He gets drunk, opens his lying mouth, and makes enemies. Simple as that. It won't be long before he runs out of friends to stab.

Nobody ever said that commensurate ham radio QRM'ers were either intellegent or rocket scientists.
And you are correct about Columbia, Md. You can be sure that in 95% of the cases when K4ZDH is "in QSO" on a ham frequency, that the Computers and GPS Satellites are making a list and checking it twice. So all you knuckleheads who jam and carry on (..including the fruit cake who was QRM'ing 3.904, 3.910 and 3.914 last night for over an hour with digital sound bytes and synthesizer noise - who we know is in ---) are all blued, screwed and tatooed.

If you look at some of my posts on this newsgroup, you will discover that I have worked in the industry. Two friends of mine owned an internationally known 800 number and walk-in ham retail business. I worked full time in their commercial division and part time in the amateur division. I've had dinner with Icom, Yaesu, Kenwood reps and Mr. MFJ himself. I know a little bit about the industry. I wouldn't own a ham radio retail business because of my knowledge of the very low profit margins and the huge volumes of equipment that must be sold. The store I worked for was a single location.

The other stores you have mentioned are multiple store chains, with the exception of Texas Towers, another single store location. Since a reasonable profit is difficult to make unless one sells a terrific amount of product, I can understand Texas Towers inability to provide super detailed and gratifying in- store service, if such is, indeed, the case.

Just because you do not like a situation, does not mean that the situation is untrue. It is a cut-throat business with little room to err. The phones ARE the business and the walk-ins are a PITA unless you move tons of equipment. As I said, I did not create this business model, nor did TT. They are the victims of it, just as are their customers.

The owners have since sold their business to one of the chains that have been previously mentioned and have reinvested their money in financial areas that do not require that they work seven days a week and put up with the typical PITA ham crowd. They even smile once in a while now. Good for them.

milquetoast
milque.toast n [Caspar Milquetoast, comic strip character created by H. T. Webster d. 1952 Am. cartoonist] (1935): a timid, meek, or unassertive person.

I've learned that the greater a person's sense

My Uncle Bill Schuster, owned Warren Radio in Erie, Pennsylvania, and it was eventually a considerably larger multi-outlet operation in Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio. That level of the organization, under his dominion, produced one very firm observation about counter sales he shared with me more than once. (Grin) He also finished with a SUBSTANTIAL contribution to charitable efforts, and no distribution of any assets to anyone else in the family, thank you, for which our family is terribly proud. Take a walk through the Schuster Gallery at Gannon College or the Performing Arts Center there, the Erie Philharmonic, and countless other targets of his financial affection. Uncle Bill's remark, "Heck, I've gotten so much from Gannon I have to put it back!", was dead on. You have to put it back. You have to put it back.

Thus, I too ..

>I know a little bit about the industry. I wouldn't own a ham >radio retail business because of my knowledge of the very >low profit margins and the huge volumes of equipment that >must be sold. The store I worked for was a single location.

>Ed Cregger
>nm2k@arrl.net

share some of this knowledge and ... respect.

I worked within the store at this 50's and early 60's time frame. As well, my Grandafather Max was counter help in the Erie store for MANY years. He was the first person I'd ever met with tri-focal glasses! Had to have them to work with the tinsey details for parts work ... grin! Not bad for a man who came to the USA as an immigrant and whose first job was to PULL the fire engine, until they got horses for it, after which he was promoted to a pumper!

For what you say today of the below, Ed, is still today,

>Just because you do not like a situation, does not mean that >the situation is untrue. It is a cut-throat business with >little room to err. The phones ARE the business and the >walk-ins are a PITA unless you move tons of equipment. As I >said, I did not create this business model, nor did TT. They >are the victims of it, just as are their customers.
dead on.

Even back in the 1950-60's, I can't tell you HOW many times I have been chewed out, "MIKE! If you have to take more than ten minutes with a counter customer, we are BROKE! BROKE, Mike, BROKE! Same from my Granfather too, smile!"

The statistics on WALK-IN traffic, per the actual figures back in the 1950-60'ish arena were VERY specific! If a person who walks up to the counter takes more than TEN minutes to handle for a sale, you lose money on that sale. On average.

And, as a Novice in 1952 as WN5WQN, and at age 13, I couldn't, for the life of me, understand that, try as I might, about, in particular, the HAMS! Grin! It was too much fun to talk with them!

You see, it is our diversity as a group that makes us so intriquing as one, and to each of us within the group, is also our downfall as to profitability for those who supply us with the tools of our trade!

If WE were having to write checks or pay bills for the hourly time we spend at the target of our affection here, I betcha there'd be a somewhat different perspective about how WE shop and find favor or not with our suppliers! Heck, we get thousands of hours of service out of aa $500 rig, right? Chuckle!

But we don't write the checks for that! And further, very, very few of us ever wind up writing the checks and paying for a professional relationship with the field we, as amateur radio operators, are in. Thus we really never get to see the reason for what Uncle Bill and Grandpa kept telling me over and over again! That ten minutes used to be a pain to me, smile, but in a different way of looking at it! I was forever mad at having them cut me off from, taking time to ... Well you get the idea!

And of their point of view?

It took me a long, long time to ever get to understand that. And, now, I genuinely do understand both sides of the issue! Even at that time there was division within the professional house there! Per recall, a gentlemen by the name of Mace, split off from Warren Radio, those long and many years away, and took ... a rather substantial part of the ham radio business with him. But it too, I think, isn't strong even today, in these, the lowest level of profit margin operations, in the business. The competition is FIERCE and has VERY little bottom line margin.

You see, what we really need be thankful for, is that there still ARE the Texas Towers type of operations as well as the AEA's and all the rest. We are .. as a group, so fortunate to still have a CHOICE at all this. It takes all kinds of folks to both make us up, to deal with us. Each of us has a special unique part of us that forms our personalities and how we work with others. And they with us! There is plenty of room for all of us and, fortunately, the kind of relationship we each want in a vendor.

As you might note here ... Mikey is not part of the family electronics business either!

Huge grin!

Per Uncle, "I don't think that would ever work. You take too long with sales, Mike!" Yep! Takes all kinds doesn't it?

All this is kinda like the banker who buttonholed his account and said, "Do you know what you are doing? This is called kiting checks!" The client said, "Yes!" The banker then asked, "Well what are you going to do about it?"

The client said, "Find another bank!"

Happy holidays! Bigger toys for Bigger Boys and Girls!

Assuming your scenario...just how long would any one rig cause your residence any interference?

The issue is NOT mobil activity...the issue is the local neighbor running illegal/dirty amps on CB.

Bottom line on illegal mobiles is that no one will even try to police it...Tacoma law or not.

Keep it centered when calling somebody or calling a CQ. Use it to listen around your transmitting freq without changing the transmit

ALWAYS remember to re-center it when a qso is concluded.

I didn't say that you couldn't make money. I just said that you couldn't make "enough" money for the investment and effort required. Some people do better than others at the same venture. Perhaps your Uncle was in business during a different era? I too remember when everyone paid list price.
A shop could make a good living in those days.

Whatever, I'm glad he did well.

Roger is not here. It is Saturday night, so Roger is cruising with the Lavendar Lads, hitting all the pink bars and clubs.

5668. Why Roger is Mentally Challenged

Roger is like he is for many reasons. It would take a psychologist to list them all, but here are some educated guesses from an observer.

1. Roger's daddy either died or ran off while Roger was very young. Roger harbors a deep, resentful hatred toward men, especially authority figures since he grew up having nobody to play catch with. He may have had a step-daddy that also ran off before Roger reached his formative teens, thus doubling his anger.
2. Roger married young. He was looking for a mother figure. He was not good at making a marriage work because he was used to his mommy catering to his whims and wishes. The marriage did not work simply because no woman could quite measure up to his doting mommy. His wife packed up after realizing the futility of trying to compete with Roger's mommy and left. She has since remarried and is very happy. She has no use for Roger and rarely talks to him unless it is absolutely necessary.
3. Roger lives in a relatively small town and as such everybody knows everybody. Roger keeps up an outward appearance of being a "good boy" and he takes his mommy shopping and to church. Roger hates to do this, but he must keep up appearances.
4. Roger would love to lead a more adventurous life, but he cannot. He is stuck in small-town America with small-town gossips and he deeply resents every minute of it.
5. His anger grows day by day because he is still tied to the umbilical cord, and as much as he would like to go out on his own he has not the financial resources nor the gumption to do so.
6. He realizes that life is quickly passing him by, that he will never again be able to meet and marry a good woman, and that he is stuck forever in a backwater, nondescript village with nowhere to go.
7. Roger is frustrated. Roger is angry. Roger is borderline psychopathic, if he has not already crossed over.
8. Roger uses the newsgroups to vent his anger. Roger is akin to a "closet Kluxer" who must vent his spleen somewhere, someplace, and often.

Roger Wiseman is to be pitied.

Just regitering a website with a search engine isn't always the only best way to get the word out about a website, which he didn't actually post his.
Besides, it's not like he's mass-posting. I would hardly call a single post, nothing fancy, no MLM and nothing outright lieing (like most spam would).
Also, just because you say it's "spam" doesn't mean it's "spam". I mean, just because you don't want certain information doesn't mean the rest of us don't. You're quite cynical, IMHO.

This issue is this, Brucie. There are people that can't leave well enough alone. They can not stand the fact that Herb can get back on the air, even if it is to be in a contest. He was not bothering anybody. Who care anyway? Mr. Hollingsworth is a very corrupt man. He enforces the ham bands to what way his "masters" see fit. There have many people file complaints about QRM'ing of the Liberty Net, which go unanswered. But someone, who lost his ham ticket, by means that, in my opinion, were railroaded by a bunch of power-hungry and self-serving, garbage!

Herb gets on the air, just to get in a contest, and what happens? All hell breaks loose. It's a matter of Mr. Hollingsworth picking and choosing what rules get enforced and what should happen. As Hal Turner would suggest, Mr. Hollingsworth should resign in disgrace!

BWHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA...You are one dumbass.

Orasss the profanity on 3.901 spewer and AMP both live in Georgia.
Although I don't know why anybody would want to.
Or why anybody would want to check into 3.901, the trash frequency full of hypocrites and jammers. Yes, the so-called "goodfellows" jam and get on unidentified.

Ummmm...with an automobile or truck???? Not every body is like you and has automobiles that actually run, instead of up on blocks in front of their house.

Follow your own advice, fuckwit.

1) Sentences begin with Capital letters.
2) You missed placement of a comma.
3) Proper nouns are capitalized, as well.
4) You are an ill-educated fuckwit.

It's all an act. Spoke with him for 40 min a year or 2 ago and got him to admit that his whole motives are to stir up the shit.
Allegedly did it on CB and when he got enough heat from the 11 meter boys he moved on to ham radio. I get the feeling he has some mental health issues. Truly a sorry case to be pitied.

Just wondering... Why all the name calling? I guess the question isn't so much "why can't we all get along" as much as it should be "why can't we all grow up?"

I thought this was an amateur radio newsgroup. You know, Amateur Radio... also known as Ham radio? I always figured hams held themselves to a higher order of self discipline and respect for others. Guess I was wrong, huh?

It's not mass-posting?... Lessee... How many thousands of us do you think bothered to open his post looking for more info related to the thread we've been following?
Maybe you're confusing "mass posting" with "cross posting"?... The way I see it, this's MUCH worse than spamming thru email.. There, it's somewhat simple to detect spam by looking at the subject: line and delete it before reading.. When you append it to a current thread in a ng, otoh, the readers get quite a ways into it before realizing the trap they've gotten themselves into.. There's no way to unread the time you've then wasted on it...

Some discussion about the truckers and 10 meters going on over on the misc.transport.trucking group. Personally I think the hams on 10 should do everything possible to interfere with the illegal ops there. Everything the truckers say is f.....g this and f.....g that, they will turn 10 meters into the sewer pit that cb has been made into if they are not run off the band.

There is no such thing as real witchcraft. Magic spells are impossible. The Wiccans I know concentrate far more on being in touch that be?

Satanic rituals are OK as long as they harm no one, animals included.
When they cross that line, they're criminals AFAIC.

I am attemping to retune a VHF Mitrek from 157.xxx to 147.xxx
It works great, on 157.xxx, lots of power and 1.5 volts DC at Metering point 3. Great dip and peak on L104 and L105. When I put in the 147.xxx element, I can only get about .5 volts at metering point 3 and no dip/peak after that stage.

I can however hear the crystal freq, and all doubler, and tripler stages are working fine as I can hear each one of those. I just can't seem to get enough drive for L104 and L105 and thus the amplifier stages.

I also have the same results with another 147.555 element that I have.

Has anybody else found the same? The chassis numbers read 146-174 for the radio. Thoughts would be appreciated.

Thanks.

Subject: An Open Letter, Apology, and Final Message from CB Rambo
Date: 1999/03/16
Author: CBRambo <cbrambo@aol.com>

Over the past few days, I have spent a great deal of time in reflection of my past behavior on the radio newsgroups. My conclusion is that I have wasted a great deal of time and effort engaging in pointless arguments and petty bickering with other participants here.
This is time and effort that would have been much better spent on other, more meaningful pursuits. I have also come to the realization that I have offended some of you with my comments, as some have inadvertently taken my remarks in a personal manner. This was never my intention...and for this, I am truly sorry.

Contrary to popular belief, I am not a "bad guy". If you were to know me in person, you would probably say that I am kind-hearted, free-spirited, fun to be around, and generally easy to get along with.
But, like all of us, I also have my character flaws and shortcomings.
Specifically, I tend to be particularily stubborn at times (especially when provoked) and I am also prone to "carrying things too far" upon occasion. I like to play games, tease, and joke around...and sometimes, I don't know when to stop. This has always been a weakness of mine, and I am now working very dilligently to control it.

As I read some of my past newsgroup postings, I must admit that I am rather embarrassed and upset with myself for engaging in some of this nonsense. I have made off-topic comments here which have had the effect of causing chaos and disrupting the flow of information for which this forum was designed. I am certainly not the only one who has done this, but that doesn't justify my behavior. Lack of maturity, insecurity, poor judgement, the "thrill" of being safe behind a keyboard, and an occasional feeling of boredom in my life right now...all of these were contributing factors. Again, that does not justify my behavior, but I can see now how these feelings and character flaws caused me to behave as I did.

I also tend to get a little "touchy" when someone accuses me or implies that I engage in illegal radio operations. This is simply not true. Never has been, never will be. I am a law-abiding citizen who does not have even as much as a traffic ticket on his police record. I don't mention this as an attempt to justify my behavior, but only so that you might understand why I occasionally acted the way that I did.

In an effort to restore order and tranquility to this newsgroup, I will immediately and forever cease from posting here. I will be available via e-mail for the next 24 hours, and would appreciate hearing from those of you who have thoughts on this matter and do not wish to post them publicly on the newsgroup. When the 24 hours has expired, I will permanently delete the "CB Rambo" screenname from my America Online account and I will not appear online again. I'm sure many of you are skeptical here...and rightfully so...but time will indeed prove my sincerity. Again, I apologize to those whom I offended here and for being a nuisance on this newsgroup.

Thank you for your time. Radio is a wonderful thing. May it have a long and prosperous life. Goodnight and God bless you.

"WHERE'S THAT BIG 'OL CB RAMBO?"

Raymond;

I couldn't agree with you more. After being inactive for the better part of the last decade, I have recently gotten back into ham radio, and decided to research a few things here in the newsgroups. I am sorry I ever stumbled across this one. Instead of freely trading information in a helping manner, all I see is "so and so is a pedophile" and "so and so is an asshole" and then these "let's fight" nets that some apparently have on 80 meters. What has happened to our hobby? I guess I am under the wrong impression of what ham radio was supposed to be about.

Well Mr. Davies, you have had more than an ample amount of time to confess about your arrest and criminal record.

So, without further delay, we will tell everyone what a liar and pervert you are.

Date: July 4, 1998 caught masturbating in the back row of the movie theater. Lloyd claimed he saw " a bug on my pee pee and I was trying to shake it off".

Date: September 12, 1998 caught showing two young boys his " willie ". the parents moved and didn't prosecute.

Date: December 21, 1998 caught jerking off behind the local porno magazine store to pictures of naked men.

Date: March 8, 1999 caught putting " secret sauce ' on pizza just before delivering it.

July 4, 1999 (you have something to tell us about july 4th Lloyd?) caught putting his penis in the cotton candy machine at local fair, then offering some special cotton candy to young boys.

October 14, 1999 caught cornholing a friend in back seat of car at local park (a pickle park?) claimed he got stuck while playing leapfrog.

Date: January 12, 2000 Caught at local traffic light with no pants on and jerking off.

Date: August 16, 2000 Caught at pickle park at rest stop soliciting oral sex.

Date: October 20, 2000 caught screwing a pumpkin outside of Athens, claimed he was making pumpkin pie filling for a friend.

Date: January, 2001 caught cornholing a cow, contracted the mad cow disease, as evidenced by his bizarre behavious lately. Acting tough etc.

These record are on file in our Atlanta office Mr. Davies.

"This is another myth that Lelnad and his gang of jealousy-infected bretheren perpetuate, that I have talked with "saucer men", I assure you, nothing is further from the truth. The lies and anger-motivated constructions that Lelnad, Dogie, the false Sparky, and Pipeboy dream up on a daily basis have nothing whatsoever to do with my actual experiences in the realm of the supernatural. Now this is all well documented mind you, I have contacted the outer reaches of another dimension while calling skip on 555, and yes I am well aware that the frequency falls outside the channels that the goverment deems preferable for use, but I am not one of the unwashed unaware rabble of citizenry, never have been, hence I am not subject to the same laws as common, callow men. In college I was on the Deans List if that tells you anything and my superior intellect won me the favors of many like-minded individuals in both society and academia. But I shunned their transparent and shallow attentions to pursue my own unglamorous but rewarding path in the swamplands of the south. This unselfish pursuit and my canny native instincts are what I believe has been responsible for opening the door to contact with other dimensions in the continuum and my subsequent elevation to a cherished confidante. If you doubt me then do so at your peril for there are many things on heaven and earth that are not yet understood so you would do well to pay your respect to an as yet undisproven phenomenon. Alas, here is the meat of it; the beings I have communicated with by chance do in fact effect transport by spherical means. Yes, some call it a saucer, but that is a misnomer. If the media knew the truth then it would be the undoing of my special status and the end of all social intercourse. Only on the freeband does one learn of such truths. Lelnad and his gang of rogues may scoff, and I say let them, for what does one expect from such unenlightened commoners but an ignorant barbaric yawp in the face of such great wisdom"

The difference, and it's a big one, is that you came here and opened his email. It was delivered to you (unless you CHOOSE to download the entire newsgroup). SPAM to email is addressed specifically to you and it is expected you would download/read it. The way I see it, one is

Carl my friend, this is the direct result of R. Hollingsworth's cracking down on the infamous 14.313 vs 14.300 "Booer War" of 1978-1996. It lasted that long (18 years!!) and dragged in just about every single nut case on ham radio, like as if you dumped ten gallons of honey into a bathtub in woods full of black bears.
Unfortunatly when Reily cleaned up this incredible mess, the people who lived for this RF mayhem suddenly had no outlet for their frustrations. Enter the internet and Newsgroups! The rest is, shall we say, history?

Someone could write 2 books on it. Believe me. One version would provide material for Comedy Central Networks or The Jerry Springer Show, while the other would make an excellent paper for study by the American College of Psychiatric Medicine.

Yes, I do. That's what I meant. I just noticed how long my "ignore" list for these newsgroups had become. I'm ignoring more people in these three newsgroups than in all the other newsgroups I read combined. I was amazed at the signal to noise ratio around here.

With nearly all of the HF rigs coming with six meters today, six meters is nowhere as lonely as it used to be.

Small antennas with unexpected band openings, good local propagation and even repeaters give the band a "flavor" of its own. It's not HF with all of the power freaks and it's not two meters with the handi-talkie only crowd either. I've always preferred six meters over the other bands. Then again, no one has ever called me "normal" either...<G>

Well, you see, I've been on the net a looooong time, much longer than most people have known it was around. I saw the earliest spam, and it looked nothing like this guys posting. Heck, do what I did 35 years ago when W2OY tried to jam me. Be nice.
Reduce your bandwidth. Any idea as to what 40 WPM of CW will do to an AM (or SSB) signal? I had a nice 30 minute chat after Mike sat on the frequency. I can assure you, his blood pressure likely doubled. I still had a solid QSO for half an hour and didn't even hear him. Nice thing about CW - it's legal anywhere within the amateur bands.

RADIO HABANA CUBA
DXERS UNLIMITED

WEEKEND EDITION
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8, 2001

By Arnie Coro CO2KK

Send your comments, questions and ideas to: arnie@radiohc.org

Hi amigos, welcome to the weekend edition of your favorite radio hobby program, our special for radioaficionados around the world! I am Arnie Coro, radio amateur CO2KK now ready to share with you today about seventeen of air time....

AND here is Item one: Another meteor shower just around the corner....remember that the very late evening and early morning hours of your local time are the best to benefit from meteor scatter propagation... Radio meteors should provide an excellent opportunity for TV and FM band Dxers to add many more stations to their logs, while amateur radio operators on the 10, 6, and 2 meter bands will enjoy yet another opportunity to work this unsual mode....

Item two: Solar activity still high enough that the ionosphere is still supporting very high daytime maximum useable frequencies, so expect more 6 meter band F2 openings during the next two to three days... So far this fall season has proven to be the best for 50 megahertz ionospheric propagation of the whole cycle 23.

Item three: Many e-mail messages received here dealing with homebrew radios, a topic that has brought a lot of attention from both regular and new Dxers Unlimited's listeners... Today, I'll continue telling you more about homebrew radio designs, and why your home built radio designed for experimenting, may outperform even very expensive commercially built receivers....

And as always at the end of the show, our HF plus 6 meters propagation update and forecast will be reaching you to help plan your operating schedule amigos!!! Margarita Delgado is my sound engineer and producer, I'll be back with you all in a few seconds...

This is the weekend edition of Dxers Unlimited reaching you during a very special weekend HF propagation, as a matter of fact, conditions are as good as any long-time short wave listener can remember amigos!!! TV DX enthusiasts should keep their VCR's rolling to pick up those very rare, but possible, F2 layer refracted signals that are only seen during the peak of the solar cycle... YES, if you have the appropriate type of receiver, capable of receiving different TV broadcast transmission standards, it is possible to pick up TV DX that reaches your set not via the typical sporadic E mode, but via the much longer range F2 single or multiple hop modes. Imagine watching Australian low band TV in the Caribbean, or picking up a New Zealand TV station in Buenos Aires, well all this is possible when the F2 MUF goes above 45 megaHertz and higher!!!

Don't forget to keep a log of your TV DX and make at least one copy of those unique VCR tapes whenever you happen to be lucky enough to pick up one of those elusive F2 TV DX openings. And, please do share your experiences with the worldwide audience of Dxers Unlimited by sending your comments about the F2 TV DX openings e-mail to arnie@radiohc.org or via FAX to the following number 53-7-705810....

Now here is item three of today's edition of Dxers Unlimited... more about homebrew radios: Well, amigos, it's nice to see that this topic has generated such a great interest and also to realize how creative our listeners are.... I want to say again that I have received several very interesting e-mail messages about the power supply and the front end of the SUPER REGENERODYNE homebrew radio, and some of them are really funny... like the listener who said, "Arnie why attempt to build a NEW receiver using vacuum tubes for the front end?" so I decided to answer both, directly to him via e-mail and now on the air...

Amigo, if you happen to live in a part of the world where thunderstorms are frequent, as we do here in the Caribbean, then you will know why many radio amateurs have lost not one, but two or three or more times their front end amplifier devices... MOSFET's are particularly delicate electronic components, no matter how you try to provide protection for them... And there are two radio frequency amplifier circuits that perform at least as well as the best MOSFET in the frequency range from the Low Frequency bands all the way up to the 50 megaHertz, amigos. One is the standard classic pentode RF amplifier stage, and the other one, that I like best, is the cascode, using dual triodes or a pair of individual triodes.

Well, again, I want to tell you that there was another e-mail that came in from a Dxers Unlimited's fan that told me that he had already built a better supply than the one I described, because his supply uses a fully electronically variable and regulated high voltage power unit, using a technology that was very popular during the nineteen-fifties at the microwave radio relay systems sites... To all of you interested in homebrewing your own radio gear I just want to say something... there is nothing like operating a radio set that you have built yourself, no matter if it is a single transistor crystal set plus audio amplifier, or a sophisticated dual or triple conversion receiver!!!

Now, let's move ahead with today's description of the DREAM RADIO's detector stages, that are capable of receiving AM, CW,SSB and Narrow Band FM signals... After testing many different regenerative detector circuits,

I decided to settle with the very easy to design, assemble and operate Hartley type classic triode detector, which uses a cathode tap to the grid coil in order to provide the required feedback to make the detector operate. My other choice is the use of a small tetrode or pentode vacuum tube that provides the advantage of easily controlling the gain of the detector stage by changing the tube's screen voltage...

The DREAM radio has the possibility of choosing from up to four different detectors, a standard AM envelope detector using a vacuum tube diode, a detector using a triode connected as an infinite impedance configuration, a regenerative detector and, last but not least, a classic discriminator type FM detector...

Yes, I agree that this adds one more switch control to play with, but please realize that this is an experimental receiver, a radio that provides a lot of enjoyment to the operator by playing around with the careful adjustment of its operating parameters!!!

The Hartley regenerative detector has an amazing sensitivity and stability, and it operates even with extremely low plate and screen voltages. By the way, both plate and screen voltages are regulated, adding to the stability of the circuit, that can be taken very, very near to the point of oscillation, where the Q of the tuned circuit is extremely high, and kept there to provide razor-sharp selectivity when receiving CW Morse Code Signals. As regulated voltage is available, the infinite impedance triode detector is also fed from the regulator, but of course the diode detectors do not require plate voltage to operate!!!

More about the DREAM RADIO's different detectors after this short musical interval... Amigos you are listening to the weekend edition of Dxers Unlimited, you can send your signal reports an comments via e-mail to arnie@radiohc.org and Via AIR MAIL, a postcard will be fine, to Arnie Coro, RADIO HAVANA CUBA, HAVANA, CUBA.

Now, more about the detector stages used in my DREAM RADIO EXPERIMENTAL MODULAR RECEIVER!!! The detector stages are all fully enclosed in a shielded compartment, with the plug in coils properly spaced away from the walls of the compartment so that the Q or factor of merit of the coils won't be degraded by the proximity of the metal shield... The coils were designed for the highest possible Q, and I have wound them in both very high quality ceramic coil forms and easy to work with PVC drain pipe coil forms, without really noticing any difference in operation between the two types of coil forms, at least in the range from 500 kiloHertz all the way up to 10 megaHertz...

Anyway, as you have heard or read, the SUPER REGENERODYNE'S detector stage normally operates in the range from 2 to 4 megaHertz or near to this frequency range... The idea of covering just 2 megaHertz per band is to provide a very good calibration that holds for each of the bands, as the crystal-controlled front end simply mixes the incoming signals from the antenna down to the 2 to 4 megaHertz range... In other words, your regenerative detector is always tuned from 2 to 4 megaHertz.... In my DREAM RADIO, I do not use a crystal-controlled front end all the time; that is, I can change from the crystal-controlled oscillator to a variable frequency oscillator, something that must be done so that FM reception is possible... In other words, the FM discriminator type detector operates at a fixed frequency of 4.5 megaHertz that was chosen because of the easy availability of 4.5 megaHertz TV sound intermediate frequency amplifier transformers, so you do need to do the tuning by changing the frequency of the front end's local oscillator.

As I have said here at Dxers Unlimited many times, regenerative receivers are ideal for homebrewing and their tolerance for parts values is outstanding.., but combining conventional super-heterodyne technology with a regenerative detector stage is a really nice approach to homebrewing a sensitive and low-cost radio. But the DREAM RADIO was not thought as a low-cost project, as anyone attempting to build his or her own version of the DREAM RADIO will be willing to spend quite some time and shopping around for the specialized components required for the project.

Next Tuesday and Wednesday UTC days, during our regular mid-week edition of this show, I will continue describing my DREAM RADIO -- another hybrid receiver that uses both solid state and vacuum tube components to achieve outstanding performance while keeping things rather simple and easy to assemble, even for old timers who have a hard time working with miniature electronic devices!!! Because in these designs absolutely no attempt was made to miniaturize the receiver and modular construction was used, so that a lot of experimenting can be done without spoiling already fully operational, well-tried and proven modules...those that you want to keep intact after all the experiments.

Well amigos, I hope you are enjoying this step-by-step description of my latest radio receiver project, one that has drawn from the experience of many enthusiastic radio experimenters around the world who have made the wonderful gesture of sharing with all of us the results of hundreds of hours of hard work.... And as a local radio amateur here in Havana told me a few days ago, one can start building a simple power supply and a regenerative receiver for the 80 and 40 meter bands, that is also capable of tuning the very popular 6 megaHertz international short wave broadcast band, using recycled components to keep the cost of the project pretty low... Also, these radios are ideal for showing at the radio club's meetings and keeping one right next to your store-bought, professionally built receiver will not only help you realize the amazing sensitivity that they have and their razor-sharp selectivity when properly adjusted, but also will provide that additional radio that is so nice to have when chasing for DX without losing the broadcast time of your favorite radio hobby program!!! Without forgetting the fact that the basic receiver will work nicely as the TAIL END of a nice front end converter!!!

And now amigos, as always at the end of the show here is Arnie Coro's Dxers Unlimited's HF plus 6 meters propagation update and forecast... Solar activity will probably go below the 200 solar flux units mark very shortly, but the ionosphere is in such a healthy state that very high daytime maximum useable frequencies are going to continue happening during the next several days....

Ten meters was open Friday from shortly before sunrise here in Havana to hours after sunset. Now scientists are talking about a second peak of cycle 23, something will equate this cycle with cycle 21 for its level of activity... Expect very nice propagation conditions on an almost round the clock basis this week, and don't forget to at least monitor an empty FM broadcast band channel during the upcoming Meteor Shower. You can leave the tape recorder rolling and then come back from your visual observations of the shooting stars... The same holds for an empty VHF low band TV channel if you are fortunate to have one in your locality, just leave the VCR running.

Attention 6 meter band operators, this is a special advisory for YOU!!! Chances of worldwide 6 meter openings are very good both on Sunday December 9th and Monday December 10th, so be on the alert looking for those nice DX stations that are populating 6 meters nowadays!!!

And don't forget to send me your signal reports, radio hobby related questions and comments about the show to arnie@radiohc.org or VIA AIR MAIL, a postcard will be OK, to Arnie Coro, Radio Havana Cuba Havana, Cuba.

If you can look at the output of the stages with a spectrum analyzer, you can probably tweak each stage for maximum output (signal strength on the display). Then you should be able align it per the service manual.

It's been a couple of years, but I retuned several from the 160 to 162
MHz range to 145 and 147 MHz.

> I also have the same results with another 147.555 element that I have.

It's probably not the elements, rather it's just that the radio is being retuned in a large jump. An alternate solution is to see if you could scrounge a TX and RX element around 152 MHz. This might split the difference enough so you can tune the radio in two smaller jumps.

They work well!

See Carl?? That persons response ("You don't have the ability to ignore topics and/or persons on your own?") is very typical around here. I guess we are not as smart as the rest of them...or as considerate. Some people have the need have to rip or put someone down to make them feel better.

I am looking to buy old discontinued Motorola MC1466, MC1466L, MC1566, MC1566L ICs. These are regulator chips. In or out of circuit, as long as they're good.

Check your ham shack, your junk box, old power supplies, etc. I'll buy one or more from you.

Thanks!

I happen to be a relative newcomer to the hobby, but what I see in this group is more representative of what I hear on the CB than what I hear on the amateur bands. Granted, I don't "live" on 80 meters, I find that band to be more cliqueish that I have a taste for, but I have only ONCE heard what I would call improper operating on the band.
The tone of this newsgroup is FAR worse than anything I've heard on the air.

Hi,

I'm sampling a signal that is received by two separate antennae. I want to make a statement about the phase relationship between the two signals. Does anyone know where I can find textbook definitions of phase synchronous and phase coherent?

I think the difference between coherent and synchronous is that coherent signals can have a phase lag while synchronous signals do not have a lag.

I know procedure. And I know rookie

You have not been in court lately, have you?
The cops see their main duty in getting people into court. At that point they see that they have done their job and it is the courts' job to determine who was correct.

Cops are very hard nosed these days. What I am trying to get across is that the average cop does not know who you are, does not care. If you give him any grief over your "rights", he calls in back up, arrests you and then lets the courts settle. This is exactly what most of my cop buddies say that they will do if they are uncertain about a law. They see it as court problem, not theirs.

Before you go off half cocked, go talk to your attorney. I think that you might get an education. For one thing, you would have a hard time winning a wrongful arrest lawsuit. The cops will add other charges so that they will get you on something which makes you less creditable in front of the court and the jury.

If you have not noticed, any time that the cops arrest someone, they have multiple charges so that they are guaranteed that they will get the guy on something!!

I am director of marketing for an autoparts wholesaler where we have two T-1's and about 30 phone sales people. We have about 6 counter people. It is a continual battle for us to weigh calls against walk-in trade; however, there are huge benefits to having sales people deal face-to-face with walk-in traffic, least of which is that of having a training ground.

Not only do I train newbies on our counter, but I also require each phone salesperson to get up off of his butt a few hours each week to meet customers face-to-face It is far too easy for phone sales people to forget who they are dealing with. Far too often I hear, "What's your account number?" Or, "okay", instead of 'Thank you for the order'. We've all been there, and we know when we have a grumpy phone sales person on the other end of the phone. By having a counter area at least the sales people are reminded of who they are dealing with. The experience carries over to the phone bank.

I won't even get into the times the counter saved us because UPS went on strike, or the times the customers saved us shipping expenses. (I've often thought about discounting freight costs to the customers if they picked up their order)

I give the average cop no reason to expect such behavior from me. For one thing, I work for a governmental agency. But guys like you, over weight and looking like rednecks, scare the shit out of them. And the typical ham often does not look like an urban professional.

The average cop is not all that technical. Most are former high school athletes. They are more into the action than the technology. Also the average cop is somewhat isolated from the rest of us. Too easy to sit in the air conditioned squad car than getting out and talking to folks (community policing).

But most do not like you having a radio that can listen to them. They would love to have all police communications encrypted.

In my state, Indiana, the average ham radio operator also has a concealed weapons permit.
Most of the hams I know have one. And I have see the same practice in other states.
However the west coast does seem to have more hams who are anti gun. But in my experience, hams are also big into guns.

Ask your cop buddies. Cops do not think that way. They assume that every traffic stop is going to go bad. In fact most cops I know say that it is dangerous to assume that anyone they meet is "decent". They see too many bad guys.

Besides even decent folks have a bad day.

Shooting your mouth off refers to defending your rights if pulled over by a cop. That is the last thing they want to hear. That is sure way to wind up in front of a judge.

Maybe so. There are still laws against unlawful search and seizure. And, as I said before, in reference to the seizure of my radio equipment, he will be in deep doo doo when he confiscates my radio that was purchased with DoD funds. ASSuming that a civilian is in the wrong is a sure way to get sued for false arrest. While I have never been arrested in my life, nor have I ever given a LEO a reason to hassle me, I have been talked to in a most disrespectful manner, and treated like I didn't know what I was about. A cop is NOT the arbitor of truth; just because he "thinks" you did something doesn't make it so. I am, however, somewhat vindictive, a trait I inherited from my Dad's side. I cannot STAND to be acused of something I did not do, nor to be falsely hassled, inconvenienced, or unfairly caused to lose time or money. While most people would not pursue the matter, I, OTH, would be searching the law for a way to get the SOB back legally. With the military VHF radio I have in addition to my ham equipment, having that "stolen" at gunpoint WOULD be something the LEO would wish he had never done. While the LEO has "friends" in the courts, I have friends in the military and at the State level (if the seizure takes place in my state). I would NOT let the matter rest.

IF the confiscation involves equipment purchased with US government funds and does NOT come under the "list" of equipment that the LEO would be using, then he WILL be in trouble. First of all, just my Amateur license alone exempts me from his jurisdiction. HE HAS NO AUTHORITY TO SEIZE OR ARREST BASED ON MY USE OF RADIO ALONE. IF I act like a smartass, a jerk, or threaten and cuss him, yes, disorderly conduct, and other charges could be added to haul me in. Secondly, the State authorities are not going to be happy to find themselves involved in a USAF CID investigation as to what happened to the equipment. Have YOU ever been in military logistics? I have. Have you ever seen a property audit where there was suspected misappropriation of materiel? Trust me, it ain't a pretty sight. My supervisor, a Captain, once screened and signed for a lot of small 110V generators. They were not supposed to be placed on open requisition. USAF CID swooped down on our Hq to inventory those generators, and we had to return them. It, however, was not our mistake; it was the mistake of the LGO at the materiel yard, but it didn't make us feel any better; we went around with a high pucker factor for over 2 weeks while they audited us!

I know you are in denial (seems to me you must have a VERY close association with LEOs or ARE one), but the incident with the young ham in Kentucky illustrated this very thing: the way the laws are written, both on scanners and local CB enforcement, cops have NO jurisdiction over hams. If he has a question about a radio, the license is to stop him in his tracks. If he pursues the issue, the court WILL overrule him: it HAS to. As long as I do not resist him in any way, and the issue is strictly radio, then he has not one leg to stand on. It ":might" be risky to bring bogus charges in order to facilitate an arrest. That could cause an investigation of the department and bring questions of corruption and over-zealous cops. I also have a cousin and some friends that work in the national news media. I wouldn't hesitate to have "certain" news personalities bring adverse publicity to said department; like I said--I am very vindictive when wronged.

This is a case of comparing apples to oranges, Alan.

How many auto parts customers expect you to remove a carb from the box, hook it up to an engine and run it, just to see how it works? It's pretty common for a prospective customer of a ham radio to expect a ham dealer to hook up a rig to an antenna and let them play for a while. Is the rig still "new" after such a session? Remember, not every ham retailer is large enough to have several demo radios hooked up for customer try-outs.

Ed,

They are not all that different. Go to any retail auto parts store on any given day and you will overhear, "but, it makes this funny clicking noise...", or, "it only shuts off only when the engine heats up or once I get going down the highway...".

I like the carburetor analogy, ever try to sell one of THOSE things to a customer who refuses to give you the tag number? Phew!

I don't deny lines have to be drawn. For instance, I don't allow my salespeople to leave the building, otherwise some of them would be out in the parking lot this minute trying to diagnose engine problems. I do, however, expect my sales people to be attentive, courteous, and kind. They don't have to climb under the hood, likewise, I wouldn't expect a clerk at a Ham Radio store to tell me why I can't load up my amplifier. In your example, I wouldn't expect a clerk to hook up a new radio either. It would be a bonus if the retailer had a facsimile set up.

All a good sales person has to do is show a little respect 90% of the time. It sounded like the original poster of this thread wasn't even shown that.

1) if there are people talking on a repeater and you need to make a quick connection with someone else, what is the polite way to butt in?

2) how does DCS ("digital coded squelch") work with repeaters? If you're using the feature and only signals with the correct code can break your squelch, don't you run the risk of talking while others are using the repeater and jamming them?

Was listening to K1MAN's bulletin broadcast and heard Barry's ac4vo's fine comments to Glen. Barry appears to be a gentleman and articulate arbitrator. Good job Barry! While his interview was playing btwn 3-4PM Central time though, some nutcase comes up with music playing and all the other stuff to try to re-ignite this dumb radio war! Sheesh! Can't you music playing cb'er a-holes turn the radio OFF for a few weeks?
Let this thing work! We don't need a repeat performance of something like the old 14.313 Wars again cause it will only spread all over 20 then onto 75.

1) Genrally, the phrase "break, break" will cut thru to priority repeater use. It is generally reserved as an emergency measure.

For a casual break-in, just keep trying to announce your callsign.
Conscientious operators should recognize your request and let you in.

Local protocol will dictate how to behave.

2) DCS is nice if you are waiting for traffic from certain individuals, but want to avoid the other repeater traffic. Once contacted, turn it off if using the repeater, or go find a free freq to converse with your parties.

Transmitting DCS is of no consequence to repeater use. It is the "deaf" one who is monitoring that runs the risk of stepping on others transmissions
if they transmit without disabling the DCS squelch.

Just my .02. Others may have better input.

Mark

Unless you are very rich, you may not have the political connections to really make a difference. And it would take a bundle of money to pursue a court battle.

Again, talk this over with your attorneys.

Interesting question. If the carburetor cost $3,000 (like a transceiver), and there were three brands to choose from, and there were definite and known operational differences, and it could be hooked up in five minutes, I suspect that just about everyone would want to try it out before buying. Continuing the auto related analogy, how many folks would shell out even $3,000 for a used car without being able to try it out? And, ever see a new car dealer who didn't have demo cars to drive? From the prices ham dealers charge for their "demo" used equipment, I doubt that they're losing money on those.

You might win. Then your superiors in the CAP might find that you are "political liability" and drop you like a hot rock.

I am well aware of military logistics. I was the NCOIC for command group at KKMC for LTG Pagonis (22nd SUPCOM) during the Gulf War. Property book accounting was a big issue, especially after the combat phase.

The problem is that you have an idealistic view of the law. In reality, it does not work that way. If he feels it justified, a cop can just impound your vehicle, radios and all. They do it to drug dealers all the time.

What you have to learn is that cops do not see you as any different than any street punk. To most cops, all civilians are dangerous. Unless you live in a small county, most cops do not know who you are or "how important" you are. You are just someone they stop and they will approach you as if you are a possible murder. It is safer that way.

These days, DOD often rolls for the local community. If you are uniform then a superior will relieve the local jail of your person then confine you to quarters. As you folks are civilians who are a bit less than reservists, you really do not have that much "covering fire".

Again, you guys really need to talk to your lawyers to understand how modern American courts really work.

It is the Cops job to enforce the laws that are out in our society, It is there job to get criminals off the streets, if they had the choice they would rather not have to go to court or arrest anyone.

They also are under alot of scrutiny these days, in NJ the State Police are under a lot of scrutiny all motor vehicle stops are video recorded and the stops are reviewed by the federal Government. So "they" are not arresting people who complain about their rights. They are arresting people because they violated a Law. Most cops are well aware of what peoples rights are within the letter of the law. Do exceptions happen of course they do but the brush you are painting with is far to wide and just your opinion.

This is exactly what most of my cop buddies

14.313 (and a sizable chunk of 75 meters) were turned over to the 'Citizens Radio Service" about the time SSB became into popular use...and have gone downhill from there.

I heard it too and yes indeed, Barry is a fine gentleman, means well but erred. By negotiating and conciliating he lent credence and legitimacy to the idea that intentional interference is to be tolerated-it's acceptible. The truth is that it SHOULDN'T BE. K1MAN has no right whatsoever in planting himself on anyone and open up with his version of "Duffy's Tavern." And who's this LaMonica? Lewinsky or the ex quarterback of the Oakland Raiders?

I don't know Mr. Baxter but did write a sincere letter to him a few years back and the reply was more or less..."Send money to join." Who wanted to join anything? I wanted to share information and he wanted me to join. But then in fairness, write to the ARRL and you'll get a palms up reply too. I ask you-can ham radio live without his bulletins? You bet and the longer it takes the FCC to close him down, the greater the defiance grows towards that legislative organization.

Can you imagine what's going to happen if "Baxter's folly" is allowed to grow? Every Tom, Dick and Harry will show up with their bulletins. If Baxter is an ARRL-hating wannabe, then what's coming will be a plethora of Baxter-hating wannabes and so forth and so on. We have big trouble in River City and if left unchecked, will destroy ham radio.

Why would he need a defense fund? Maybe because he's gambling away his

Hello all-

I have been away from 2-meter and 70-CM for awhile, and wanted to know if there was a "standard" 70-CM direct mobile to mobile, non-repeater frequency. Also, does this freq have a PL tone to it?

Also, is there one or two 70-CM repeater input/output freqs that are in wide use around the country? PL tones?

I will be flying across country soon in a private airplane and would like to make contacts from the airplane.

Thanks

BILL

Arnie,

Fascinating stuff, especially on the homebrew "regenerodyne" receiver and the TV DX F2 possibilities. I know from watching this newsgroup (rec.radio.shortwave) you have a lot of fans who enjoy your show. As far as I know, your show is unique among major SWL broadcasters by going into a level of technical detail and into ham topics that other shows shy away from. Rest assured there's a contingent of fans here who really enjoy your show's approach.

As I've remarked in the past, a lot of us think you could put together a working radio from a cardboard box, some wet twine, a razor blade, and candle wax. :)
It's refreshing in this day of "plug and play black boxes" that some still understand that part of the fun of radio is building your own, and understanding how it all works.

Speaking of static and lightning resistance of tubes, I would imagine Cuba has quite loud thunderstorm static during the summer months. Have you done any experiments with tuned loop antennas for HF receiving, especially in the higher HF range which is traditionally not thought of as a good place to use loop antennas? It would seem such a design would provide some protection against static and could perhaps null out some local lightning noise, giving a signal-to-noise ratio advantage?

73, and thanks for posting!

You must not be reading my post--I won't HAVE to do anything: USAF will do it FOR me. DOD equipment is issued on a Form 37. All I have to do is tell the CID investigators WHO confiscated it, and THEY will be on the LEO like stink on sh.

Hehe! Don't worry--it will NOT be on the LEO's list as an "illegal CB".
Actually it is a Tait 2000 built for USAF/CAP and other military uses. SHHHH! Don't tell the LEO, but it has our state's HP VHF frequency in it! But it is legal. It is NOT a radio the cop wants to swipe.

Now, tell me this> If I am driving my personal car, not speeding, not violating any laws, in uniform or not, and a LEO decides to become "curious" about my radio equipment, he will have NO leg to stand on. First line of defense--the Amateur license. Most cops DO know what Amateur Radio is. I have already been asked about this at license checks. Now, let's say the LEO decides that this is not good enough for him, and at the time, I happen to have the Tait radio on state rescue.
In spite of courteous efforts to explain what it is, the LEO decides that he is going to confiscate my radios and does so. The first call will go to Col. Charles Layno in Greensboro, NC. He or I will then put in a call to Maxwell AFB, Al explaining what happened. I will then sit back and wait.
YOU can think what you like, and all the civilian "contacts" in the world will not stop what happens next. The LEO's supervisor WILL get a call from Maxwell "requesting" the equipment be returned.
It will be made clear that their department WILL return the radio without delay. You are not understanding; the equipment is NOT civilian--it is charged out on a DOD Form and is accountable to the HQ to which it is assigned. It would be the SAME thing if a cop stopped a Marine convoy and "confiscated" the radios out of a Humvee. CID would NOT let it go. I would do nothing--I'd be out of the loop sitting on the sidelines just waiting for the sh to hit the fan AND laughing my a off at the cop

Your attitude seems to be that cops can do anything and get away with it. That may be true up to a point. On the news tonight, for example, there is a police chief in hot water in a nearby town. Seems he answered a call to a ruckus involving a group of teens. One of the teens was not involved in the fights that broke out, and was leaving the scene as the chief drove up. The kid was halfway inside his car when the chief rushed up, grabbed the kid and flung him down onto the pavement injuring him. Now the cop says it was the kid resisting arrest. But there were 20 witnesses that say the cop just ran up and grabbed the boy and threw him to the ground. The fight was inside the recreation center. If the cop is guilty I hope the guy is fired and is never allowed to work in law enforcement again. IF the kid DID resist arrest, or become belligerent, then HE should have to pay.

As far as my own county is concerned, I have lived here since 1967. I know just about everybody around here that counts. I have NEVER been arrested in my entire life. I have a very conservative appearance with no long hair or mustache. My clothes are always clean--unless I am working on an old car. I know lots of the cops here including the county Sheriff, many city cops, and my ex-brother-in-law who is on the force. My car tag even states "USAF Auxiliary, NC Wing CAP XXX You are still missing something here. What I am telling you is: sure, the cop can take my stuff. Now if I don't give him grief in any way, do not resist his efforts to seize the radio equipment, the only recourse is to show him the Amateur license and the Property tag on the non-civilian radio, YES, he can take my stuff: do you think I am going to resist a cop with a gun? But IF you think Maxwell AFB is going to sit there and let that cop KEEP that equipment, you're loonier than 40 hells! Again, if you think the local yokels will stare down the CID audit team, you are nuts. It WILL be returned.

I have been involved in the organization since 1964. Now if I decide to embarrass the LEO, I don't need to bring said organization into the picture; all I need is a copy of the FCC regulations that preempt Bubba's authority and an accurate account of what happened. You see, I won't HAVE to involve them: USAF/CAP will take care of the confiscated equipment issue. I will make the cop look stupid and embarrass his department over the Amateur issue by causing a TV reporter to come snooping around, asking questions, and putting them on national TV. Prior to that, being briefed on the FCC preemption, a judge would likely strike any charge of "illegal radios and return them.

NOW! Having beat this horse to death, I have to say that this is a very unlike situation. Most cops are professionals and conduct themselves in a respectful, courteous manner. They are not stupid and will not put themselves into a situation that could cause them embarrassment. Many cops are even hams, and as such, understand--even know-- the rules and how they apply to hams. It is the rogue, the big headed rookie, the guy with the swelled head, the one whose psyco-logical profile misled his testers that could cause this trouble. They don't usually last long tending to get themselves in trouble. Hey, I've been thru MANY license checks, especially after Sept 11, and have been merely asked what were the radios for. Most of them were already familiar with ham radio--even CAP--and have never had a problem. I know the rogue cops are out there because I've been stopped by one--even though I was NOT speeding or doing anything out of the ordinary. He was most discourteous, cut me off when I attempted to ask a question, wouldn't let me talk at all. The stop was a mistake--the car he was looking for was a sedan: I was in a station wagon--just the same color. But he took his mistake out on ME. It is the rogue who would decide that his authority cannot be challenged, and he is the one I would take on thru legal and military channels if his "error" involved the seizing of DOD equipment. That is all I am saying. And here, this thread ends as far as I am concerned--no need to keep this up.

Because, maybe those of us who HAVE been around computers a long time know a thing or two. I was programming original programs by the age of 9 and wrote my first graphical webpage when I was about 15, using notepad and Paint Shop 1.2 (I'm 27 now).

No, because it's true. But you don't want to know the truths because you already seem to know it all. Well, as much as an immature 13 year old anyway.

Ok, well, the first public access was Freenets, UNIX tty interface. We didn't have any around here so it was long distance. I think it was around '88 or '89 or so. Sure, BBS's were cool, but this was great because you could "talk" to all sorts of people telnet from one account to another. I only had a 2400, so transfers took a while. I had several accounts around the U.S. at several Universities, so sorry I can't remember all those schools. The first local public access didn't show up for about 3 or 4 years, and then it was using Windoze 3.1 with the Winsock dialup software. H*ll, I beta tested AOL's "Internet" services (Hahahahaha.... what a piece of crap) So, yeah, I have been around the 'net a long time. How long have you been online?

> H*ll.. I invented the internet... How's that?...

That's a load of B.S.. The inventer of the Internet's initials are not BD. Now who's tellin' stories?

Barry appears to be a gentleman and articulate

Let this thing work! We don't need a repeat performance of something like the old 14.313 Wars again cause it will only
spread all over 20 then onto 75

Some time ago I downloaded (then lost after time) a program that would read a text file and output as CW. It also had the option to output WAV files named in this text file. I was a command line file rather than a win/linux

It has been some time since I used CW and would like to make up my own

I'm particularly interested in the low noise GaAsFET pre-amp for 70cm in the ARRL hand book 1990, Chapter 32-3, using the Mitsubishi MGF1402.

The polite thing to do is to wait for a pause between the the end of a transmission and the courtesy tone and toss your call one time. The polite thing for THEM to do is to wait for the courtesy tone and acknowledge your call.

You may. Disable DCS when using a repeater and you won't have that problem. Same for CTSS. It's okay to leave encoding CTSS enabled for repeater use, but normally you'll want CTSS decoding disabled for repeaters - unless you KNOW that the repeater routinely enables CTSS encoding on its transmissions.

Thank you, Joyce Brothers.

Must you be an insipid and arrogant ass? You know as well as I do that the overwhelming majority of Christians, intelligent, wise people, function beautifully in this world. They make money, have happy lives with their families, and do not become wackos (which can happen with any religion, even atheism). Your use of the word "infected" makes you no more than a troll in this post, and as you also know, trolls are unable to get their points across logically and intelligently, so they resort to insulting others. You now fit the mold with aplomb.

And so, Mr. Emotionally Strong, with no need of a crutch to get you through life's tribulations on a daily basis, you need to realize that without Christ, many would find themselves at the ends of their respective ropes, killing themselves or worse, others, out of desperation. You may argue that Christianity has (in the past) resulted in the deaths of many; well, I will argue that it has resulted in the preservation of many more, people whose lives would have become personally worthless and sad beyond comprehension. For every life Christianity has saved in this regard, whether or not it is a lie, it is still a valuable tool and a GOOD thing.

Your juvenile wacko opinion, which amounts to dust in the wind.

> Not purging the Christian disease from your son amounts to child abuse.<

Again, the opinion of a wacko extremist. BTW, you aren't going to gain many converts by calling my wife and me, or anyone else, child abusers. The real disease is intolerance, which you have in spades.

Listened all morning to a group of truckers on 28.115 mHz (AM). Even had one who's wife was on the "base rig" talking with her OM mobile about how to make out the bills and novel ways
she thought of to make "Xmas money".

Is this is what you get when you mass-sell 10 meter radios at/by Radio Shack and others? Wonder how many were running Uniden 2510's, 2600's or HTX's.

Is 28.115 is the new Channel Ninteen ?.
Is the cow out of the barn door?
A while later a ham came up on the freq in AM to try an politely inform them there were in violation of FCC rules. They just laughed, Thought it was very funny.
One guy told the ham, who exercized much restraint and gentlemanly composure in his speech to: "f--- off 4-wheel hampster mobile!"
complete with an roger-beep and echo-effects microphone.

Nice eh?
Gives you the warm & fuzzies?

I'm curious what's the FCC will do?

How about 2 meters?
Is that the next band to be trashed by these morons who buy ham gear at R.S. or WalMart and operate without a licence ?

The finest Christmas story ever written is mid-19th century, victorian Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol".

Read how the wicked miser, slave-driving Ebenezer Scrooge is visited in his dreams on Christmas Eve by a succession of ghosts, Christmas Past, Christmas Present and Christmas to Come, and wakes up on Christmas morning a completely reformed character.

A story for both children and grown-ups. Dickens can make you laugh one minute and cry at the next.

There is a film, black and white, which fairly faithfully follows Dickens' story. Scrooge is played by that great serious and humorous actor Alistair Sims. All TV stations should broadcast this film on Xmas Day afternoon while the more affluent watchers are digesting their dinners washed down with port wine.

But the relatively short story is best.

Ebenezer opens his house window to the busy London street and cries "Boy, yes you boy, what day is this ?"

This is nothing new. Ranger a Uniden both put out ten meter radios that were, by design, easily modified to cover 11 meters and below. A simple jumper and these frequencies are available and, on the Ranger at least, press a couple of buttons and the readout displays channels. Following on there lead, lots of radios of various different brands are now being sold with these capabilities. To keep them legal for sale, they are marketed and enabled for ten meters but are easily modified. A lot of them come standard with things like roger beeps. It is rare to find them sold by ham radio dealers but in the CB shops, they are the hot thing. This has been going on for years and the FCC basically ignores it. They tried to control the CBers once and they couldn't do it so they are hesitant to try again. If you would like to see a full range of these radios, go here: http://www.copper.com/ They list over twenty five different models and, for another $30.00 at the time of purchase, they will modify them for 11 meters. In some areas, 2 meters is just as bad. 2 meters has been adopted as the standard air to ground communications for hang gliders, many of whom are not licensed. Several years ago, the major ham radio manufacturers decided that they would no longer worry about selling there equipment to only ham equipment dealers. Consequently, a lot of truckers are now using the HF bands instead of CBs. Equipment is available at most truck stop CB shops. If you listen around the ham bands or close to it, it is not uncommon to hear truckers.

There may be regional variations, but typically, one says "break" ONCE.

Most repeaters are not DCS equipped. However, for those which are, if the other stations don't have the correct code, then they're not using the repeater either, so you can't be jamming them.

The key ot getting the illegal ops off of 10 meters to cause so much interference they can't operate there. Hams need to monitor the band for such activity and get on their frequency with what ever mode is allowed and keep the interference up until they leave.

Sounds good, but my guess that truckers aren't trying to work DX. How are you going to jam two truckers maybe a mile apart (or even sitting in the same parking lot)? Now, if someone is working DX, that is another story. If they are within perhaps 10 miles of you, you can shut it down quite easily. If one or both parties are received strongly and are not local, the a few hundred watts of RTTY, PSK-31, or other such modes will tear apart an SSB signal in a hurry. Typically, my guess is that these things are being used as 'plug and play' with no thought process and the truckers are likely using them for communications locally (or even between themselves and a base and other trucks working for the same firm), not unlike what happened in NYC.

And those that have time to do so should go sit near their closest interstate with tape recorder, camera, and note pad. Record, photograph, and write down tag # and company name. Forward it to RH at FCC, Gettysburg, PA. Do NOT talk to them! Phone modes are NOT

Hi,

I am in the process of purchasing a heathkit dx-60 for my fiancee's son. It's his xmas present. Anyway, he's got his novice license, and the plan is for him to be able to xmit cw on the 40 meter band. Currently he has a mfj 1040 rig, but he's studying for his tech plus and possibly even his general license.

I know a bit about Ham and radio, but haven't gotten a license yet myself. Anyway, I'll need to get some crystals for this rig. I talked to a few people... one person said he thinks the sockets might be hc-17/u sockets. Is that correct?

I think I read once that transmitters don't necessarily transmit on the frequency on the crystal. Instead they often use a multiplier or something on the crystal. Can someone clear this up for me? What frequencies are pretty popular in the 40 meter band and how do I do the math to calculate the actual frequency being transmitted on based on the crystal, or is the frequency of the crystal I stick in the socket going to be the frequency I am xmitting on?

Also, can someone verify for me what kind of crystals I need for the sockets in the Heathkit dx-60? I'm aware that we could track down a vfo somewhere, but the crystal idea just seems neat for some reason, sorta a making do with minimal equipment.

Please cc responses to paper342@yahoo.com so I don't miss any

Thanks

With all due respect, y'all have to understand how these radios are being used and by whom. It then becomes obvious that the on-air actions of amateurs aren't going to have any effect on their illegal operations.

You can run CW or RTTY all day long and it isn't going to bother these guys. In most cases, all participants in the conversation are within 1 mile of each other...and usually less. Judging from the dirty, overdriven audio typically heard, many are also running linear amplifiers. This further negates the efforts to override their transmissions.

These guys don't know where they're transmitting, and they don't care. Typically, they're using an "export" radio with a band switch ("A", "B", "C", "D", etc.) They travel in "convoy" and use the band switch to access a "private channel", which is the same channel designate as their "company channel."

For instance, let's assume the "company channel" is 27.125, or "regular" CB Channel 14. Access is obtained by putting the radio on Band "A", Channel 14. Their "private channel" would then be the same Channel 14, but on Band "D" or "E." The channel typically stays the same. The driver simply changes the "band" knob to switch from the "company" channel to the "private" channel. This is why 28.085 is such a popular bootleg frequency. On most export radios, 28.085 is Channel 19 on one of the upper "bands." Capiche?

I'm not advocating illegal encroachment on 10 meters. Just wanted to explain how it happens, for those who might not be familiar with the nature of the offenders and equipment commonly used.

Paypal is not causing me any issues at all. It is one of the best things to happen to Ebay and other online auctions. I have used it over 90 times with no issue.

Keep up the good work PayPal. We are not falling for this SPAM.

5839. Problems with stereo picking up radio broadcasts (was told this was the best newsgroups for this problem)

Hi all:

I was told, to come here for a possible solution, since you have the same type of problem, and some are very good at fixing the problem. Here's a copy of my previous letter..

Hi all:

Exchuse this, if this isn't the right place for it. But I've got a real problem. I looked all over my usenet forums, and this one was the only newsgroup that seems to be able to help.

I've got a computer stereo system. (Subwoofer, 4 speakers), and reciently moved. I am around 200 meters away from a radio tower, and reciently I've been picking up radio broadcasts from 1 speaker. It's not affected by the volumn controls at all, and is faint, but clear enough to understand.

What's worse, it goes on while say my MP3s are playing too. So I hear a basketball game, along with Kitaro, which is extremely annoying.

On a probably related note, This stereo is constently popping, buzzing and cracking at times. Like it's picking up lights, and other devices in the house.

When this happens, I have to turn the volume control nearly full before the sounds and MP3s will play. As though I have to 'prime' it.

Any solutions on how to fix this problem?

Not that would be extremely annoying, I would certainly figure out some way to get rid of Kitaro.

I don't think that it was a deputy sheriff, but there was a young Ham that had his radio confiscated - simply because the officer thought it was capable of monitoring the police frequencies.

After a lot of hassle and publicity, I believe he got his radio back.

So, it does happen.

Look for Iron core Chokes, that you can wrap your speak wire around. It should choke off the radio signal from getting into your amplifier.

I've never bought anything from TT, but I was on an "antenna party" a while back, erecting a tower for a friend. The model he bought telescopes inside itself 3 times, which makes the top section rather small. They recommend a Yaesu rotor for this particular tower. Well, we had the recommended rotor and it wouldn't fit inside the trianglular top section. (Yaesu has made a change to their rotor, which makes it larger.) We called the tower folks and explained the problem. They couldn't understand why we couldn't get the rotor in there, so one of the guys at the tower company actually went outside and climbed up on their tower and looked at the situation. (Their older rotor fit in there fine, but the new Yaesu rotors will not.) There wasn't much they could do to help the problem. Our friend had already bought this tower and had spent several hundred dollars getting it delivered. We ended up inprovising a way to use the tower and the rotor, but it is a terrible way to have to do a new installation. The antenna must be aligned perfectly to 274 degrees before lowering the tower, or it will scrape the wiring off the side of the rotor! If you're considering a new tower, make sure somebody makes a rotor that will fit into it before it's delivered to your door!
Always a new experience... 73, JJ

Hi there everybody.

I'm a new ham in Ontario Canada. I was wondering if anybody out there can recommend a good site to order QSL cards from. I only need a quantity of about 250 and prefer at least two or three colors. Does anybody have any recommendations of a site you've had good luck with? I need a Canadian company because exchange rates with the U.S. $$ is ridiculous right now.

Thanks in advance!

First off Barry Carver, AC4VO, is truly a gentleman but made a mistake by negotiating with Baxter. All Barry did was to lend his intentional interference, credibility. Want to clean up 14.275? Get Baxter off the air!

Regarding the noise, I'm in NNJ and it was just 5/2 here but strong enough to blast through to all parts of this country. My reports of a weak signal have been corroborated by WA2ECA and K2EDQ, both Jerseyans. That racket is coming from no more than 50 miles from me and it's the same loony who's been pulling the same stuff for years on 14.313.

Well,

I can't help but be embarrassed and somewhat puzzled at the antics of supposedly "grown" men that act in an infantile maner both on the air and on the newsgroups. Even if there is a certain amount of "protection" and "anon-ness" on the computer, I just cannot help but be curious as to the true mental state and maturity of people that carry on with arguments, silly, pointless flames, and vile, profane posts. On the air, I cringe at the antics of the few that make all look stupid. How long can it be before someone in power decides that ham radio is no longer worthy of the spectrum it occupies and we lose much, or all, of what we have? Why can we not get along?
Why do people have to mock the way people speak? For example, one of the people that is constantly getting mocked was on-air yesterday on 14.313. I listened simply because of the insults written here. I found NO reason to find fault with his comments, or his behavior on the air. It was certainly better than that of many those on here that have nothing but hate and strife to offer. It is, indeed, a sad commentary when ANY ham has to tiptoe carefully thru the bands to find a group that won't tell him to "hit the road" or take issue with his presence. Not only is it sad, but a very pathetic picture of the hobby "most" of us love and respect.

I think you should think again Most all traffic stops in real citys and states are video and audio recorded. So unless he(Jerry) did actually say anything I don't think the officer will perjure himself, and risk losing his good paying " I am Superior to you " job all over a possible radio violation. So far towns, cities, states etc can do anything until they write some type of Laws regarding this issue. Congress only gave local jurisdiction the ability to police this the police will have some type of idea of the laws they will be enforcing. Otherwise they will call for back-up, defer to a higher ranking supervisor, something to releave liabilty from them when possible, they cannot go about and won't go about blindly enforcing Laws. I just don't see it happen that way in this day in age when people are as lawsuit crazy against LEO's.

And the way your were going at it was all cops are bad guys who don't care about you or your rights. Especially the rookie who will arrest you first

I am looking for a Yaesu FT-811 HT w/460 Mhz transmit capability.

If you have one, or have a lead where I can get one, please let me know.

Nothing currently exists on Ebay.

Thanks in advance.

He had better care about my rights they are just as important as his. So all cops walk around with attitudes is what you are saying. Is it screw Joe Public? Does he think he is "Above The Law" Does every cop feel this way ? Perhaps Daniel Marvin can answer a few questions.

B.A.R.F. News!

BREAKING NEWS!

Mr. Hollingsworth encourages QRM!

Breaking News of great importance to all 275'ers:
Riley returned my call this afternoon. We spoke about MAN's broadcasts. He didn't seem offended by the negative comments that were against him. I informed him of my conversation with MAN and was told how Riley was not our friend and how he was eating crow for thanksgiving dinner instead of enjoying turkey like the rest of us. Riley chuckled over this but he informed me that a warning letter was going out to MAN today. The warning is for violation of interference to ongoing communications. He also informed me that people that were already in QSO can continue after his broadcast begins..
Dick W2CSQ - from K1TP pages....

Someone should explain to Mr. Hollingsworth that he is there to enforce the law, not be a pawn for the ARRL! Who does he really work for? If you are a fan of K1MAN, you should write Mr. Hollingsworth and protest this action! Remind him that he a servant of the people!

Now to begin with, anyone who encourages listenership to the 75 meter "booby hatch" known as the "Great Liberty Net" ain't exactly playing with a full deck. In fact I say Lloyd's ghostwriter doesn't realize it but all his queens are missing except for the one in McKeesport and there's only three aces because the fourth was up Herbie's sleeve which got him into a lot of trouble by using it on a fellow named Reichlyn.

Now since Sept.30,2000, the day I took down my famous 20 M. Cloudwarmer in preparation for moving to a new cathedral with townhouse ceilings, I've been inactive on ham radio except for a few QSOs obtained here using an antenna that's as rotten as the "Talibarf." And besides, I'm limited in power to no more than 50 watts anyway. My log shows just short visits on 20 with Virgil and Dan-that's it.

Due to the current battle on 14.275 between the "Goodfellows" and that bad fellow, K1MAN, I have been doing some SWLing and trying to keep things in perspective because I know Riley dislikes me for jamming I never did; I'm offended as you would; I feel setup by "Taliblood and the "Taliqueen" and others BUT my anger still allows me to know right from wrong. Riley's right. Baxter's wrong and there's no equivocation. Furthermore if Riley doesn't remove K1MAN from the bands, the hell you now here will proliferate and the good done by Riley will vanish in a cacophony of noise and jamming not yet seen or even envisioned in ham radio.

Yes, even though I honestly feel Riley did me wrong, I must support the man wholeheartedly and to write as Lloyd's ghostwriter did(N0VFP can't spell nuttin wright) that Riley is causing intentional interference is nothing but a damnable lie, a serious provocation and a reason for him to come down even harder on rules and regs than ever before. Guys, the longer this farkas...I mean fracas goes on with Mr. Baxter, the sterner Riley will become and if it continues, anything more than asking, "Is this frequency in use?" will be considered in violation of part 97.

Lloyd's ghostwriter asks that we should write to Riley to protest HIS actions vis a vis Mr. Baxter. NAY I say. Support those actions. For all I know Mr. Baxter may be well intentioned but his methodology is convoluted. He's basing his disregard for ham law and order on the fact that the ARRL opens up so why shouldn't he? That's fallacious. I am no longer an ARRL member but for cryin' out loud, look at its track record. It's the granddaddy of ham radio. Who is Glenn to try and become Hiram Percy Baxter? The League has been instrumental in the basic growth of ham radio from its infancy; has provided tutelage(heck, I learned the Extra theory from their books and lots of you too instead of Bash), upgraded my code proficiency; it's been the backbone of this hobby/service during all these lean as well as fat years etc. No, it's not perfect by any means but to have Mr. Baxter put on par with it is insanity. The ARRL bulletins can be said to be a sacred part of ham radio so don't trifle with it by trying to supplant its overall effectiveness by what many consider as intentional jamming out of Belgrade Lakes, ME.

Can you imagine how angry Mr. Baxter is by being supported by the likes of a cruddy Herbie -loving right wing basket case group like the BARF? Or is it just maybe that Lloyd's ghostwriter does NOT represent the entire conclave of wannabe human beings? Who knows? Who cares? SUPPORT RILEY IN THIS BATTLE WITH K1MAN.

Cool, and shucks!

Saw his reply to me saying to listen to the show after the show was already over. :(I should check my personal e-mail more often!

I do make an effort to catch his show, because it is one of the few

Arnie Coro's absolutely a first-class guy, and you can enjoy his show regardless of your politics. If you're into learning about how things work, I strongly recommend a listen, exactly like I didn't do this Tuesday. (It's on Tuesdays and Saturdays.)

Thanks a lot for the heads-up!

So, did he answer my loop antenna question, comment on Caribbean static levels, read the note, or what, do you recall?

hi guys i did the usual mod to my pro 34 scanner. removed D-11 for cell coverage.

I can punch the numbers in no problem - but i don't hear any signals.
Sitting next to my other scanners i hear cell calls.

Any ideas what i am doing wrong? I also held down the clear button and pushed the little button behind the battery to reset the unit and it didn't seem to help?

please email me with suggestions, thanks in advance

Which is why I strongly endorse and support that all police cars be equipped with both audio and video recording equipment to document exactly what happened. I have seen the absolute value in these in both protecting the public against rogue cops and protecting police against false accusations of police brutality.

This is my final post on this subject. I will NOT smart off to the cops. I will attempt to show the LEO the documentation (licenses, copy of Form 37, copy of the Federal Law exempting hams, etc) most politely. If they do not accept that, then after I get clear of the cops, I will make the appropriate phone calls from my home away from the cops' earshot and explain what happened. I am NOT an AF hotshot. I am merely a civilian member of the USAF Auxiliary, also known as the Civil Air Patrol. Now, regardless of my attitude towards the cops, if you think that the auditors are just going to let the LEOs keep the equipment that was paid for with Federal money, you're just plain nuts. I may, or may not, be in uniform; either way I will keep my mouth shut and answer questions as they are asked. Remember the concept of prefessionalism? Having been in this organization and having qualified in, not only communications, but logistics, for 37 years, you honestly think I don't know the rules governing DOD property as well as the rules governing USAF/CAP Communications?

Now, such a situation IS unlikely--I said that before--but there ARE rogue cops out there that think their sh doesn't stink; give 'em a badge and a gun, they think they are God. They are the ones who have NO business being cops. I have never been arrested in my life--not even as a teen--it's been 21 years since I have even had a speeding ticket. The secret to that (DUH!) is to conduct yourself like a mature adult, don't hang around any one place too long, keep your nose clean, conduct your affairs legally, get to know the people that count in your town and mind your own business. Even people like that can get hassled by rogue cops and nothing the person did is at fault--it's just that the concrete-headed cop cannot see past the shadow cast by his swelled head. BTW, I saw last night on "DATELINE" where several black men served various sentences up to 8 years for crimes they didn't commit. Seems the police department (Chicago) put pressure on their lab technician to falsify the lab results on DNA, Blood, and Semen to get a conviction. The conviction was overturned, but not until the men had served up to 8 years of undeserved prison time. They are suing each and every one of the LEOS involved in this sham conviction, and I hope they BURN the cops.

Don't tell me
the cops are so squeaky clean and are above the law. And if the cops wrongly seize radio equipment, they WILL face difficulty. The law is very clear; local LEOS are not authorized to "police" Amateur and other licensed services. Period. If they take/seize equipment other than CB, they will have to return or replace it.

This communications lawyer sees it from the viewpoint that The Congress gave the local police no more authority than the FCC has, just the ability to enforce the FCC's "unlicrensed CB" regulations.

This means no random stops and searches, no forced entries without a court order (warrant), no "confiscation", no excess fines above the monetary penalties that the FCC can levy, no jail time for Rule violations, and no making up their own rules about stuff that does not appear in the FCC Rules.

I just took a simple design to a local print shop.
Price was right.
Was several years ago but I imagine there are still print shops not too far from you.

They usually have a wide selection of card types and colours and a print job is a print job. Nothing special about QSL cards.

If you can't come up with a design it's not hard to copy and modify an existing one, that's what I did.

His deep voice reverberating in speakers worldwide, Tris Merman, WA1COD intones: "You're listening to Network NinKnee, hours ahead when moments will do.

"Now the world news. At week's end NinKnee dispatched a jump team to Russia in another rescue mission, this time to save the country. Our last in January to New Guinea was an unqualified success. NinKnee succeeded in brokering peace with only our microphone and keen understanding of human nature, a stunning achievement.

"And now, the ham of the hour, in fact the ham of every year," Tris says, reading from his script, "probably the most famous ham in the world, rivalling in stature only the leader of the free world, the incomparable, unparalleled Len Master."

"Why, thank you for those spontaneous words, Tris. Tonight we're going to give you the inside track on Part 97. Forget what the FCC says. In the loop, we have the story right here at world headquarters in Mechanics, Maine, home of the 1990 NinKnee World Congress.

"My guest tonight calls himself a distinguished talk show host. (Agitated) Golly, I'm the only distinguished talk show host here. I'm the founder of NinKnee, leader of the vast, free, world network, the pioneer. You can become a member and get a free credit card as well as cheap life insurance. (Composed) Let's take a short break for our guest. But stay tuned for the honest truth, my views.

"And now here's the Caribbean mouthpiece, windbag of the airwaves, celebrated contest- winner and consummate communicator who pushed the frontiers of telephony to the federal courthouse and beyond. Welcome to NinKnee. You're on the air."

"A pleasure to be here. After all, the Communicatons Act of 1934, First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and Magna Carta support the legality of my talking to you by telephone," says Blurb authoritatively.

Len cuts in, turning off Blurb's microphone, as the two talk titans tilt over verbal supremacy. "Speaking of telephones, I know you're an adjudicated expert but first consider the best interviews in the world. What I do here makes Barbara Walter's stuff look like childs' play. I saved Mexico City and Armenia after their horrendous earthquakes, have been received by the KGB in Moscow, have advised the Soviet government through Tass News Agency, have signed a monumental accord with the Young Communist League and--don't forget--the Bib Seron eulogy, 'Cheers from the Kitchen.' (Aside) Bib, I'm still touched. (Serious) I'm the Walter Kronkite of ham radio but better."

Blurb (emphatically): "Let me get a word in edgewise!"

"No, wait your turn. When I formed the well respected KneeNee"--click. Len trails off as Blurb hangs up.

Undaunted, Len continues, "Thanks for your appearance, Blurb. (Pause) Sorry you were interrupted by another call. (Circumspect) For my listeners circling the globe, this show can go on unattended, without a guest, without listeners and without FCC blessing.

So much for life before Riley Hollingsworth, Esquire.

I agree, Support Riley in this and rest assured that what he has said is in fact "how it is". I went thru the same thing (basically) on 3950. The_moving in_on existing QSO's was the big problem there. Thankfully that has all ended, but, I'm sure that MAN will find out, as did the Lib Net, that, no net or individual has reservations on any frequency ESPECIALLY if it is in use at the time.

5885. Is Roger A Down Syndrome Baby?

Medical records have been recently accessed which lend credence to the fact that Roger Wiseman is most likely suffering from a congenital disease commonly known as Down Syndrome.
Indications of this affliction manifest themselves in many ways and Roger seems to have most of the maladies associated with this affliction.
One of the most obvious indications of Down Syndrome is an enlarged/misshapen head that seems to uncontrollably loll to and fro on a small and weak neck. This is Roger.
Another indication that points toward Down is the eyes. The eyes will be misfocused and often act independently on one another. Roger displays this affliction as both his eyes rotate in various directions much akin to a frog looking for flies. Down Syndrome sufferers commonly have large, misshapen lips that allow spittle to constanly bubble forth, much like Roger yet again.
The most obvious affliction of Down Syndrome is the uncontrollable urge to flail the arms, drool, grunt, shout, or scream for no apparent reason. Roger is a classic case study in this regard.
Down Syndrome also often weakens the sphincter muscles, thereby causing the bowels to disgorge the contents at the worst of times. This explains why Roger constantly spews filth and is sickeningly malodorous.
In short, have pity on Roger. He can't help his affliction.
(Now let us see how Roger, being unoriginal, immature and less than creative, plagiarizes this missive with his response.)

Actually, I wish you had written the above yesterday.

It was the 60th anniversary of Hitler's Germany declaring war upon the United States of America.

He felt the same way as you seem to feel.

His thousand year reich lasted twelve years.

He ended up committing suicide, realizing, at last, that he was a loser.

I know the 2m nets in the Willamette Valley, OR are run on the honor system. When it's time for the net, people finish up their QSO's and yield to the net. Of course, with 2m repeaters being controlled often by the net ops, it's a bit different story than on HF nets.

His ISP is most likely ovnet.com, or mountain.net, and he uses simple proxies and/or anonymizers to "mask" his identity. Start reading his perverted ramblings, and then they are ALL easy to spot.

Want to know more about him? Just run a search in http://groups.google.com

KC8JBO is a real bowel movement, always moist and putrid, excreted on

As a public service to the NG, I will be offering to sell mobil amps to those wishing to buy them. This is not done out of greed but out of necessity to thwart the losers in the NG who think they have taken over OUR nice little group and can use it to harass and belittle as they see fit. To offer sale of these items is just the thing needed in a public forum to mess with these nil-minded simpletons.

Amps such as Texas Star, Palomar, Cobra,Messenger, Gray, Galaxy, X-Force and so on. These will be sold for a limited time and at a VERY small profit IF ANY !

This is not a money thing so much as it is an access thing.

Since these self appointed radio/computer gods have declared knowledge an illegal thing also, I might just make the entire Secret CB book series available on CD along with a CD of amplifier schematics for base and mobil amps. Why is it that when these morons just think they are getting somewhere in their fight somebody like me comes along and pisses on their parade? BECAUSE THEY NEED IT AND DESERVE IT!!!!!!!!!

Maybe in your neck of the woods. Here, if in doubt, "Call the Sergeant".
If the Sergeant doesn't know, he calls the Watch Captain. If he doesn't know, then it is time to call a DA.

It is far better to use up a bit of time than to arrest someone without cause. False arrest lawsuits can be costly, especially when it is over something as trivial as possession of a radio.

Your buddies are why some some cops have a bad reputation. Do you feel it is better to hang a few innocent people, just to make sure a murderer does not go free? After all, it is just a matter of degree before you say "Oops - our mistake.".

Sounds like you are a police officer - and one who does not have the bloodiest idea what was written in that law. The law does NOT allow confiscation of the vehicle - and probably not even searching the radio (vehicle) without a warrant.

If I have a CB radio, I am federally licensed to operate that radio.
Just because there is no physical license means nothing. Second, there is no federal law prohibiting owning Ham gear - even if you are not a Ham. Look it all up, if you don't believe me. The relevant sections of the FCC statutes are not that long or complex. If you cannot understand the legalese - ask one of the DA's.

And you are an example of why people mouth off to cops. A police officer deserves no more respect than any other citizen. They also should treat others with respect until given sufficient reason to do otherwise. Mouthing off is NOT a sufficient reason.

No, they are our employees - although there are those (and you appear to be one of them) who are deluded into thinking otherwise.

I'd have to go back and look at the tables, but I don't think that radio supports doing that. The 706g is not as robust in the puter control area compared to say a 756 or whatever. MK

Bill, I am not talking about rogue cops or even police brutality. Rather it is the cop who is a professional, who keeps his cool, but is not going to let some ham tell him that the cop has no right to inspect his radios and plays the hot shot. No cop will put up with that.

The average cop is trained to suspect everyone.
Even other cops. They are trained that they are superior, the "force" of government, the thin blue line that keeps us a civilized society.
And it is almost universal that the biggest goal that a cop will have is to make it home alive every night.

If there is a question about a radio, it is just easier to take the radios, even the car as well, and let the courts settle. I have said this over and over. This includes lawsuits, which most cops do not really give a rats ass about. That is the courts' problem, the chief's problem, and not theirs.

This does not mean that they will keep the radios forever, as the AF CAP chap suggested. When the AF types come, it will go in front of a judge. And remember, this is only if there is question that the street officer can not settle quickly.

Too many Americans are jerks, assholes. They believe that they have a right to do anything, and everything. That they have NO responsibility to society or their fellow man. And the cops want that attitude to end.

> >I just don't see it happen that way in this day in age when people are as > >lawsuit crazy against LEO's.
>
> You are so right.

What you have to understand is that many hams feel that the cops have NO right to inspect them, to ask questions. I am not talking about rogue cops but rather the officer who is professional and whose biggest goal
every day is to make it home alive.

These officers want video of every traffic stop. Too many Americans are jerks, assholes. They have "rights" and no one, not even the police (in their mind) have the right to tell them how to live. And too many hams are big jerks.

This AF CAP chap just does not get it. Let the AF CID come, as far as they are concerned that is a matter for the courts. Once the cop does his job, the investigation, he is more than happy to let the courts deal with it. And that includes lawsuits. That is the chief's worry, not his. As it is, too many file false lawsuits every day against cops. It has become a cost of doing business.

Again, the average cop sees most of this a matter for the courts. If he has question, his automatic response is to throw it over to the courts to decide. That is the professional thing to do. And if some ham becomes an asshole and argues with him, he wants video tape to take to court.

Lawsuits are just a cost in doing business. People file false charges against the police everyday. As I said, the average cop looks to the courts to settle questions. If a ham wants to be an asshole and argue with the cops then he had better expect to stand in

Not your employees. The mayor hired them, not you.
You are but a taxpayer and you have no choice in paying taxes. Unless you have the money and position to get mayors elected then you will have a hard time influencing the average big city mayor.

One final time: Show me where I said anything about resisting, smarting off, or telling a cop he cannot inspect. It is after he takes the equipment, mistakenly, that the AF folks get involved. I don't give cops trouble. I never even have opportunity to; I rarely come into contact with them. For this to happen would be rare because most cops are just as nice to you as you are to them. "Yes sir" and "No sir" are the order of the day. That doesn't say having my equipment taken wouldn't piss me off--it would--, BUT I DO know how to control that anger and handle the matter thru legal channels. NEVER did I say anything about challenging the cop on the scene.

A couple summers ago (you are in Indiana, right?), I was motoring along I-40 near Hickory, NC talking to some friends on 10 meter AM (29.000). OF all things, here came an Indiana sheriff overtaking me in the left lane. As soon as he saw me talking, and all the ham antennas, he abruptly slowed down, following just behind and to the left. I wondered what an Indiana county sheriff was doing in NC, but they eventually pulled alongside, giving me a VERY evil eye like they would just LOVE to stop me.. The driver reached down and seemed to be flipping thru "channels" (CB?) as if trying to listen to me. Failing to hear the transmissions, they also seemed to be suspicious, BUT they had no jurisdiction, and since I was doing nothing apparently illegal, they sped away. It was sort of funny. IF I'd had a cell phone, I'd have called NCHP and had them stopped for speeding. LMAO!

darn it........I have newsranger blocked and missed this post so I'll address it now...........Eat shit and die! Who sells what or who's buying is of no concern to you.......You just need a reason to cry like the little child you are. Grow up! Your little click isn't going to even put a dent in what gets sold for CB radio legal or otherwise.
Being in radio as long as I have and knowing the people I know........It's going to be a long long time before slime like you will ever be able to do a damned thing to anyone selling radio stuff. I have more radio info on CD's and a larger database than most of you clowns would ever dream of and if need be ALL WILL BE PUT ON A WEBSITE. Everything from schematics for amps that we were building in the 70's and 80's to every last page of master editions.....secret cb.....green, gray, black books.........You name it and I got it. Nothing you sleazy little shits can do will EVER stop people from getting information they need. Bet on it!

From: "Train" <cbmods@optonline.net>
Newsgroups: rec.radio.cb

As a public service to the NG, I will be offering to sell mobil amps to those wishing to buy them. This is not done out of greed but out of necessity to thwart the losers in the NG who think they have taken over OUR nice little group and can use it to harass and belittle as they see fit. To offer sale of these items is just the thing needed in a public forum to mess with these nil-minded simpletons. Amps such as Texas Star, Palomar, Cobra, Messenger, Gray, Galaxy, X-Force and so on. These will be sold for a limited time and at a VERY small profit IF ANY !

This is not a money thing so much as it is an access thing.

Since these self appointed radio/computer gods have declared knowledge an illegal thing also, I might just make the entire Secret CB book series available on CD along with a CD of amplifier schematics for base and mobil amps. Why is it that when these morons just think they are getting somewhere in their fight somebody like me comes along and pisses on their parade? BECAUSE THEY NEED IT AND DESERVE IT!!!!!!!!!

E-Mail me with your needs......

There are thousands of us who will continue to operate as we see fit without regard to whatever some schmuck like you or your little click of over-opinionated morons have to say about it. You can cry all you like but those of us who can, will and those of you who can't......Will continue to cry about it.

I started being a vegetarian, not because of Paul, but, because of the healthier lifestyle it promotes. Some of the Eastern religions promote vegitarianism, I think. I liked Paul's appearance on SNL. He was pretty good playing a butler! You could see that he was having fun with performing the skits.

Happy Holidays all. I am working on a Cushman CE-4 and need to know if anyone might have a manual that can email or snailmail me a copy of one or two pages. I have found out that there is a problem with a board on the bottom of the unit. The 0710-7001 board had two transistors that went up in smoke. I cannot find my manual for this model and the CE-6 seems to have different boards.
It is the fourth board on the bottom front row, counting from the bottom

as the unit is on the bench facing you. It has three pots and a horizontal potted coil, and two IC's on it. There are a bunch of transistors located near the edge connector, toward the right side of the board. I need to know the numbers of the transistors and some of the values of the parts. Thanks Don KB6GQA

You made out like you are some type of bad ass. What you are saying is what I have been trying to communicate. Politeness will get you far with most cops.

However, if it does go to the point that the equipment and/or the car are impounded then the courts will settle it. All your AF types will do is go in front of the judge and make their case, as you would as well. The cops will not try to keep the equipment. Their only goal is to allow the judge the opportunity to rule. If the situation is unclear, it may well go in front of a judge. Your AF types will be called as witnesses.

Bottom line. Do not argue with a cop. He will win.
By that I mean, he will have you in front of a judge.
Whether he wins the case is another matter. But he will put you through enough hassle that you may very well not want to go through it again.

RADIO HABANA CUBA
DXERS UNLIMITED

MID-WEEK EDITION
TUESDAY, DECEMBER 11, 2001

By Arnie Coro CO2KK

Send your comments, questions and ideas to: arnie@radiohc.org

HI, amigos radioaficionados around the world!!! Welcome to the mid week edition of your favorite, listener oriented radio hobby program. I am Arnie Coro, radio amateur CO2KK, your friend in Havana, and host of this twice weekly show devoted to the promotion and development of our wonderful hobby... RADIO!!!

Item one: Excellent propagation conditions continue, with the solar flux still nicely above the 200 units mark, and Tuesday the A index was at the very quiet level of just 4 units!!! Propagation of DX signals in the range from 20 to 60 megaHertz via the F2 layer continues to amaze long time radio enthusiasts, that are now seeing what looks like solar cycle's 23 second peak!!!

Item two: The Geminids meteor shower is coming, and this is going to be the most active one until next year's Perseids... Learn more about the Geminid meteor shower right here on this same frequency a little later as Dxers Unlimited's mid week edition continues, and don't forget that the Canadian special SPARK transmission to celebrate Marconi's achievement in 1901 of crossing the Atlantic with a radio signal will be on the air Wednesday UTC day. This is the data about the spark transmission that is going to take place on the 80 meter band. The frequency of the spark signal's center will be 3550 kHz and the time 9pm EST or 02 hours UTC December 12...

So only those listeners who will pick up our broadcasts to Europe and the Caribbean or our first run to North America will be able to be there on time!!! Because Dxers Unlimited's first broadcast to North America is at just after 0130 UTC, so you can switch fast after listening to the show, tune 3550 kiloHertz using the AM mode, and try to pick up this special spark transmission that will celebrate Marconi's achievement 100 years ago!!!

David Wilson VE3BBN in St David's Ontario, near Niagara Falls, obtained approval from Industry Canada for a special event transmission using a home made spark transmitter. Again the event will take place on December 12 2001, at 9 pm local eastern time, (0200 UTC), to celebrate the 100th anniversary of Marconi's historic transatlantic transmission of the letter "S" from Poldhu Cornwall to St John's, Newfoundland in 1901. The center frequency of the spark transmissions from VE3BBN will be on 3550 kHz and the time 0200 UTC Wednesday, that is again 9 pm eastern or 8 pm central Tuesday Margarita Delgado is my sound engineer and producer, and my e-mail address is very easy to remember... arnie@radiohc.org I'll be back in a few seconds...

The Geminid meteor shower will peak Thursday night/Friday morning December 13/14 offering meteor observers, and radio hobbysts a last chance to see impressive activity until next summer's Perseids. Circumstances are excellent this year for visual observations of the meteors as the new moon occurs the same day as maximum activity. The Geminids can produce more than 100 meteors per hour if seen from rural areas, and at that rate FM band and TV signals bouncing back to Earth will keep This is one of the few showers that is visible during the evening hours as the radiant rises near 1800 (6pm) local time for observers located in the mid northern latitudes. It rises earlier the further one moves north and just the opposite as one moves south.

This shower is observable from the Southern Hemisphere but at much reduced rates. On the night of maximum activity the radiant is located close to the bright star Castor, which marks the head of the western twin. Low rates may be seen as soon as it becomes totally dark. These early meteors will be earthgrazers as the travel the sky many tens of degrees lasting several seconds.

As the night progresses the meteors will become shorter but more numerous. The strongest rates will occur between 0100 and 0200 local time when the radiant lies highest in the sky. That's the time window to have all your radio and TV gear working to pick up DX via the meteor trails. The Geminids strike the earth in a perpendicular angle which produces meteors of medium velocity. Of course this depends on where you are facing and where the meteors occur. Those that occur near the radiant or near the horizon will appear slower than those appearing high in the sky and far from the radiant. The Geminids are the only major annual shower produced by an asteroid. Studies have shown that Geminid meteors are indeed more dense than other showers produced by comets, see that's why the VHF signals bounced from those meteor trails are so strong and seem to provide longer burns.....

QSL on the air, and a very special one to listener Ross Archer, who sent an e-mail that I would like to share with all of you, Ross says:

Arnie, Fascinating stuff, especially on the homebrew "regenerodyne" receiver and the TV DX F2 possibilities. I know from watching this newsgroup (rec.radio.shortwave) you have a lot of fans who enjoy your show. As far as I know, your show is unique among major SWL broadcasters by going into a level of technical detail and into ham topics that other shows shy away from. Rest assured there's a contingent of fans here who really enjoy your show's approach.

As I've remarked in the past, a lot of us think you could put together a working radio from a cardboard box, some wet twine, a razor blade, and candle wax :)

Well amigo Ross, not exactly, but yes, recycled parts from many sources do provide enough components to build some nice gear!!! Then Ross Archer adds in his e-mail this flattering comment!!

It's refreshing in this day of "plug and play black boxes" that some still understand that part of the fun of radio is building your own, and understanding how it all works.

Ross Archer's e-mail continues by bringing in this interesting topic:

Speaking of static and lightning resistance of tubes, I would imagine Cuba has quite loud thunderstorm static during the summer months. Have you done any experiments with tuned loop antennas for HF receiving, especially in the higher HF range which is traditionally not thought of as a good place to use loop antennas? It would seem such a design would provide some protection against static and could perhaps null out some local lightning noise, giving a signal-to-noise ratio advantage?

Well amigo Ross, SURE, the magnetic loop antennas are excellent "filters" against heavy static,and you can install them at low height in order to provide a certain degree of protection against lightnning, as compared with what may happen when you are using a tall mast or tower...

And yes, amigo Ross, you are right, the directional properties of the magnetic loop, does help to null static crashes from thunderstorms, especially those that are reaching you via ground wave propagation!! Well, amigo Ross, keep listening and also reading the scripts of the show that are made available via the INTERNET and on our Dxers Unlimited website at http://www.radiohc.org/dxers/ as yet another service to the worldwide community of radio hobby enthusiasts.

One hundred years ago Italian inventor Marconi was able to pick up a signal sent across the Atlantic for the first time ever!!

In 1895 Italian inventor Guglielmo Marconi built the equipment and transmitted electrical signals through the air from one end of his house to the other, and then from the house to the garden. These experiments were, in effect, the dawn of practical wireless telegraphy or radio. Marconi was born in Bologna, Italy. His father was Italian, his mother, Irish. He was educated first in Bologna and later in Florence. Then he went to the technical school in Leghorn, where he studied physics. Following the successes of his experiments at home, Marconi became obsessed with the idea of sending messages across the Atlantic. He built a transmitter, 100 times more powerful than any previous station, at Poldhu, on the southwest tip of England, and in November 1901 installed a receiving station at St. John's, Newfoundland. On December 12, 1901, he received signals from across the ocean. News of this achievement spread around the world, and he was acclaimed by outstanding scientists, including Thomas A. Edison. Marconi received many honors including the Nobel Prize for Physics in 1909.

And now, amigos, as always, at the end of the show, here is Arnie Coro's HF plus 6 meters propagation update and forecast:

Solar flux very near 220 and moving UP now... and a major flare was detected at 0808 December 11th, something that could have an impact later on our magnetosphere. Solar activity is expected to be from moderate to high, and the daytime maximum useable frequencies should exceed 50 megaHertz on many propagation paths.

Medium wave band Dxers should be on the alert for possible signals coming from your South, if your QTH is located at latitudes higher than about 40 degrees North.

A special advisory to 6 meter band operators... there are good chances for really long range DX on that band, and this will probably continue for the next three to five days...

Don't forget to send your signal reports, comments about the show and radio hobby related questions via e-mail to arnie@radiohc.org and VIA AIR MAIL to Arnie Coro, Radio Havana Cuba, Havana, Cuba!

Try the NuMorse program at:

http://www.Nu-Ware.com

I know it is a Windows program, but it will do what you need. There is a new program on the site called NuMorse Pro that can make wav files and has lots of extra bells/whistles, perhaps too many. Like adding QSB and QRN, or the code can be set to sound like a spark tx. A bit over the top, but good fun...

If a cop wanted to take my radio I would tell him he is wrong, I don't have to argue with him to tell him this. And If he didn't take my word for it I would let him take the radios and know I will have my chance to have him look silly in a court of Law. Then the judge will tell him to learn the letter of the law and stop wasting the courts time. Cops don't want this as well so they will try to make sure they know what they are doing.

We have both extremes. At one end are those who are just fed up with the excesses of society and want to rein in everything. They see society as out of control.

At the other end are the cops, like many in Indianapolis, who use outlaw CB's to talk to each other and to coordinate their stories
when there has been an incident.

But it might have been that they just wanted to yell at you on the radio.

Cops do think this way. They may hide it behind their mask of professionalism (they call it putting on the "game face"). Remember cops are mostly ex high school jocks. And remember they do see a number of their fellow officers getting killed every year. They have to assume that every traffic stop could go bad.

That is a risk that the average cop is willing to take. As far as he is concerned, getting you in front of judge is his primary job. Even if you win, it will cost you a huge amount of money, and time. Costly enough that you will think twice the next time. He does not have to get you thrown in jail in order to change your attitude. Normally the court procedures, and it can take a year or more to settle a case,
are enough to make a decent citizen more careful in how they live their lives.

Well I will say sorry about the course language, but there is a bigger picture on this.

I have studied and recieved a lowly tech lic for starters. However having driven semi's for years I can try to relate the truckers side. CB 19 has degenerated way down to the point of people harrassing truckers (listen sometime a bulk of the noise is from base stations especial around big cities) most of the "sesame Street" gang is kids playing and talking big.

Due to this depressing talk to drivers, many have left the CB buying ham radios for the extra cost so they can "get away" from the base stations (I was told that a long time ago CB was just like 80 meters is today...many truckers miss that peaceful feeling you enjoy (I only have a tech so 2 meters is my place)) while it is wrong many don't care due to the way they were treated on channel 19 (Penn state has a kid on 19 with a 250 watt base that must have a dictionary of every swear word that he just keeps reading at truckers)

As far as the FCC many state scales have fcc trained weigh masters that do check (you pull on to the scale and are asked to key up the CB) sometimes they find them often they don't. I belive that the truckers could bring a revival to the ham comunity, just from the numbers point of view, and I started down ham meeting another ham trucker...HE HAD A HUGE ANT (screw driver)ON THAT TRUCK!!! made me wonder what he was talking to!

While it is a privalage to us ... a little tact here could gain you a friend and the ham community more clout. Sence I got my ticket many of the guys I used to run with have seen me use the 2 meter repeater system (they loved the michigan linked repeater system...all over the state with only an HT) and the phone patches, many have started borrowing my books to study for the test.

To start them on the road just help them out ... many would love to have the ANT checked by an MFJ analizer (they pay up to $20 for it) and as you teach them how to get the best out of the CB talk about the ham structure many will listen and think about it....many of my friends have started studying

(by the way it supposed to be 28.665 for the new 19)

This may be somewhat off topic but maybe someone reading this can help. I recently installed a "utility" software that had the side effect of eliminating all rec.radio groups folders from my email list (rec.radio.misc , rec.radio.amateur , rec.radio.antennas , etc., etc.). I've emailed the software tech support but no response yet. Does anyone know how I can resubscribe to various rec. groups without going thru google. Please email suggestios/advice direct to rckchp@home.com. Also, FYI my email system is Outlook Express and my computer is running windows me. Thanks in advance.

That is true, but they also must assess the situation from there training they ask questions and have to quickly read "people" because each stop presents a different situation. So when a policeman makes a stop he needs to be in control of the situation in case a stop does go bad he can defend himself. He is not there to make friends he is there to uphold the law some people take exception to that.

THE 2002 WINTER OLYMPICS: FCC SAYS NO TO SPECIAL CALL SIGN

An idea for a special events call sign to celebrate the 2002 Winter Olympics has drawn a negative response from the FCC. Tom Schaefer, NY4I, of Sandy, Utah, had requested that the agency allow amateurs Utah hams to substitute the number 2002 or 02 for the 7 in their callsign. This, for the time period preceding and up to though the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City. But after mulling it over for a few months the Schaefer says the agency responded with a definite no:

Schaefer Here:
In-Q: I wrote a letter...
Out-Q:...as a different prefix.

The letter to Schaefer was signed by D'wana R. Terry. Terry is Chief of the Public Safety and Private Wireless Division of the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau. Among the reasons Terry stated in refusing the special call sign request was that the block of special event callsigns requested did not fall into the commission's special event callsign format. Also, that the request was inconsistent with International Radio Regulations. Schaefer says that he is disappointed at the FCC decision to deny, and also a bit surprised:

Schaefer Here
In-Q: The letter I...
Out-Q:...unable to do that.

Does this mean that there will be no ham radio involvement in the 2002 Winter Olympic Games? Not by a long shot. According to Schaefer members of the local ARES groups will be assisting in providing communications for the event. And there’s a good chance that someone will pick up the ball and get some sort of special call sign using the established call sign administrator program.

By the way, you can hear more with Tom Schaefer NY4I about ham radio at the Winter Olympics on this weeks RAIN Report. Its on the web in Real Audio and Windows Media at www.rainreport.com and by telephone at 847-827-7246. That’s 847-827-RAIN. (ARNewsline(tm))

THE ARCTIC WINTER GAMES

Another event called the Arctic Winter Games are also in their planning stages. In this case, ham radio is an important part of the event. Q-New Graham Kemp, VK4BB, tells us the who, the what and the where:

--
Greenland and the call-sign OX1AWG is on the air from Nuuk Greenland as a participant of the Arctic Winter Games going to be held in Iqaluit Nunavit and Nuuk Greenland 17th - 23rd of March 2002.

OX3HX, Rene tells us any Hams bringing a valid License original will be welcome to use the local club station OX3NUK for a small fee. If you would like to have your own OX3-call, ship a copy of the license but they need to have the papers 3 weeks in advance. Hams who like to operate OX/Home call or OX1AWG are welcome too, and have only to show up with original valid license.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Im Graham Kemp, VK4BB, of Q-News Australia.

For those planning to visit Greenland for the games, Rene Witkowsky, OX3HX will be available at one of the many Help Booths around the city. (Q-News)

DX RECORD: 73 KHZ DISTANCE RECORD INCREASED

Yet another new low frequency record has been achieved on the 73 kHz band. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, has more:

“On the 21st of November, just before midnight UTC, W1TAG received extremely slow CW from G3AQC. This was the first time that a complete callsign had been copied, though partial calls were identified the previous night.

The opening lasted around two hours and was the culmination of several weeks of testing. At a distance of 5291 kilometers, G3AQC smashed his own record of 4408 kilometers when his 73kHz transmissions were received by VE1ZJ last June. He was running 200 milliwatts ERP.

The transmission was in Differential Frequency CW, where the dots and dashes are the same length but on slightly different frequencies, and with no space between them.

Jeramy Boot, G4NJH”

The Differential Frequency C-W communications system used for this contact holds the promise of extending this record even further. (GB2RS)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: EXPEDITION 4 HEADS TO THE ISS

Amateur Radio is keeping an eye one space this week. On the International Space Station to be more exact, as we witness a changing if the guard. The third group of Astronauts and Cosmonauts headed by Frank Culbertson, is getting ready to come home. They’ll be back on Earth December 16th, after being in orbit since last August.

Expedition 4, Yuri Orufrienko, Dan Bursch and Carl Walz will take over and be up there until next May. Onufrienko once operated from the Mir Space Station; Bursch is KD5PNU and Walz is KC5TIE. So hams can look forward to contacts with them.

Amateur Radio on the International Space Station; ARISS; will continue on the air with two meter voice and packet. Voice contacts with schools all over the world have been well served and those exciting contacts will continue at a rate of one or two a week once the new crew settles in.

In addition to operating ham gear, the new crew has also carried new Amateur Radio antennas to the station. They were designed and built in Italy to Russian specifications, then space-qualified and shipped to the United States.

The Astronauts plan at least eight space walks, two of which will be used to install those antennas outside the crew quarters. They should provide a wide range of frequencies and vastly improved coverage of the ham bands for the ARISS station.

The space station call, while flying over the United States is NA1SS. The 2 meter downlink frequency is 145.80 MHz. Look for the new crew on the air from orbit in the near future. ARNewsline(tm))

HAM RADIO TESTING IN THE USA: NEW EXTRA CLASS EXAM QUESTION POOL RELEASED

If you are planning to upgrade to Extra class, now might be the time to do it. This is because a new and somewhat more difficult Extra Class exam will go into effect next summer. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the details:

The National Conference of Volunteer Examiner Coordinators Question Pool Committee has released a revised and expanded set of Element 4 Amateur Extra questions. Use of these questions begins next summer and replace the current Extra class question pool released back on April 15, 2000. That’s the day Amateur Radio ''restructuring'' became effective.

The new Element 4 pool expands the number of questions by more than 20 percent. The new test pool has 806 questions as opposed to 665 in the current Extra class pool. It also contains more technical material. In fact, more than half of the questions cover electrical principles, circuits, signals and emissions.

The 50 questions in an Extra class examination are drawn from the question pool. FCC rules say that an applicant must correctly answer at least 37 questions of the 50 to receive a passing grade.

The new Extra class question pool becomes effective July 1, 2002, and must be used to generate all Extra class written examinations administered on or after that date. The questions are available on the ARRL Web site and will remain valid through June 30, 2005.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Norm Seeley, KI7UP.

The Question Pool Committee now will turn its attention to developing an outline for the Technician class Element 2 question pool. A draft version is scheduled for public release and comment next spring. The ARRL website address is http://www.arrl.org/arrlvec/pools.html to find the Question Pool. (ARRL Bulletin, NCVEC)

HAM RADIO TESTING IN THE U-K: UPGRADING MORSE TESTS UNDERWAY

Meantime overseas, the United Kingdom is in the process of administering a lot of slow speed Morse code exams. This, following the an announcement by that nations telecommunications agency that U-K Full and Intermediate Class B license-holders can operate on the High Frequency bands under the new Foundation license by simply passing a code test.

Called a Morse Assessment exam, the Radio Society of Great Britain is arranging for sessions to be held nation-wide. The RSGB hopes that at least two sessions per region will take place between now and the end of December.

The RSGB says that these tests are open to both members and non-members of the society. So far twelve sites have been approved for training and testing of the new U-K Foundation License. (GB2RS)

ENFORCEMENT: AMATEUR RADIO ROAD RAGE MUST STOP

The FCC's chief ham radio rules enforcer has told those attending the Ft. Wayne Indiana Hamfest that the time for on the air arguments has come to an end. Riley Hollingsworth, the FCC's Special Counsel for Amateur Radio enforcement told the forum that Amateur Radio road rage must stop now and that the bickering on our frequencies can do nothing but hurt Amateur Radio in the long run.

Hollingsworth also says its time for more hams to get involved in public service. Jack Parker, W8ISH, of Amateur News Weekly, has that part of the story:

"Hollingsworth says that it is now time for hams to use frequencies responsibly. He adds that now, more than ever, is the best time for all Amateur Radio groups to seek out and establish working relationships with local emergency response agencies.

Since September 11th, Amateur Radio and its potential has moved into a prominent position on the national front. But he stresses that we must move quickly at a local level to establish our place in the overall emergency response plan.

Hollingsworth's views are echoed by many who are already involved in organizing ham radio emergency communications on a local level. They say you can never have to many well trained volunteers. (Amateur News Weekly)

SPECTRUM USE: FCC OPENS UP MORE SPECTRUM TO COMMERCIAL USERS

The government has moved to eliminate a cap on how much spectrum any one wireless company can own in a given market. The decision opens the way for mergers between major carriers and allows them to provide more mobile services such as high-speed Internet access.

The Federal Communications Commission had previously limited the amount of spectrum that an operator could own in a particular geographic area, in an effort to prevent a single giant company from squelching competition in that market. But in a recent 3 to 1 vote, the agency decided to immediately raise the amount of bandspace a company can own from 45 MHz to 55 MHz. This is an increase of more than 20 percent. The FCC plans to completely eliminate the limit in January 2003. (FCC)

HAMVENTION 2002: TIME TO NOMINATE REMINDER

Another reminder that the Dayton Amateur Radio Association has opened the nominating period for the 2002 Dayton Hamvention Awards. There are three awards presented each year. They are the Radio Amateur of the Year, Special Achievement, and Technical Excellence.

All amateurs Novice through Extra are eligible. Awards are decided by the Awards Committee, based partially upon the information received. Magazine articles, newsletters, newspaper clippings, videos and the like are appreciated but cannot be returned. The deadline for nominations is January 31, 2002. Nominations can be submitted by US Mail to Post Office Box 964, Dayton Ohio 45401 or by completing the convenient e-form on the web at www.hamvention.org. (DARA)

NEW HAM TECHNOLOGY: THE ELECRAFT RIG CONCEPT DESIGN CONTEST

Want to design the ham rig of the future and maybe win a prize? Well, Elecraft says that it will be giving three of its new EC1 project enclosures to those who submit the most interesting suggested designs concepts.
Eric Swartz WA6HQQ: “There’s quite a strong building and homebrewing community inside of the QRP’ers -- the low power operators -- these days. In fact, that is how we got our start.

We have broadened our audience past that and have pulled a lot of hams from the mainstream higher power groups to it also, but those guys (the QRP operators - ed.) build an awful lot of stuff. We are continually seeing folks talking about new project ideas and new things to design. It is quite a fertile group of people so I think we are just kind of servicing that need.”

Elecraft says its taking this rather unusual step to away to help stimulate the creative process within the ham radio community. According to Elecraft’s Wayne Burdick, N6KR and Eric Swartz, WA6HHQ, design concepts submitted can be for virtually any ham-related application, but they must be compatible with the Elecraft EC1 enclosure. The EC1 is the same size and color as the K1 transceiver. No schematics are required and designers are under no obligation or expectation to actually build the proposed projects. More information on this unique design contest along with all the rules is on the web at www.elecraft.com. (Elecraft)

INTERNATIONAL - SOUTH AFRICA: NO HT’S IN THIS CAR

Radio Amateurs in South Africa can no longer use a hand held radio in a vehicle unless its attached to a hands free operating system. This is the result of a new law that says that no person will drive a vehicle on a public road while holding a cellular telephone or any other communications device in one or both hands.

To operate mobile, hams and non hams alike now must use a radio permanently mounted in the vehicle and adapted to hands free operation. The law permits mobile radio operators to use such devices as a permanently mounted microphone and speaker or other specialized gear to comply. (SARL, Q-News)

INTERNATIONAL-UK: MARCONI 100TH ANNIVERSARY

The 100th anniversary of the reception of the first trans-Atlantic radio signal by Guilermo Marconi at Signal Hill in St. John's, Newfoundland, takes place on Wednesday the December 12th. In celebration, a number of United Kingdom special event stations will be active to commemorate the event.

Most of the operations will take place on the 12th of December itself. Even Great Britain’s Radiocommunications Agency is getting into the act. It will be operating GB100WT from its laboratory site at Whyteleafe, Surrey, during part of December including, they hope, the full 24 hours of the 12th of December. The Radiocommunications Agency expects to be operational on the High Frequency bands as well as 2 meters and 70 centimeters. The station will be operated by Radiocommunications Agency staff in addition to members of local radio clubs and will welcome QSOs with stations worldwide. (RSGB)

RADIOSPORTS: WRTC-2002 REMINDER AND UPDATE

A reminder that the next World Team Radiosport Championship will take place next July in Finland. The games will be hosted by the Finnish Amateur Radio Society and the Contest Club of Finland. WRTC brings together over fifty two man teams made up of the best contest operators from around the world. The actual on-the-air competition pits two man teams operating from a common geographic area using identical equipment, power and antennas.

To get a good idea of what goes on at the World Radiosport Team Championship games, film-maker Dave Bell has produced a half hour documentary video titled “The Ham Radio Olympics.” Its priced at only $19.95 and is available on video CD or VHS tape from the American Radio Relay League. Graham Kemp VK4BB:

“World traveller Peter Casier, ON6TT (5X1T), has been in Afghanistan for the last few days and has now obtained permission to operate in this worn torn nation.

On November 21 he was QRV as YA/ON6TT/M operating in a convoy. The foreign ministry of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan (Northern Alliance) issued the call YA5T, which can be used on all bands by Peter, ON6TT, Matts, SM7PKK, and Robert, S53R.

Wayne Mills, N7NG, will have to look at the permission, once it is received. His initial reaction was that it should be good for DXCC. Peter will hopefully be contacting Wayne and submitting the documentation. Meantime, look out for these three operating as YA5T.”

And late word from the ARRL’s DXCC Desk is that it has already received acceptable documentation for YA5T and has approved it for credit. (Q-News)

Several DX newsletters report that N6TJ is active as ZD8Z from Ascension Island again. He is expected to be there through the 18th of December. QSL as directed on the air. (OPDX, Modern DX’er)

Lastly, word that high seas have forced the Ducie Island DXpedition team to abandon its already-delayed effort to reach that DXCC entity located in the South Pacific. According to the RSGB, the team was some 80 nautical miles from its destination and facing high seas when the decision was taken to turn around and head back to Pitcairn Island. (GB2RS)

THAT FINAL ITEM: STRANGE SCIENCE - FAT BIRDS FLY BETTER

About twice a year we bring you stories about radio tagged migratory birds. In most cases its those ever elusive Burrowing Owls. Now we have a totally different kind of bird story. It still involves radio tracking, but this time to see if bigger birds or smaller birds have a better chance to survive in flight. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Joe Moell, KO0V has more:

European scientists have discovered what seems like a contradiction about migrating birds. They found that the fatter the bird, the more efficiently it appears to fly.

Researchers at Lund University in Sweden have studied several small species including the Red Knot. In our hemisphere, these 20-ounce wading shorebirds travel 18,000 miles every year, to the tip of South America and back to the Arctic. On the way north, they stop on the shores of New Jersey to feast on the eggs of horseshoe crabs, to build up energy for the last 2000 miles of their northward trip, which they make non-stop. On these binges, the Red Knots can double their normal body weight.

Over the past few years a number of European Red Knots were radio tagged and tracked by the Swedes as they prepared for a similar trip between the British Isles and the Russian Arctic. The study indicates that building up of fat deposits to be burned as fuel during the migration is more than worth the energy that it takes to carry the additional weight. The heavier birds apparently use their muscles more efficiently. Just why this is so remains a mystery. Even stranger is that the results seem to 'fly in the face' of a central theory of aerodynamics -- no pun intended of course.

So what does this have to do with ham radio? Well, it points out that research always seems to yield unexpected results, and it gives me a chance to remind you that dozens of ham operators in western states are listening for the VHF radio tags on endangered Burrowing Owls this winter. You could help out too. Find out by visiting my Web site -- www.homingin.com. Who knows, maybe a ham will make a similar startling discovery about the migration habits of these unique critters. That's homingin -- one word -- for the Web site, homingin.com.

For Amateur Radio Newsline, in southern California, this is Joe Moell - K-zero-Oscar-Victor saying, "no jokes about birdbrains, please."

All of this really goes to show that the more mankind uses science to discover the secrets of Mother Nature, the more amazed man is at what he learns. (Ecology Today)

There is a pecking order. Governors and mayors are the most valuable then powerful men then professionals like doctors and lawyers. The Police are just under mayors.

Look there are so many elite who see the police and the military as a bunch of losers who are there to die for them. People like you who make huge amounts of money and live in big fancy houses. I have them in my community. The military is not allowed to recruit in the local high school as their kids are going to college and the military is for those who can't really make it.

People like you see themselves as too valuable to get their hands dirty. Sorry but your life is not worth that of a police officer, a fire fighter or a soldier.

That's odd. The only radios used by the terrorists on Sept 11 were the same ones the pilots use.
Any cop who suddenly starts profiling anyone with a mobile radio because of Sept 11 is a paranoia-ridden loose cannon.(there are some of those)
The terrorists made extensive use of cellphones. So they should be profiling cellphone users instead. Now THAT would keep 'em busy.

Come up to Chicago and listen to the people
using ham gear to send CW number messages.
Speculation is that it is Serbs and Bosnians in the region doing some form of espionage. But then it could be the Nation of Islam.

And what if you were using ham gear to co-ordinate criminal activity? How is a cop going to know who you are, or if you are good guy or a bad guy? Every one a cops meets could be a criminal. He never knows.

Well, I live in a college town. With lots of people who have Ph.ds and masters degrees and see themselves as too valuable to serve in the military. That is for the "little people" to do. They honestly believe that the cops are there to die for them. As if they were the president or something.

It becomes THEIR problem when (a) a civilian complaint is filed with the department for misconduct and (b) they are a named defendant in a Sect. 1983 suit - damages (and attorney fees) for violation of civil rights under color of authority.

All the LEOs whom I know (and I know a bunch - I am a retired Federal agent) are very concerned that they do not achieve that sort of "fame". It's a career-stopper and a wallet-emptier.

If he has questions the professional thing to do is to refer it to his supervisory manager - Sergeant, Lieutenant, Captain, all the way up the chain. Making those decisions was what we got paid the "big bucks" for. One of them either has the right answer or will get it from the on-call DA.

CB is one of the Radio Services licensed by "blanket authorization" as specified in Section 307(e)(1) of the Comm Act rather than by individual licenses.

Operation in compliance with FCC Rules Part 95 is authorized without "individual licenses". At the discretion of the FCC, operation in violation of Part 95 may be considered "unlicensed operation".

The last time we DFed HF numbers station signals they turned out to be coming from a well-fenced and patrolled US military compound in Warrington, VA sending traffic for Guess-Who.

Your taxpayer dollars at work. Have they moved the facility ??

It is hard to trace Wiseman's alleged train of thought however, I suspect

he might be referring to:

Loyd Thomas
517 Lindy Ln.
Glen Dale, West Vagine

Ms. Thomas has confirmed with the "FBI" that Mr. Thomas has turned 8LOJO8 in to the FCC on numerous occasins for deliberate & malicious interference. Ms. Thomas herself, "Has always suspected that there just was something that just wasnt' right with "that boy!"

Assuming there's any truth to the CW number message transmissions originating in Chicago, the FCC would have no problem tracking the source transmitter. Now the question must be...how do YOU (N9NWO) know they are ham gear?

>And what if you were using ham gear to co-ordinate

So what, the ownership of ham gear is NOT against ANY law. Cops that confiscate equipment without justification are not needed on any police force.

Inspect the person? The equipment? In either case...WHY? On what basis?

IF I was stopped for any reason and a cop asked me what was the radio on my dash, I'd simply say it is my amateur radio and that should be the end of it.

> I am not talking about rogue cops but rather

I support those guys and gals and they don't pull nutty confiscations or mobile stops without probable cause.

So do I. It is a great tool that protects both the police and the public from false accusations by either.

> They have "rights"
>and no one, not even the police (in their mind) have the

We all have rights and YES, the cops d NOT have the right to tell me or anyone else how to live. Law enforcement (study those two words) is to ONLY enforce the laws, not to dictate how anyone lives as long as the person is obeyng the law.

It absoultely is the cops worry when the cop strays
from proper procedure and enforcement.

Whuch is why video tape is such a great idea.

That becomes irrisponsible if it happens TOO often and the police don't win.

Again, I fully support the use of video.

INSPECT for WHAT reason. The radio in the car is NOT illegal. The cop as NO need to ask. If asked, I'd tell him what my radio is and that's the end of it. What else would he need or want to do?

>No cop will put up with that.

After telling the cop the radio is a ham rig (or CB,

more could the cop ask?

That is not the training I am aware of. Cops may have the powerm but their application of that power must be tempered with restraint and rational reasoning...or they will end up off the force in many cases.

>If there is a question about a radio,

WHAT could be questioned?

Yes you have and you fail to see that any cop losses, etc won't go far as a cop.

Believe it or not, cops can end up being criminally prosecuted for departures from proper enforcement.

laws are being broken.

We allow police to be armed, not because their lives are more valuable likly to be confronted with the need to defend themselves against a felon. The police face that every day they are on duty.

The police, mayor, and every other city, county, serve all of us. That is apparently a concept N9NWO

False arrests are EXPENSIVE to government. An arrest generates NO revenue. Only a conviction MIGHT generate revenue (usually traffic fines). Criminal charges rarely result in any significant revenue gain to government at all. The prosecution costs alone are an expense.

We've had a lot of truckers using 2 meter repeaters in this area.

They have always been good operators from what I've seen, and I've Don't "they" say that the worst weather is the best for antenna parties.

Right now, I'm rebuilding my 3" screwdriver unit. I got rear ended a couple weeks ago--didn't hurt the car, just dented the lower mast some on the antenna. It needed rebuilding anyway. I built it about 6 years ago. I turned me a nice 3" loading coil with some nice tinned copper (#14) amd used a drill in a vice to spin the wire on the coil. This one was a prototype. That thing rocks on 75 meters and 40 meter AM. SHHHHHH! Don't be telling Dick McCollum I've been running "Ancient Mary". LOL!

5975. Glenn Baxter Writes Riley...

Boy. First Glenn jams the Hams with his illegal transmissions, and NOW he has the audacity to respond below to Riley after getting a warning letter on Dec. 11, 2001. Here's hoping Glenn's license ain't long for this world.
:::::::::::::::::: :::::::::::::::::: ::::::::::::::::::::
From: Glenn A. Baxter, P.E., K1MAN
14 December 2001 2:47 P.M.

W. Riley Hollingsworth, Esq.
Special Counsel, Enforcement Bureau
Federal Communications Commission Gettysburg, Pa. 17325-7245

Mr. Hollingsworth:

This is in reference to your "warning letter" to me dated 11 December 2001. I was accurately advised about your letter to me and its exact contents by both Keith Lamonica, W7DXX, and Dick Leavitt, W2CSQ, on 11 December 2001. This is an ethical violation of FCC ex parte rules of procedure and supports my public allegations that you are a sleazy and cheap politician as well as an unethical (alleged) attorney not fit for employment by the United States Government.

Your letter illegally threatens me with a "license revocation or renewal hearing" because I have (and fully intend to continue) filed sworn affidavits with the U.S. Attorney regarding alleged criminal violations of Sections 333 and 501 of the 1934 Communications Act.

My filing of these sworn affidavits are protected by the First Amendment to the United Stated Constitution protecting free speech as well as the Fourth Amendment regarding my absolute right to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

Further, your letter, itself, and you openly encouraging radio amateurs to "talk over" my radio transmissions, is also a criminal violation of Section 501 as well as criminal obstruction of justice, and I am taking legal steps to assure that you are vigorously prosecuted and also removed from your employment at the FCC. I am also taking legally sanctioned steps to assure that you are disbarred as a licensed attorney (if, in fact, you are licensed to practice law in any state.

For your information, K1MAN is fully licensed to transmit information bulletins per a published schedule, and the K1MAN Bulletin Service is specifically recognized to be lawful in a letter from FCC Chief of Special Services, Robert H. Mc Namara, to Kenneth Black, G4WNE, dated

2 November 1989 (reference 7240-F). If you are really an attorney, and we question whether you are, you will understand the legal doctrine of res judicata that applies in this matter.

Finally, you have publicly lied to radio amateurs that you had something to do with putting my station, K1MAN, off the air in 1999 which, of course, is totally false. You have total immunity for this sort of defamation and libel, as you well know, and you take full public relations advantage of this government immunity. You are, however, a public disgrace to the Amateur Radio Service, to the Commission, to the legal profession, and to the United States of America.

We look forward to seeing you in court.

Could www.myfeetstink.com be the under-construction page of a Glen Dale,

Take your nostalgia trip. Just don't think it is the state of the art.

My only real problem with Antique Modulation is that it is so easily upgemessed by idiots; see outlaw CB.

Damn, Richard,

You caught me before the ink was even dry! LOL! I don't run AM all that much, but I DO like to take that little trip down memory lane once in a while. It so happens that my IC706 does quite a good job on AM and, coupled with one of my SD units on mobile I can do supris-ingly well with all of 40 watts. I have a 706 at home as well, and sometimes I come down to the shack in the morning with a nice cup of coffee and get in on the East Coast AM groups on 7290. This is how I amused myself 2 days ago when I took my Dad to the doc. Pennsylvania, New Joisey (I mean Jersey), and Virginia were easy hops. I don't think 7290, 3885, and 29.000 really bother anyone. I think there is room for everybody, and I never understand why so many people think they must have the same fire hydrant to tee tee on when it is so easy to just move up or down a few kcs (forgive the lapse), and I've even heard the SSB guys raise cain about the AM folks. I checked just below the SSBers, and there was plenty of room, but NEEEEWWWWWOOOOOOOOOO, they just wanted to have something to bitch about! I don't get on AM every day and I don't drool over Vikings, Globe Kings, and Scouts, and 51S1s. I just like to get on and remember the old days of glowing filaments and revving dyna-motors and revving engines to keep the battery up.

Roger tried yet again to audition for a seat on The Wheel Of Fortune. He had dreams of freebies in his punkin head and was hoping to win a trip for two to a romantic spot in the back booth of Bruce's Bar and Frills.
The audition was called to a halt when Roger kept leaping from his seat yelling, "I'd like to buy a bowel. I'd like to buy a bowel."
Roger will next be auditioning for the Jerry Springer show. The Springer producers promised Roger a shot at a Bowel For The Night. Roger was last seen packing his toothbrush and mouthwash in preparation for making the pilgrimage to what he thinks of as Mecca.

Just positing a thought here. Could it be possible that Roger is a latent homosexual who is afraid to come out of his closet?
Could this explain his homophobic comments and his fixation/well-versed comments concerning pedophelia?
Roger seems to have a spelling problem, but it disappears when he is addressing a topic that he seems to know so much about....i.e. pedophelia, incest, smegma, male oral sex, etc.
After all, Roger is pushing fifty years old and has no female influence in his life save for his mommy with whom he lives. This alone is enough to set off warning bells about the kind of guy he is.
It has already been determined that Roger is a milquetoast, a wimp, a limp bisquit, a closet-queen with a filthy mouth. The dude is almost a non-entity. Almost.
If it were not for the newsgroups, Roger would not exist at all. He thirsts for attention. He would be an obscure non-entity otherwise. Nobody would know he even draws breath and most likely nobody would care, either. That in itself must be the most hurtful blow to his obscure life....that he exists only in print and only in his newsgroup fantasies.
Poor, poor Roger. So sad. So worthy of our pity.

Famed Convicted Felon, Kevin Mitnik will appear for all you hero worshipers.
He will of course not discuss how he was captured by a radio direction finding device deployed by local law enforcement agencies as they narrowed in on his rented apartment and caught him in the act. Mister Mitnik will also opt to not discuss his time behind bars.

Wrong. We allow officers to carry firearms because many criminals also carry firearms. It might be necessary to use the firearm in the process of apprehending the felon.

The officer would be just as likely to use the firearm to protect some innocent person.

I can carry a firearm. Does that make ME "more valuable" than those who cannot? Not in my view.

Mitnik is simply a convicted felon. He burglarized federal buildings...breaking and entering. He is a criminal. He stole phone records.
He crawled in through closed windows in the dark of night.
The man is a criminal, a common thief with a computer background.
Kevin Mitnik is a crime looking for a place to happen. He did it before, and he will do so again.

In my opinion, it is elitist attitudes like yours that are part of the problems we face in this country.

I would not give an officer a rough time. Why should I? But if he wants to examine my automobile or radios, then he better have a search warrant. If he feels one is necessary, then the watch officer can certainly see that one is obtained in short order.

Read the regulations covering CB. It is immaterial that no identification number or registration are required.

There are FCC regulations covering my usage of the CB band, this I am licensed by the FCC. Just ask them.

And arrests that get the officer and police into lawsuits or get unfavorable publicity in the newspapers means that the officer can pretty much kiss his chances for promotion goodby.
He will probably even be canned if it happens often enough.

There used to be a couple of officers in my city with attitudes like you display here. They are no longer on the force. Nor are they in the phone directory any more - so may have moved on.

The average office looks to his superior officers to settle questions. It is not a case of "Arrest em all, and let the courts sort them out" - which is what you claim is common.

I have been a ham for 10 years now and a CBer for over 20 years and I have noticed a degradation of CB to the point that no one uses it anymore. If you are on the road ham is the best way to go. With the new IRLP system you can tone up repeaters almost any ware in the world, (http://www.irlp.net/) with just a hand-held. One thing that all CBers should ask themselves before they key up, is what they are talking about fit for family listening. Would you want your wife, girlfriend or kids listening to that? Also that they can be tracked in under 6 seconds and the transmitter fingerprint system works very well. The reason that the governments of the world permit this to continue is that the cost to go to trial is prohibitive. I do know that Industry Canada and the FCC will act on complaints especially if the dirty radio gets into the commercial or police bands. I have played around with radio tracking using the Doppler shift radio tracking system on CB and it is unbelievable how fast you can drive right up to someone's door or follow a dirty trucker into a truck stop and have a talk with him face to face.

Actually, obtaining a search warrant isn't all that quick or easy.
Assume the following scenario...

1. Officer Obey stops John Q Motorist for some traffic violation.
2. Upon viewing the vehicle's interior, Officer Obey sees a radio mounted in the car.
3. Officer Obey asks the motorist about the radio
4. John Q Motorist politely tells officer Obey the radio is a ham rig (or CB, or whatever).
5. Officer Obey then requests permission to search the vehicle and/or examine the radio itself.
6. John Q Motorist declines (politely) to allow search of the vehicle and/or the radio.

OK so far?

Now Officer Obey requires a search warrant to search the car or further examine the radio. Just how does the Officer obtain that warrant then? The process involves at least the following:

1. Detaining the vehicle and occupant for an unspecified time
2. Officer Obey would need to have his police supervisory people contact a judge and inform the judge as to WHY a search warrant is needed (i.e. probable cause, etc.) (most local municipalities don't always have a judge just sitting around to do these things)

Judges do NOT routinely issue search warrants just to make local police happy. IF some subsequent search uncovers a criminal act. then there had better be sound reasons for the search warrant in the first place. If the search uncovers nothing...the reason for the warrant had better stand up to challange via a civil lawsuit.

If any cop builds a record of "bogus" stops and bogus requests for search warrants, that cop's credibility in the force goes out the window and you can bet the judge(s) (as do police management) know who those bad credibility cops are.

Good policing does not require arrogance or "attitude" on the part of police. Attitude cops give all cops a bad name and they undermine the service of the good cops who know and work as proffesionals within the constraints of our constitution and legal system.

Cheers,
Bill K2UNK

You folks are comparing apples and oranges. First a City, such as Tacoma or any other city, for that matter, can not or will not pass any law, ordinance or other bill that prohibits what the Federal Government allows.

Second, the idea that a local city or county police officer would have jurisdiction over radios on a military base is completely false. Only the CID or the MP's can enforce laws on a military reservation. Only with the permission of the Base Commander can LEOs enter the base to enforce civilian laws.

Third, the enforcement of federal law lies with the FBI. They are the enforcement branch of the FCC and only they can confiscate radio equipment that the FCC has ordered confiscated.

Forth, upon entering a military base, you no longer have the same rights or privileges that you enjoy off the base. You must obey military law and are subject to military rules and regulations, which you must agree to before entering the base or you will NOT be permitted to enter.

As I live within 50 miles of Ft. Lewis, Mc Chord Air Force Base (Tacoma), 10 mile of the Bremerton Naval Shipyard (Puget Sound Naval Shipyard), 35 miles of Naval Air Station Whidbey Island and 5 miles of the US Navy Nuclear Submarine Base Bangor, I am quite familiar with the rules, regulations and laws of what you can and can't do in, on or around these bases. I'm here to tell you that no such law or ordinance has ever been enacted nor has any LEO ever, to my knowledge, stopped or detained a radio operator for using there radio equipment in any manner allowed by law.

Arguing with a cop is stupid. If he had no reason for stopping you, he wouldn't have. Discussing the situation politely is another matter, and if that doesn't help, and it may not, you'd better plan on taking your complaint to another level and having your stuff together when you do. Even then don't expect to overcome a discretionary if arbritary decision made by a cop on the street. He will have so much discretionary authority that will be upheld all the way, if it comes to that. Your best course is to do everything he says at the time with no hint of opposition, and any question you have of his actions needs to be posed in a friendly, non-irritated manner. Most cops are reasonable people, and want no hassles -you'd probably not believe how many they have to put up with in the normal course of things-, but when one acts to become an added irritant when he has been stopped it's a sure path to more trouble than you already have, if any. Many times cops just want to set someone straight without the hassle of paperwork, and will let it go with a warning, if the situation justifies it.. You'd be surprised at all the paperwork involved in even a simple traffic arrest.
I can't imagine any rational cop wanting to take on a radio possession case without some other serious factor being involved. I doubt they'd want to do it a second time. But what the hey, I've been out of the loop for several years. Maybe new cops are different, like some new hams.

William No one said any law was enacted to allow LEO's the ability to confiscate equipment on a MIL base. But Tacoma did pass a law, they have no more authority than the FCC does with regards to these matters. you can basically say the FCC deputized these people to carry out there job's for them, at least regarding CB enforcement.

This page, which is on his own website, gives a potted history of his activities. http://member.newsguy.com/~shpxurnq/meow.html

Briefly, he is a waste of space. A 37 year old child with multiple personalities, who likes nothing better than causing annoyance to newsgroup readers, by posting & crossposting off-topic threads, flames, trolls & cascades.

He has way too much time on his hands, and a seemingly severe mental problem.

No one has been able to provide PROOF that the law had been passed.

Search the Tacoma web sites and see if any 'proof' exists. It just didn't happen, plain and simple.

Well Richard you can take the Lazy mans way out, perhaps the web page wasn't updated yet. But I have all the proof I need I called the City of Tacoma personally and the Law was passed on sept 18. Now you can say it isn't so but it indeed has passed. From what was described a loud mouth CBer was interfering with TV's, telephones etc in the City of Tacoma and he wouldn't stop so they passed a law to make him stop.

Call for yourself I am sure the Clerk there will wonder why the sudden interest in Tacoma's Law. But what the heck she was nice as pie to me

That scenario actually happened in Monroe, NC about 4 years ago. Seems there was a cop
there who took a liking to a young lady who worked in a restaurant. She was, indeed, movie star beautiful and also very married. The cop waited for her to get off one Friday night, followed her, and stopped her. He raped and murdered her for which he was convicted and sentenced to life in prison--I think he should've gotten the death penalty.

Sorry to tell that the above is not correct.

The FBI is most certainly not the enforcement branch of the FCC nor vice-versa. The FCC has its own Enforcement Bureau and take it from me, the FCC/EB does not want to hand any of its cases to the FBI if it can avoid it because dealing with the FBI is a one-way street (there is no give, only take, maybe the last legacy of JEdgar Hoover).

Radio equipment is not "confiscated" because it is not contraband.
It is seized (big legal difference) and can be forfeited to the government only by court order after an evidnetiary hearing which the U S Attorney must request within sixty days, and in which the owner of interest has the opportunity to show that his/her interest in the equipment was not related to the violation.

Seizure of radio equipment for non-compliance with communications law requires an order of the Federal District Court on application of the FCC showing probable cause, and is carried out by any Federal officer authorized to execute court orders, usually the U S Marshal Service or some other Federal agency on request of the Marshal Service.

Conversely, any Federal or local LEO (including the FBI) can seize radio equipment as evidence of a non-communications-law crime which they have jurisdiction to deal with, the same as any other evidence (court order or the Seven Magic Exemptions).

I'm going to be flying soon, and I'd like to take my HT with me in my carryon (no, I won't be using it on the plane! :) I'm concerned that having this may cause a problem at airport security, what with the current situation and all. Has anyone flown recently and carried their rig with them? If so, what was your experience at the airport?

I packed my Kenwood TH-F6A in my backpack alongside my laptop. It passed through the xray and airport security without a hitch.

I travel with a VX5-R, a Garmin E-Map, a Timeport P-935 and a Ericsson Cellular phone.Also usually have a Alinco DJ-X10 scanner. I have flown to Hawaii MANY times with the equipment and back east to Quincy,Il. You will not be hassled about having it, just be ready to turn any of it on so they can see they are real.....Eddie

Been off this group for almost a year. Came back to find that AF2Y is still living in his single-wide with four old Chryslers on concrete blocks in the front yard while entertaining delusions. That wife who's giving you $10.00 a week for beer and cigarettes -- is she the one who is your cousin?

Beware of those who brag about the money they have/make. They lie. Of course old Doc posted this message merely to garner comments and stir controversy. He hates not being the center of attention. His other posts have failed miserably to do this and he simply took another route since nobody wanted to "argue" with his political posts. Poor Doc, sitting there with nobody with whom to argue. His little mind is working furiously to find ways to bring the focal point of the news group's attention back to him.
What would really be a blow to Doc's ego? If nobody responded any further to his baited posts....
Ignoring Doc would be the ultimate blow to his ego.

Come on Rog. Time to go berserk again. You will awaken, take a tinkle and run immediately to the computer to check out the news groups.
Admit it. This is your life. These newsgroups are all that you have in life. Go ahead, Rog. Make your first round of posts, take a break for a while and come back in for round two.
Of course any and all responses you will post have been heard time after time. You repeat yourself and repeat yourself ad nauseaum.
Poor Rog...living the low life and hating every minute of it.

Your turn, punk-boy. Drop your putz and get on with plagiarizing.

Unless one of the guys is a ham.. then try to explain why you lied... maybe a concerned passenger may notice and tell the security guy you lied..
I never had any problems with my stuff. I carry a backpack with camera, laptop, TS-50 and handheld.. if asked I just say what it is.
Once had a search of our luggage at LAX (days after the TWA flight crashed near NY) and when they asked what the antenna tuner was I said I was a ham.. they closed the suitcase and didn't even search our second suitcase.. Not only did they know what a ham is, they knew
'we' could be trusted :-)

SLee's familiar with the Salvation Army, since he spent several years there at the Shelter in Dallas. This was after he was convicted on Domestic battery charges and had a restraining order in place to keep him from beating up his mother again.

Thanks for the info. Now I will triple my annual contribution to the Salvation Army just like the way I have started sending money to the Boy Scouts.

Hi Josh,

I fly several times a week and always take my equipment in my carry on. I usually have a complete APRS station, GPS, THD-7 etc. and usually another HT or my FT-817. I don't bother to carry my license except to Europe where I need it for CEPT operations. I've never had a serious issue. Currently they seem to be most interested in laptops which they insist be removed from the case for Xray.

You know Art is simply entertainment. He is better than most of the crap on the radio. At least his show has some entertaining people on it.

Actually it has Richard,
I don't like my little friend Dog Biskit, but he is correct. If you check the minutes for Sept. 18th you will see it was passed unanimously. As for it being caused by a CB'er, well think of the source for that information.

All you have to do is call and ask why the law was passed then Landturd, they will tell you the same thing they told me because of a Overpowered CB operator. It sure wasn't because of a ham, otherwise perhaps they would have banned amateur radio but as you see it is CB Radio Enforcement. Coming to a Town near you.
BTW, I don't like Landshark either he is a proven liar.

While I am in NYC with the American Red Cross, I am planning to take the test to get my ticket, and a friend gave me an early X-mas gift of a nice little 2 meter HT. So I have been listening to the chatter on the NYC area repeaters and heard some beligerant fool jamming the one repeater for a few days. Some people just need to grow up I guess, if someone does something to offend me, my radio and computer both have a nice little feature called the on/off switch. No need to jam, all that does is compound the situation.

No schematic needed. All you use is a transformer rated for adequate current and 120 in to 10 out.

If you want simple, basic, nothing but a transceiver, Radio Shack sells a basic 2-mtr xcvr that you can find on sale for under $150.00. I have one in my truck and it does everything I need it to do:

Advantages:
-- selectable 25 watts or 5 watts out
-- 10 memories
-- scan frequencies or memory
-- very small size
-- some functions can be controlled from the microphone

Disadvantages:
-- tiny knobs
-- when you turn it off, it always comes back on in the vfo mode -- that is, if you were working a memory channel and turn it off, when you turn it on, it comes back to the last freq set in the vfo -- you then push the MR (memory read) button and it hops back to the last memory channel you were working.

I also have a more exotic mobile rig, a Yaesu FT-5200 or something like that -- that is mounted in my old VW Beetle. I has a detachable front panel -- requires an optional connector cable -- that you can mount on your dash or any other convenient place then mount the radio under the back seat, in the trunk, etc. It has lots of bells and whistles:
-- dual-band (2 and 450)
-- listen on both bands while working one
-- 100 memories
-- different scan modes -- memory, frequency, band to band
-- controls fairly easy to use
-- most controls on the mike

If possible, look at what other people have and ask if they will let you twist the knobs -- you will find immediately that some rigs are easy to use without reading the manual, others are still a challenge to use after you have memorized the manual.

the note above reminds me of some of the same ole slimeballs I see each and every year at the Dayton Hamvention. I usually visit the Pizza --- and sure enough when a group gets up to leave, some stinkin slimeball ham says he has to go hit the men's room, waits for everyone to go out to the parking lot, then goes back to the table to pocket half the cash tip they left for the waitress. Usually the resturant personnel are so busy their don't see it but I've see this in ad least 3 resturants during lunch or dinner during Hamvention.
Usual technique is they take out a ten to "make change" with the tip, cop a quick glance, then pocket part of the tip like they made change and left the ten....
Does this happen around other hamfests? Boy oh boy we got some real cheap slimeballs in this hobby.

Nowadays they may very well make you prove it works as you have described. They hane been doing that with cameras for years, and I've had to prove that my turned-off scanner works as a scanner and not a transmitter when it is turned on.

The worst "security scan" that I've had with carry-on luggage was a piece of finished gemstone (green malechite) the size of an egg...must have looked like a hand grenade on the X-ray. And that was almost 15 years ago.

The police he describes are a bunch of untrained, juvenile loose cannons. The many I knew would not begin to enforce a new law without learning the law in detail, and many minor narrowly- focused laws such as this one would prety well be ignored without a formal complaint having been signed by a victim. Then there might be an investigation which might lead to an arrest if it proved to be warrented.

Most cops are not fools. Fools don't normally enjoy long tenure as police officers.

I disagree. If federal law allows state rights in the matter, then they certainly can and do pass such laws. A good example are the anti-firearms laws in many states.

Actually, it is federal marshals who have the law enforcement capability when it comes to FCC matters. The FBI has a more limited focus.

It sounds silly on the surface, but if you look at the underlying meaning, it's more like "It's so crowded (with chatter, lowlives, and interference), that no one (decent, interesting people) use it anymore".

Being a CB veteran of over 30 years, I can say with some certainty, that while the QUANTITY of users on CB may be still fairly high, the QUALITY of the people has certainly dropped.

Sorry, I am only showing what the attitudes are among the educated elite in this country.
Politicians see themselves as extremely valuable to society. And they have the authority and power to enforce that belief. They use the police as their muscle to enforce their will on the public.

Doctors see themselves as more valuable than most working class (blue collar) individuals. So do many college professors.

The courts have ruled that the police, with proper probable cause, can search a vehicle to include the trunk. You gave them that power when you obtained a drivers license. Now anything in a locked case most have a search warrant if you do not give your permission.
If you refuse, they can tow the car until they have a warrant.

Much of this has been worked out due the drug traffickers.

Go over to Alt.Law-Enforcement. Traffic stops and searches are a popular topic there. You would be surprised how often someone is stopped, who has no drugs yet has to go through such treatment. All it takes a police dog walking around your car and signaling that there are drugs there. A lot of good, decent folks have been subject to such treatment.

Just because you are good guy, in your mind, does not mean that someday a very professional cop will put you through this.
There are too many folks, even older folks, who look just like you, who are now in the drug traffic.

What I am describing is fairly normal. My guess is that you have had minimum contact with the courts over the years. The drug traffic has changed things to a great deal. Cops are far more hard nosed these days. Very professional but hard nosed. They assume that everyone is a criminal who might kill them. And the one time that they do let their guard down, the asshole is a criminal who does try to take them out.

The average cop hears a ton of horror stories about cops getting killed. Their training re-inforces such thinking.
What they want is to go home alive at the end of each day.

And most see their job as done once they have put you in front of a judge. After that it is the courts responsibility.

Go read Alt.Law-Enforcement for a few weeks.

Nice dream. It does not happen.
After a couple of terms in office,
most Mayors seem themselves as lords of fiefdom. They twist the city council to the point that they might as well be elected dictators (the council is more like a rubber stamp for their policies). I have seen it happen all across the country.

About 6% of all court cases make to trial.
The rest are settled, often by peal bargaining.
Too many folks see it as too much work and expense to fight a court battle. Especially the poor, who peal bargain at the highest rate.

Federal Law allowed towns the opportunity to craft laws and enforce them the same way the FCC could. They cannot make up there own set of rules to enforce, they can enforce only existing FCC laws, but they can be no different than what the FCC rules are in place regarding CB .

The average cop has less than 5 years on the force.
Most academy classes will see over half of the graduates out of law enforcement by 5 years. It is mostly a bunch of young, inexperienced officers out there.

No law really has merit until it has been in front of an appeals court. No one really knows the limits until then. The city attorney can give an opinion, but it has no merit as a ruling.

These are not loose cannons rather they are just inexperienced officers. They are very professional. But if they do not know what to do, they will cite into the courts and let the courts settle it.

No, I am a buddy of a lot of local cops.
And I understand them. Try to understand this. Most cops these days played high school football or baseball. They are jocks.
And think like a jock. They can get very juvenile when off duty and not wearing their "game face" (professional attitude). You should hear the wife of one friend, who is a LT in the narcotics section, complain how her husband and his fellow officers act. And he is over 50!

The drug trade has changed law enforcement.
They are very professional, while on duty. But they are also very hard nosed. And they assume the worst in you. And they are often right.

One negative out of a feedback rating of 943 hardly brands him as a crook, and the one negative is for damage due to UPS, who can destroy anything. The poster of the negative feedback has a -1 himself.

Somehow I pulled up a different user, Mr. Arndt indeed does seem

Here is a handy web site, you can put in a user id and pull up the negative feedback, saves going through pages just to find the negatives of a particular user.

I am back and the name is Laura.Well first off I would like to apologize for the post I sent about a month ago in reference to the fact that I am a waitress at a local haunt that hams frequent and their lack of tipping .I had just split up from my husband and things were starting to get to me. This group of hams would come in every week and occupy my table for quite some time and leave a minimal tip. I have learned to accept you folks I cant blame my bad day and take it out on you people I received several e mails from hams complaing about my statements and for that I am sorry. I never realized how many hams or amateur radio operators there were in the area. I saw your true colors one night when I was leaving work and slipped on the ice in the parking lot of my workplace I cant tell you how helpful all you people were that night with your support. I view you folks alot diffently now and for my past statements I take everything back My god forgive me and again I will never forget the night I fell when that so called Jerk of a person in a hat will letters k blah blah blah came over to assist me. Sorry ladies and gentleman..

And some Ph.D. at an university will treat you like you are pond scum. Look at how network techs get treated. Make the wrong comments to the some female employee and you are out the door.
Companies treat network techs like they were expendable. At least the Ph.D. usually has tenure.
Even cops have a merit board.

Again, not all of them are jocks. They are just like anyone else when they are off-duty they like to do the same things as anyone else does.

I have a good friend who is a LT at a local dept. He likes to go out to a few taprooms and have a good time he is not married thats his business. If you didn't know him you wouldn't know he was a cop let alone a LT going for the Chiefs Position that is opening up.

You just do not get it, do you?

It is more about your attitude than anything.
Get an attitude with a cop, he will find things to write tickets for.

Some cops do not care about ham equipment.
Some cops do. It depends whether the state has a law over radio usage like we are now seeing with Cell Phones.

The real point is that if the officer does decide to take the radio, he will be damned use that he can justify doing so.

No cop will take a radio unless he thinks he has a good reason to justify doing so. If he can justify his actions then filing complaints will have little effect.

Look at Chicago. Anybody can file a complaint.
Even file anonymously. Every cop in Chicago has a file full of complaints. It is looked at as being part of the job.

And look at how Cincinnati dealt with the riots last spring. The complaint process so favors the civilian that the cops just have given up. They gets so many points, they just move on to a surrounding suburb.

In many cities the complaint process is so flawed that it is meaningless. There are so many false complaints that the cops just ignore the system, look at it as a part of doing business.

And what is proper enforcement? After all guys like you have been caught trafficking drugs. So have nice little old grandmas. How is a cop going to know. He has to assume the worst.

How can a cop take a car for a traffic stop if he only suspects drugs? Yet it is done all the time. If he can justify it, that is all that matters.

The US Marshal's office seems to help the FCC
when they need "muscle".

While most forfeitures are done via the courts,
the drug laws have made that a bit fuzzy.

Reminds me of an Ohio judge in the late 70s that was accused of accepting sexual favors in exchange for lesser punishments. A local DJ coined the slogan, "You get me off, and I'll get you off."

Ellen, the truth is most hams are cheapos, I have known some who would stiff a poor waitress out of a tip in a New York Minute!!!

Their excuse for this is, "They need to get a job that pays a living wage", some excuse!!! The nice people like you wait on these screwball cheap skates, they badger you for numerous coffee refills, (free of course), and quality service. They should stay out of the diners and eat at home..

The police I know are not like that. They assume the person is a generally law abiding citizen, until they have reason to believe otherwise.

Of course, they take proper precautions when approaching an unknown vehicle or person.

There is more than enough detail written in police procedures to make that determination if it goes to a court case or a civilian complaint.

Absolutely false...because guys like me do NOT do drugs.

Such cops probably never rise to be truly good cops (IMHO).
If because they "assume the worst" they trample the rights of the public, especially those people who have done nothing, then the careers of those cops won't amount to much.

EXACTLTY! And just what do you think a good reason to do so would be? The answer to that question is the heart of the issue that I and others have been trying to get you to understand and articulate just what and when such a "taking" or confiscation" would have any merit at all.

Your experience is either very limited or you have

How someone looks is NOT suffiecient probable cause.
In the end, any search must be justified as to what the probable cause was.

to be settled out-of-court by the city making an

Cops don't tend to care much about the "feel good" laws that some towns enanct. Why should they when the cut and dried basic criminal laws and traffic enforcement easily take their time. As another poster noted here, the CB type law that Tacoma passed won't be enforced except by action initiated by a resident's complaint. The same is true for most nuisance laws. If none of the neighbors care that Mr. Smith's dog barks for hours, then the cops sure aren't going to.

Cheers,

>These are not loose cannons rather they are just inexperienced

If they are professional, then they won't take knee jerk actions just because they are inexperienced.
5 years of service had better be more than enough experience for any cop anywhere to have honed his skills and knowledge.

>But if they do not know >what to do, they will cite into the courts and let the courts settle

You say that and it is absolute rubbish. Maybe it is so in some backwoods towns in your area, but it sure isn't the case in the northeast, nor in many other areas I have either lived or traveled in. Police brass, municipal attornies, judges and elected officials do NOT take lightly to heavy handed police actions that end up in lost court cases and or in civil suits for false arrest.

The law that govern radio equipment seizures and forfeitures is very clear on what, how, and who. These are detailed in Section 510 of the Comm Act (Title 47, U.S. Code, Sect. 510).

Drug seizures go under different rules.

Bad idea... I would not lie to these people.

Quite simply say it's ham radio gear and you have a federal license to own and operate it.

If the person checking happens to be a ham then you don't get caught lying, and if he isn't he'll know you're legally entitled to the gear.

Personally I've carried a handheld IC-W31 in my carry on several times when flying to the UK and never had a problem.

6161. GMRS handhelds being marketed as FRS radios. Your thoughts?

This Christmas season, I have noticed small GMRS handhelds being sold as "family radios" at mass-merchandise stores. Wal-Mart, Target, BJ's Wholesale Club, Best Buy, and others are now selling these radios.

Audiovox started this trend with the GMRS-1525, and has now been joined by the likes of Midland, Uniden, and others. Sold in blister packs, often in pairs. They look, smell, and taste like FRS radios, but with a big difference:

On the packaging, much is made of "4-mile range" and "2 watts of power." Little or no mention is made of the FCC license which is required to transmit with these radios.

Apparently, these are becoming quite popular as the "next generation of family radios." A quick check of GMRS frequencies on the scanner revealed lots of children, call tones, and roger beeps. Just like the FRS frequencies.

What are your thoughts on the manner in which these radios are being marketed?

Legal?

Ethical?

Now why is she not filing wrongful arrest charges against the police? Would such a lawsuit stop the police from over reaching

And what makes you think that you are safe from the police over reaching in the current setting of paranoia over terrorism.

Unfotunately the manufacturers and marketers are placing profit before legal compliance. I haven't heard the GMRS band being "corrupted" yet but I can imagine it is only a matter of time. Thank God they haven't disturbed MURS yet.

Yeah, well someone needs to explain it to the NY State Police.

A few years back they were interpreting their scanner laws in such a way as to be able to arrest your non-ham wife if she happened to be driving the car with all your mobile gear installed, and BTW impounding the car. Even if all your gear was straight ham stuff and no scanner involved.

This is immaterial. There are laws against such things at an airport. Anyone stupid enough to try to run a grenade, fake or not, through the x-ray machine is asking for trouble.

And it certainly is reason to arrest the person - unlike the case where the CB radio in my vehicle MIGHT be capable of operating out of band. Without evidence of such operation, there is no justification for searching the vehicle or examining the radio.

This guy apparently associates with the dregs of the police forces.
His statement that most police last less than 5 years is completely outside my personal experience with the police I have encountered in various cities around the country.

But there IS evidence. According to FCC rules, use is implied if the equipment is hooked up and fully functional - whether or not you happen to be transmitting at the time.

Just tell them it's HAM radio gear, you have a license, and you need it at your destination.

No way imply at ALL any operation at ANY time, even 'just' receive, aboard a commercial carrier. You do NOT have any right to do that AT ALL under the FAR.

If the "scanner law" (as well as the "radio interception" law) is properly drafted, it would be specific that it covered equipment being used in the commission of a crime or in furtherance of some illegal purpose, as California's law states.

BUT use of a CB is legal for anyone. The issue becomes one in which there is NO proof that the radio is capable of illegal power or pirate frequencies. Indeed, the concept of pirate frequencies is, in itself, contrary to the CB enforcement by a municipality such as Tacoma. Likewise, having any ham rig is NOT implication by FCC rules that illegal use was made of that ham rig.

BUT, the possession of such a device is probable cause in almost anyone's mind to stop and possibly arrest. Not so for a legal radio. Even the claimed "illegal" CB radios can be used by hams on ham frequencies as long as the signal meets FCC requirements... and...again, mere possession does NOT constitute proof of illegal use.

The revised scanner law in NJ does exactly that too. The radio reception violation ONLY applies if the reception is being done as part of a criminal act. The law also specifically exempts radar detectors as being considered illegal reception. It is a good law that does only what it is intended to do. The old law was used by some police to detain people or to charge them when nothing else could stick. The old law forbade any radio in a vehicle capable of recieveing police or government frequencies.

Almost but not quite.

Use is implied for equipment hooked up or capable of being hooked up if there is extrinsic evidence that the device was used - either "before and after" off-the-air signal level measurments showing that mysteriously the level went down after the FCC agent knocked on the door (another agent monitoring with a spectrum analyzer) or complaints of interference that mysteriously goes away when the station is operated at 4 watts.

FCC agents aren't fools.

Not completely true. When an amplifier is "hooked up and fully functional" your statement may be true, but a "hooked up and fully functional" A.R.S. radio is not evidence of illegal operation.

DXERS UNLIMITED

MID-WEEK EDITION
TUESDAY, DECEMBER 18, 2001

By Arnie Coro CO2KK

Send your comments, questions and ideas to: arnie@radiohc.org

Hi, amigos! With less than 2 weeks left of the year 2001, old man Sol, our nearest star, continues to provide radio hobby enthusiasts with very nice propagation conditions.... Early morning Tuesday local time in Havana, I was able to pick up some interesting signals that indicated a very fast rise of the daytime maximum useable frequency curve.... and although solar activity is expected now to move down for the next few days, the fact is that there is so much ionization at the higher levels of the ionosphere that free electrons are really plentiful, even after the Sun sets.... Solar flux still above the 200 mark, and the effective sunspot number has now moved down to around 160, still an impressive figure by all standards...

Item two: I have just updated my list of all the ways that you and I may enjoy our wonderful hobby!!! And it has grown to 63 different and clearly identifiable ways of having a nice time with our hobby, from monitoring natural radio signals on the extremely low frequencies of ELF to playing with LASER BEAM communications in order to add points to your station when participating in a VHF-UHF-SHF amateur radio contest.... And don't forget such nice ways of enjoying the hobby as antique radio restoration, radio kit-building, computer-aided design of antenna systems, building amateur radio equipment from original designs and some very interesting aspects of the radio hobby like doing intruders watch on the amateur radio bands to help keep the ham bands clear of illegal users !!!

Yes my friends, the list now adds up to 63 different ways you and I may enjoy the hobby....radio has the unique feature that it is a never-boring hobby .... with some aspects of it costing next to nothing, like the way many of us seem to have started here... SHORT WAVE LISTENING, the flagship of all radio hobbies!!!!

Item three: You have questions and Arnie answers them section of Dxers Unlimited will reply today to a question sent by several listeners in relation to the so-called coaxial cable antenna, a very easy to make dipole that requires just a length of coaxial cable and one antenna connector, plus a small length of PVC insulating electrical tape and a small amount of silicone weather sealant, and as always at the end of the show, I'll provide you the most up to date HF propagation update and forecast which, even when heard during our late-late show at just after 0530 UTCm is never more than 12 hours old....

Stay tuned right on this same short wave frequency or if you are listening to me on the world wide web streaming audio, keep your computer connected to Radio Havana Cuba... Margarita Delgado is my sound engineer and producer , I am Arnie Coro, radio amateur CO2KK, back with you in a few seconds...

This is the mid-week edition of Dxers Unlimited, you can always reach me via e-mail by sending your message to arnie@radiohc.org and I will reply to you directly with an answer to your radio hobby-related questions as soon as I see your message displayed on my computer screen....

Now here is item three, our popular YOU have questions and Arnie answers them section of the show.... Today, I will be answering a question sent in by listeners in Cuba, Canada, the United States of America and several European nations, plus Australia... The question has to do with a very simple way of making a low-cost yet effective dipole antenna, that has proven to be very useful for portable work in the frequency range from 10 meters all the way up to the 2 meters amateur radio bands, and all frequencies in between.

This coaxial cable dipole, can also be made for lower frequencies, but it is a bit more troublesome to do the tricky operation of pushing the coaxial cable braid back over the outer jacket of the cable for a length of more than about 2.5 meters or eight feet required for the 10 meter band version.

The "Coaxial cable push back dipole," as it is known among radio amateurs, is an excellent emergency antenna for the 10, 6 and 2 meter bands, and ranks among the lowest-cost skywires that the radio hobbyist may build and install, as it only requires enough coaxial cable and an antenna male connector.... The coaxial cable push back dipole is one of my favorite portable antennas for the 2 meter band handie talkie when travelling, as it has the advantage over the 300 ohm TV twinlead J pole, that it is smaller in length and does not require any soldering at all... something that has helped me to build these antennas even right in the middle of a communications emergency with the help of my faithful pocket knife, if a length of coaxial cable with a connector at one end was available from a broken antenna... The only thing needed is that one end of your coaxial cable will have an appropriate type of antenna connector for the radio that you are using soldered to it.... Now, ready to copy, ready??? Here is how to make a coaxial cable push back dipole following these easy step-by-step instructions:

First calculate the length of your dipole antenna for the center of the frequency band you want to operate your radios on... Here is the formula: Divide the number 143 by the frequency in megaHertz, and your result will come out in meters... For example, let's make a coaxial cable push back dipole for the 2 meter amateur band.... Center frequency: 146 megaHertz.... so -- very easy -- divide 143 by 146 and you will find out that the overall length of the dipole, of course, your result will be less than one meter in length, exactly 979 millimeters, or in round numbers 98 centimeters.

Now, step two: Very carefully remove the outer plastic jacket of the coaxial cable for a length about one and a half meters, to make things easier for the next step. That is, strip the cable of its outer jacket for roughly one and a half meters and then proceed to fold back the coaxial cable shield or braid over the cable's plastic insulation, in a way similar to what you do when you are removing your stockings.... The braid will then leave a length of the center of the coaxial cable exposed to form the other half of the dipole antenna....

Step three is a very easy one: Just trim the braid that is over the coaxial cable's outer jacket so that it will be 49 centimeters long... And also cut the center conductor to slightly more than 50 centimeters, so that you can trim it later for minimum standing wave radio in case you want to transmit with this antenna...

Step 4 is also very simple: Find a length of PVC plumbers pipe of about 100 millimeters or 4 inches long, and just wind as many turns of the coaxial cable as will fit, starting from the point where the shield or braid ends. This is the coaxial choke balun, essential for the proper operation of this type of antenna....

As you may realize, this is just another way of building a half wave dipole antenna, so its gain, compared to a standard half wave dipole will be zero db d, or zero decibels over a dipole, as this is the reference antenna for practical radio work....

By the way, you must install the antenna according to the polarization used by the stations you want to listen or talk to, so in the case of the two meter amateur band FM, the coaxial dipole must be installed vertically, as by convention, and to facilitate communications with mobile and hand held stations using vertical antennas, the 2 meter FM amateur sub band stations all use vertical polarization.

Of course that you can make a coaxial cable push-back dipole in just a few minutes for any particular frequency in the range of from about 25 to 250 megaHertz, by applying the formula, and proceeding to first remove the outer plastic jacket for enough length, pushing back the shield or braid over the cable's plastic jacket, and trimming the length of the center conductor and the exposed braid to the appropriate length to make the dipole resonate. Don't forget that the coa_ial cable choke is essential for the proper operation of this antenna, and here I must add that the choke for the lower frequencies in the range from 25 to 50 megaHertz must be wound on a length of PVC pipe of no less than 3 inches in diameter, that is 75 millimeters, winding at least 8 turns. In the range from 50 to 100 megaHertz reduce the diameter of the pipe to 2 inches, that is 50 millimeters , and as mentioned previously for the antennas in the range from 100 to 250 megaHertz, the coaxial choke diameter must be one inch or 25 millimeters.

I have done some experiments regarding the number of turns required for optimum operation of the antenna, and it is between 6 and 8 turns... Please notice that this coaxial choke is just the same cable wound over the PVC pipe "coil form" to effectively isolate the antenna from the feedline.

By tying a nylon fishing line to the end of the exposed center conductor you can install the coaxial cable push-back dipole vertically at any location, for example, it may hang from a tree branch, or supported by a plastic or wooden mast...

If you want to use the antenna, as I do here, as part of your permanent receiving or receiving and transmitting station, then carefully seal the place where the coaxial cable shield or braid separates from the center conductor by winding several layers of plastic insulating tape, and then sealing with silicone compound....

Many Cuban radio amateurs use this antenna for 2 meters FM by placing the dipole inside a length of PVC pipe for additional weather protection, but they soon found add that the presence of the dielectric so near to the antenna changed its operating frequency, so the length had to be trimmed experimentallly for minimum standing wave ratio...

Si amigos, yes my friends, oui mes amis, one of the easiest to make and lower cost antennas -- the coaxial cable push back dipole is an excellent performer, and all it takes to make one is a length of coaxial cable, an antenna connector of the type used by your rig and some plastic PVC insulating tape and a bit of silicone sealing compound for the portable version of the antenna.

An antenna for permanent, fixed, station use will be better protected if placed inside a length of PVC plumbers pipe of about 25 to 50 millimeters diameter, but again, you must carefully trim the length of the center conductor half of the dipole and of the braid for minimum standing wave ratio!!!

Any doubts, any doubts on the how to make your own coaxial cable push back the braid dipole? Then just send me an e-mail and maybe I can send you a nice .jpg picture of yours truly and the most recently built antenna!!! Send mail to arnie@radiohc.org or VIA AIR MAIL, a postcard is fine, to Arnie Coro, Radio Havana Cuba, Havana, Cuba.

And now as always at the end of the show, here is Arnie Coro's HF plus 6 meters propagation update and forecast: Solar activity moving down now, but still high enough to support very high daytime maximum useable frequencies, amigos!!! There is still one solar active region with the complex magnetic configuration required to produce solar flares. Running typical HF propagation forecasting software is not that difficult at all, and at least one of the most recent ones is absolutely freeware and works very well... it is W6EL's brainchild, and Sheldon C. Shallon, radio amateur W6EL, who owns the copyright, but kindly has made the program available free, in the public domain...

Well a test run of the W6EL's HF propagation software that I did just before finishing to type this script showed that the maximum useable frequency from Havana, Cuba to Buenos Aires, Argentina stays above 30 megaHertz from 13.30 UTC to 22.30 UTC, reaching a peak of 38 megaHertz at 19 hours UTC, so you see what I mean, the second peak of solar cycle 23 is doing a very good job to push those daytime maximum useable frequencies way up... Enjoy them amigos, and don't forget to try our new streaming audio from www.radiohc.cu!

Aww, how cute, "He Said What?" posting his family photo album here. This was a picture of his drunken, prison bitch father, who obviously from the You're being to optimistic, Jim. This anonymous coward has spent his formative years being shuffled from foster home to foster home and just can't get out of those "special education" classes.

Let's see where Faggot Lee gets his "intelligence" and I use the term liberally.

"Shithead 'cocksucking expert' Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> slobbered in message news:get.on.the.air@houston-hunks.com...
"Daddy was a basketball star at Notre Dame University in South Bend, Indiana. He lettered during all of his seven years as an undergraduate"

Poor Faggot Lee, this is exactly why his I.Q. is the same as his shoe size.
When his daddy had to take 7 years to complete a 4 year (undergraduate degrees usually take 4 years) degree, you can extrapolate where anonymous coward Lee gets his "intelligence" <snicker> genes from.

Yes, YOU Stagger Lee:

Idiot-at-Large Village Idiot
Perpetual Moron

You have shown your ignorance, your inability to rationalize a situation, your inability to show even the smallest amount of intelligence.

You speak as a Cyber Cop... Is that what you look at yourself as being? As self-imposed-marshal-of-usenet?
Is that your little mission in life? You seek to impose your views on everyone else and to hell with the accepted norms.

Idiot.

Fuck Head.

Loser.

Are you an ignorant fucking WebTV user? You act like
it.

First there was AOL'ers, now there is WebTV. It's nice for AOL'ers to finally have someone to pick-on.

You get your No-Code first? Cant do Morse? I bet you dont know the difference between a Zener Diode and a Transistor.

I bet you keep goats in the house for companionship...
Or maybe it's just the smell eminating from your boyfriend's ass that smells like a goat.

I bet you suck the jack-bumps off your boyfriend's balls don't you?

You are a sick, sick person. You need help. You need to seek a professional psycho-therapist to help you in your time of need.

You have a growing number of police, and politicians,
who feel that the public does not have a right to own
such technology. That includes things like ham radio,
CB, scanners as well as things like guns.

There is the feeling that the public can not be trusted, that too many use technology for crime or to try to overthrow the government. Many would prefer that only those who are paid on a professional basis should be allowed to have access to radios or weapons.

Mitnik wasn't even particularly interesting as a hacker... just obscenely stupid.

Besides, it's one thing to fiddle with security because you enjoy it... another to be a thief, which he was. I thought that sort of thing was admirable when I was 16, but I don't really have any respect for Mitnik. I can name a number of people who outclass him... hell, I even work with some.

The original judgement was far far too harsh... and the methods used after his apprehension were just plain wrong. But I do believe a little jail time was called for - just not what they wanted to give him.

Well, for once he is right about that. In Los Angeles I had deputies on transit detail give me a hard time about operating 2m on the green line, and that was with me being a carded member of DCS (the RACES earthquake unit that's run by LASD) and with an earphone installed. The same deputies didn't blink at all the cell phones in operation on the same train.

I got the impression that transit detail is only one step up from Bunco and two steps up from Vice.

I know this will sound kind of lame, but I was recently appointed to be the ward emergency communications for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints Beaverton Second Ward. Anyhoo - I'm collecting equipment - so if you have anything you would like to get rid of cheap please e-mail me (or if you would like proof of who I am or if you would like a signed letter of intent or whatever).

I know there's a lot of stuff out there - I visited an entire garage out in the country the other day from a operator who had passed away - but the remaining family wanted a lot of money for what they had - and I just got back to work after being unemployed for 4 months.

Thanks!

Close, very close. All it takes is a "reasonable suspicion" to search a vehicle. "Probable cause" is the standard used to make an arrest.

> > > You gave them that power when you obtained

Actually, the USSC ruled that police can perform warrantless searches of vehicles. Permission to search is not a requisite for obtaining a driver's license. We don't need permission if we have a reasonable suspicion.

Bzzzzt.......wrong. If it is withinn the driver's reach, I can ask him to open the locked case without a warrant. If he refuses, then we go for a warrant, where I must be able to articulate my reasonable suspicion.

However, we must be able to demonstrate the reliablilty of the dog. If the dog continues to hit on vehicles that do not contain controlled substances, then the dog is useless when we get in court and a search is challenged.

Absolutely correct.

Not "probable cause"......"reasonable suspicion."

No cop is his right mind is going to attempt to make an arrest or even become concerned because your CB "slides" above 40 or below 1.

Unless the municipality has a "Finegold Bill" ordinance and the officer is assigned to investigate complaints which bear on out-of-band operation. And even then, arrest is not an option.
Citation into court is.

It has to be articulable and excludes areas where there is a "reasonable expectation of privacy", where you need a warrant.. This includes locked containers and (if memory serves) things like backpacks, etc.
>Bzzzzt.......wrong. If it is withinn the driver's reach, I can ask him to

You can ask any damn thing you want. But you cannot search such areas without a warrant, except with the drivers permission. And the "drivers reach" business is a specific exception for the safety of the officer, so he can search for weapons.

True, if he just happens to find contraband, he can arest for that. BTW, occasionally, this legal fiction matters--- e.g., in theory you can't search an unlocked container (such as a band-aid box) if it is too small to hold a weapon.

The dogs are notorious for false positives. In fact, there is a bit of a fuss on this right now in San Francisco, where they are using sniffer dogs on BART. Although this is hard to explain to the judge (who likely never heard of "conditioning" and doesn't want to consider all this science stuff), the dog learns to respond to cues from his handler as well as what he smells. Dogs can't be cross-examined by a pesky defense attorney and are assumed to have no hidden agendas.

Actually, with the new rigs, one should be able to eliminate the CW interference. Two QSOs could occupy the same place (assuming, of course, a really good notch filter - with DSP, quite possible). I have never deliberately interfered with any stations. That one time, W2OY was strong both at my QTH in Pittsford, NY, and at the other guy's QTH. There is no way he did not know we were there. You'd have to ask some old timers who were active back in the 60s and before about Mike, W2OY. He was quite a work of art. My understanding is, however, that he was just 'breaking stones' and he was really a decent guy in person. He used to call CQ with something like 'CQ CQ, no lids, kids, space cadets or school bus riders. No wet-bottom boys. Only class A operators on this frequency, from W2OY'. He was something. Jamming on FM repeaters is something else. Obviously, only the strongest signal gets repeated. There is no way for 2 signals to occupy the same place at the same time. Forget that one. Fortunately, I've never heard that (at least on the 440 repeaters in our area - some of which are linked to 2 meters).

There is STILL a major difference between having a firearm which requires a license or permit in most states as opposed to a radio which requires NOTHING as justification of possession. N9NWO continues to dreg up poor anologies rather than ever offering one justification of probable cause to inspect and/or confiscate a radio.

That is hogwash. I haven't seen any such "growing numbers" opposed to CBs, radios, etc. Indeed, there has been NO movement to ban scanners at all...rather some states (e.g. NJ) have relaxed old laws which did ban scanners in autos.

More hogwash. Even if there is some such sentiment, there hasn't been any support for that attitude in the press,
the legislatures, etc.

Look for the post by Lenny Stover. He is a police officer and pointed out that he has the right, backed by the USSC, to inspect everything that is in car.

His quote:
"Actually, the USSC ruled that police can perform warrantless searches of vehicles. Permission to search is not a requisite for obtaining a driver's license. We don't need permission if we have a reasonable suspicion."

Nothing happened that they knew about. Maybe they interfered with equipment the pilot didn't need to use at the time (like during cruise at 30Kfeet). Or the pilot had a backup he switched to. The pilot may have figured something broke down and he'll have it fixed/swapped out at the next airport.

I've heard stories of a flight during the Superbowl where passengers listening to the game on radios caused interference with pilot equipment. And that is just LO leakage, not intentional emitters.

Not that simple. Having stopped a car under "reasonable suspicion", LEO's can search the area under control of the driver or a passenger for weapons. The legal theory is that the safety of the officer allows for a specific exemption to 4th amendment protections. If, incidental to this search, they find contraband, this is admissible as evidence.

Admittedly, as a practical matter, this is all a legal fiction that allows officers to search when and where. But it still means there are some limitations. E.g., LEO's cannot search a locked container, which gives an "expectation of privacy". Similarly, a local judge once threw out contraband found in a metal Bandaid box after a defense attorney pointed out that it was too small to have held any weapon and thus should not have been opened.

Hi all,
I'm looking for data on the following YIGs. IF you can help I would really appreciate data on voltages, currents and pin outs

Make HP, P/N 5086-7267
Make HP, P/N 8555-60081
Make Avantek, P/N Y084-2715
Make Avantek, P/N ASF-8368M

On the avanteks, I'm looking for tune and fm currents, on the Y084 I'd like to know what the fm filter pins are for? I thought it might be a generic housing but the pins are wired to a coil (i think - it's got 1 ohm across them)

On the HPs, voltages, currents and pin out

Please email me any info that may be helpful

Thanks in advance

Officers have been wrong before - which is why evidence from searches is sometimes ruled inadmissable.

His statement is too broad to be true all the time.

This is not a blanket power. In theory, the exemption to the 4th amendment is given only to search for only for weapons to protect the officer.
And then only the area under control of the driver or the passengers. There are specific exemptions for locked containers and (if memory serves) things like backpacks which give an "expectation of privacy". At least nominally, the 4th amendment still is in effect.

Arguando, an LEO might be able to confiscate a cell phone that he actually sees cause a traffic hazard. Otherwise, not.... In theory, anything might cause a "hazard to safe driving".

You'll need to pass the 5 WPM CW exam (most find it relatively easy), and then the written theory test for General Class. My recommendation is the Gorden West (N6OAA) study guide, available at Radio Shack for about $10. It contains the complete General Class question pool, providing the answers AND explanation of material covered in the question. Definitely a worthwhile investment.

It's usually called "contempt of cop".

While I've got the opportunity here, I'm in the process of writing up a petition to the FCC to add verbiage to our wallet license citing 47 USC 302a(f)(2). Something along the lines of:

"This license is issued pursuant to Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934. As such, the bearer shall not be subject to action by state or local government for lawful operations under this license.
47USC302a(f)(2)"

It wouldn't have to be large type or anything. I recall our old tickets having at least the 'pursuant to Section 301' verbiage, so it would be a matter of replacing something that was removed and adding a bit to it.

The intent is to make it clear that Feingold only applies to Part 95 operations and not anywhere else. Basically do the job that congress and the ARRL should have done year before last. It likely won't fly, but at least it would put the FCC on notice that some of us think there's a problem here.

Thoughts?

He is totally right. The officer has the right, confirmed by the courts, to inspect anything that is a car. Especially anything that is within reach of the driver.

While this has been mostly used over issues like firearms and drugs, it can apply to cell phones and radios if these devices would constitute a hazard to safe driving.

I do not think that you realize how much authority
the courts have given the police over the last 10

I gather that you do not read that many papers everyday. The Washington Post, LA Times, NY Times, Chicago Tribune all go on "crusades"
every so often over gun ownership, cell phones, scanners. The elite do not like the fact that the masses understand, and use, technology.

If those tales are true, the aircraft industry is in deep trouble. I operate a laptop & 50W 2M packet station while my child bride hunts DX on a 100W HF rig beside me with no mutual interference on cheap consumer equipment and I have a tad of knowledge about the immunity of military gear. OTOH I read that airport radars are often down for months waiting for obsolete tubes at the same time the military is scrapping 3D radars only one generation old so I wouldn't key up on an airplane either.

Hi, I'm new to hamming, and taking the test on January 17th for my Tech License. But this strikes me as funny I guess. One would wonder why Ham Radio would be immune to any of the "human" things affecting so many other aspects of our lives. How many people drive 20 miles over the speed limit and claim "nothing bad has happened so far"? Or for that matter, in most every thing inlife there is that faction of folks who believe they are above the "rules".

Isn't the point of Ham Radio supposed to be that it is inhabited by people who have the common sense to police themselves?

Because when it comes right down to it, I'm getting my ham license because I can't stand the snake pit of Citizen Band and I want to be involved in radio where people make a difference to the hobby.

Maybe, when someone claims they have used their rigs on a plane with no ill effects someone should mention to them that, while true they may not have noticed it, by claiming such they are making a mockery of the entire Amateur Radio mission.

Bill,

Morse Code requirement is 5 wpm and I'm pretty sure is now a fill in the blank 10 question test. You can also pass with 25 correct consecutive characters copied.

CW didn't come easy for me but I managed to pass. If I can, just about anyone should be able to. I would recommend getting one of the software programs for learning CW:
http://www.speroni.com/AH0A.html

And then taking the practice runs at:
http://www.arrl.org/w1aw/morse.html

The other part of the test should be no problem for you.

"Why? Simple. I am an outlaw CBer. You have spoken out against me one too many times. If life were ideal I could simply shut you up like I do on the freeband by cranking up my big box (just kidding). But this is less than ideal so I have to tolerate you and your hammie pals. I am disgusted by your rule-following, goody-two-shoes holier-than-thou attitude towards radio, Lelnad. Rules are going to be broken and I am going to freeband and that is all there is to it. I will continue to promote illegal CB because I can. Anarchy of the airwaves is where we are headed and you can't come to terms with it, can you? Too bad but 28.085 is just the beginning and it irritates you doesn't it? I am glad, now go back to your kennel with dogie and the rest and lap your wounds"

You have a growing number of police, and politicians,
who feel that the public does not have a right to own
such technology. That includes things like ham radio,
CB, scanners as well as things like guns.

"As I am telling nad and dogie and his lapdog cb-hating cronies constantly. Radio belongs to the people and we freebanders know this.
Don't get me wrong there are some good hammies like Dick McCollum who give advice on linears and extra channels but they are few and far between"

I was replying based on the 'perception' that someone making the statement the way it was posted was confrontational and just 'sounded' like they felt they had the right to operate aboard an aircraft.

I personally HAVE operated. RX only, and with pilot interaction. He wanted to know when I turned it on, and when I turned it off. But this was many years ago, 1981 to be exact, and now the rules are, I believe, even stricter.

You have failed to provide any documentation whatsoever that

(a) there are police who feel that the public does not have the right to own radio transceivers and guns
(b) their numbers are growing significantly
(c) there are politicians who feel that the public does not have the right to own radio transceivers and guns
(d) their numbers are growing significantly

You may make one final attempt.

I didn;t know that you lived in some third-world country where a radio transmitter is equated to a dangerous weapon.

If that's what your state law says, it's BAD law. What can/will TOU do to get it fixed - if that's what it actually says.

But note that a piece of radio equipment - even if not permissable to be used on the air - is not contraband and is not seizable as such. It can be seized as evidence of a non-radio-law crime, such as a scanner being used by a lookout.

You'll be surprised at what the FCC will do with suggestions like that. Many years ago, a staffer got a cash incentive award for suggesting that commercial operator, amateur, ship,. and aircraft license applications be printed on different color papers so that they could be sorted more easily when they arrive by mail.

According to the actual text of Public Law 106-521 (the Federal CB Law) probable cause of criminal radio activity is only required by this law when searching a commercial vehicle:

SECTION 1. STATE AND LOCAL ENFORCEMENT OF FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION REGULATIONS ON USE OF CITIZENS BAND RADIO EQUIPMENT.
Section 302 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 302a) is amended by adding at the end the following:

(sections 1-6 removed for brevity)

`(7) The enforcement of a statute or ordinance by a State or local government under paragraph (1) with regard to citizens band radio equipment on board a `commercial motor vehicle', as defined in section 31101 of title 49, United States Code, shall require probable cause to find that the commercial motor vehicle or the individual operating the vehicle is in violation of the regulations described in paragraph (1).'.

Gotta have probable cause, the same standard as for arrest and

Did you notice this on the page?

This is an actual tombstone in the Mount Royal Cemetery, located in the center of Montreal. The St. Joseph Oratory is visible in the background at the top right.

That's MORE important that the insulting cryptic message based on letters

Um.. you're wrong.. I was never an illegal keyclown, but then again, I don't expect you to know the difference. I ran the legal 40 with legal power and with legal gear.

You can call names all you want, but it doesn't change the truth.

But you're right. I did go from CBer (which I ran sideband for a bit over 20 years, and ran professionally) to extra in 6 months, 1 week, and two days. Of course, I worked hard for nine years (I started drilling the code in '92) to overcome my dyslexia so I could pass the code requirement.

What of it?

Sounds Like a story for QRZ or 73 magazine. Perhaps you can get Twisty to author it, and any money made off the idea I will recieve my normal stipend of 25%.
I have applied for a copyright so don't think your gonna pull a fast one on me and sell your story without paying me.

Well, there's always going to be some uneducated slug, who has a Messiah Complex, thinking he has every right to be above the law. Charles Manson, Adolph Hitler, Jim Jones, Son of Sam, The Zodiac Killer, the list goes on and on...

I'll assume that anyone who believes radio should be free to the unlicensed public, also can't understand why they keep getting their driver's license revoked for driving under the influence, why they can't yell "fire" in a crowded theater, and they believe the people in handcuffs on COPS are just being harrassed...

LOL!

What sport these losers are.

If it is within the person's reach, a warrant is not required.

You just contridicted yourself. If it is within the driver's reach, locked or not, I can search the damn thing. You may not think so, but the USSC does.

A .22 caliber derringer fits nicely in a bandaid box! I'd be happy to show the court, when justifying my search.

The issue would be what would the judge rule.
The FCC preempts all local law regarding ham transcievers which have extended recieve capability.
Few hams have ONLY a scanner in their car that I know.

'll rephrase the statement/challenge:
There is STILL a major difference between having a firearm which requires a license or permit in most states as opposed to a radio which requires NOTHING as justification of possession. N9NWO continues to dreg up poor anologies rather than ever offering one justification of REASONABLE SUSPICION to inspect and/or confiscate a radio.

I have seen public opposition to gun ownership, mixed opposition to cellphone use in an auto (no one seems to want to ban any total use/ownership of cellphones) ...BUT not one crusade at all against scanners. There has been NO demand to ban scanners at all, even for specific frequencies, since the FCC rules prohibiting scanners manufactured that can recieve cellular.

When N9NWO sees a 'source' that comes from all the Newspapers he claims to read and then he nor they themselves do not provide any source to these allegations regarding opposition to radios in

The "young cop" could care less if I have a whole 18-wheeler loaded with radios, with or without FCC stickers. It is not against the law, even the Tacoma law, to possess a non-FCC certificated radio (or dozens of them)!

The violation is related to USE, not possession.

Sort of the like lady on our lake who decided one day to take her husbands fishing boat out into the middle of the lake, away from the kids, to anchor and read her book in peace. Along comes a conservation officer and asks for her fishing license. She has none (she doesn't fish), so he says he'll have to charge her with "fishing without a license". She replies "But I wasn't fishing".... He responds that she has fishing equipment, so he can probably make the charge stick. To which she replies, "Well, then I charge you with rape." He is aghast ..... how could she do that? "Well, you are in possession of the equipment."

So go stuff your "superior cops can search my car for illegal radios" crap up where the sun doesn't shine.

With all kind regards

Try a simple experiment. Assuming you have a scanner or Ham rig capable of monitoring the 108-118 portion of the aviation band.

Pick a freq between 108 and 118 - they are used for navigation and Instrument Landing Systems.

Now slowly tune a portable receiver between 97.3 and 107.3
Somewhere in this range (10.7 below the scanner freq) you will hear the LO of your portable.

So there you are with a little radio up close to the window transmitting a very weak signal on the frequency your pilot may be relying on to find the runway in miserable weather. Depending on where you are seated you might even be able to see the aircraft antenna.

That's what happened during the Superbowl.
My little Sony portable completely obliterates local navigation signals.

Not sure what military gear you are familiar with but the US military is in the process of a major upgrade to their ILS receivers to meet European interference standards. I would assume (makes an ass of 'u' and 'me') that most professional civil avionics meet European standards since many of the aircraft at one time or another find themselves in European airspace.

And, of course, avionics uses frequencies throughout most of the spectrum. Certainly from 100 kHz up through a few GHz depending on the aircraft.

I too operate a laptop, a desktop, a 50W 2M/70cm rig and a 100W HF rig with no problems. But I have completely disrupted an ATC radar display by operating a 2m HT in the room.

Dear Middie:

I've been licensed longer than CB is old. Elmered a batch of freebanders over the years and all of them were decent amateurs. If his coming out of CB is supposed to disturb my digestion, sorry. The numbers game alone assures that most people becoming radioactive do so via CB.
He seems to have handled his problem; can you say the same??

Horse shit!!!!!

Your little HT becomes a low level transmitter as soon as it's turned on (because of internal injection frequencies).

It is within a few yards of very sensitive receivers looking for navigation signals, often feeding "fly by wire" flight assistance equipment.

Pull the batteries, put it in checked luggage, and pick it up at baggage claim at your destination. Have a nice flight.

With all kind wishes,

de Hans, K0HB

My, my. Aren't we ignorant of pop culture.

FYI, I was referring to the troll dolls that were popular in the 70s. They were those little things with the big eyes and different colored, Don King style of hair. Smaller ones were often on the ends of pencils, or on keychains, or hanging from rearview mirors. They're still around, but not as popular as they once were. Although they did have a resurgence in popularity about ten years ago.

I'd second the recommendation of the Gordon West (WB6NOA!!) book. You said you currently hold a technician class license, were you ever a Novice licensee? If so, you've already done the 5-WPM Morse code requirement, so you could upgrade to General just by passing the 35 question written exam.
Similarly, if you held a technician class license prior to March 1987 (I think that's the right date), then you already did both the Morse code at 5-WPM and the General class theory exam (it was combined with the Tech theory at that time). This would mean an "automatic" upgrade -- that is, you just have to apply to the FCC for your General license via a VEC.

Simply tell them that it's a ham radio and if questioned further, tell them that you are a Federally licensed ham radio operator. Have a copy of your license available. You won't have any trouble whatsoever.

I don't know about the rules in the US, but here is South Africa it's legal to operate on an airliner with the captain's permission - actually getting that permission is another matter entirely! I know a few hams who are also private pilots that have in fact installed quite extensive rigs in their own planes. Over here the aircraft owner/captain has full authority.

Does anyone know the secret handshake necessary to get CW output from the RUFZ program? I have both 3.0 and 3.1 downloaded from DL4MM's website, but no joy, though the program loads and displays OK.
It is supposed to use the soundcard, and "should" run under Windows, though I have tried it from a DOS prompt, and still no luck.
I would think that the problem was me, but another amateur
I know recently downloaded it also and is experiencing the same difficulty.
Thanks for any info.

Omniscent is the guy slipping his willing lips over any hard cock. Usually he likes to buttfuck little boys, but his terminal genital herpes prevents him from using that 2 inch midget. Omniscent is one of those convicted felons who has that fry cook job but he put his face in the hot fry oil and his facial features resemble that of a rotting corpse.

Great! If we could get the rest of them to do the same we'd have mucho more political power.

I invite anyone with a wide-band receive rig to listen on the freq's

I posted a cite in my original response. There is a magazine entitled "2600" that has been writing about the same subject for quite some time - keeping modern technology in the hands of private corporations and out of the hands of the public. If you want more, read the DMCA of 1998. It's basically made it illegal to take something apart to see how it works.

I brought one into the flock this year.
He's sold his galaxy rig, and bought an HT :)
I loaned him an HT, and spotted him some 9914 feedline, and a three element quad to get started.
Every year, I try to get three or four people licenced.

No, you want someone else to do your research.
Go to Barnes & Nobles and start reading the fucking magazine. Go over to http://www.strongsignals.net and read.

I just went out to price body armor at a local police equipment store. It is not available, from them, to be sold to private citizens. The police do not want private citizens having body armor and will stop buying from any dealer who sells to them if they sell to private citizens.

And all we wanted was something to wear while hunting (a buddy just was shot in a hunting accident, it makes good sense to wear body armor out there).

I went to my local rat shack today, it is by my bank in an old shopping center that is being torn down, a new location is up on the other side of town and this nearby rat shack will soon be a crosstown journey for me.

Went in to get some ferric chloride cause I just hate mixing the stuff myself and I went in on the chance that they would have a couple of 330 pf capacitors.
I am usually well stocked on components but just needed a couple of the capacitors and am not ready for a new order to mouser or electronix express.
btw, they had the capacitors, lol, and much to my surprise hahahahahaha.

This radio shack used to have approximatly 30 linear feet of wall space for components and circuit related items, it has now dwindled down to about 6 ft of space for electronics components and accesory items, it is mainly leftover junk. they were surprisingling well stocked in overpriced ceramic disk electrolytic and polyester capacitors, hahahaha. had a few common ics and transistor selection was limited to 3904s mpf102 jfets and 4401s in addition to a bulk pack of npn switching transistors. had a good variety of perfboard products but no connectors or jumper wire sets, no alligator clips etc....

The guy there said they would always carry a selection of components but it would be on a much smaller scale than before, he mentioned rat shack . com and the fact that you could order a lot more from the store.

I like radioshack for pre mixed ferric chloride, I do buy things there when I get cabin fever and need somewhere to kill a little time, with them moving across town now I will probably go just for the ferric chloride and will attempt to be better stocked on the more common items.

I know a lot of people rant on the shack because of what they have become but I guess that is progress.... I have always liked the stores if not for anything else than just a place to go and kill time, look at the electronics etc....

ferric chloride was 3.49 for a 16 ounce bottle, I cant buy the mix and mix it myself for that price so I consider that well worth the trip.

330 pf capacitors were in a bulk assortment pack of 80 caps, 1-470 pf, I probably paid a lot more for the caps but it is good assortment and it saved me from having to make an order for a lot more than I currently need just for 2 caps. Yes I could made up the caps using other values I had but I wanted a small neat circuit with one cap where I needed 1 cap.

I weep for my old radioshack, useless as they are they are still a friend.

You need to read on a regular basis. This is an ongoing battle over technology. 2600
is a good place to start, so is strong signals.
Even Monitoring Times has had articles on this issue.

Sorry but you are wrong. Only a few cities limit body armor to police, no state that I know

of. And it is perfectly legal at the federal level.
I have other sources, but I would have liked a local source.

The individual in question is a former Marine,
one of the best weapons handlers in my Army unit. It shocked everyone who knows him which includes those of us in the military (my colonel is very close friends with him and is a Class III collector), many of the local police and even the local gun stores. He is that good.

But life happens and sometimes you can not stop it.
He lost his left lung, two ribs and 4 out of 5 units of blood. Never passed out, barking orders to a fellow soldier who treated him for shock, a sucking chest wound then backpacked him out over a 1/4 mile!

Everyone is thankful that he is such a hard headed old Marine (well he is younger than me). Had he passed out, I doubt that he would have lived, going into shock.

It has been a real wake up call to many of our younger troops. It pushed the need to learn Common Task Training.

And it has many of us really thinking that body armor might be a good thing to have, for both hunting and if we get activated.

You had better explain it. I know of no state that does not allow the police to inspect vehicles.

What these guys do not understand is this just is not about radio equipment.
It is about drugs, guns, scanners, alcohol or anything else that the officer may think that you are doing. There are so many bad guys (perps) out there that the average LEO has to expect that every traffic stop might be more than just a normal guy.

After all look at all the drug runners who are caught during traffic stops. It is the number one enforcement tool for the police.

NJ does not allow searches without permission or a warrant based on reasonable suspicion. The police can look into the vehicle through windows, etc, but they can not demand that you open the trunk, etc.

In the event that police have a reasonable suspicion
for some reason, they can get a court issued warrant.
The KEY element is "reasonable suspicion."

So you claim, but fail to clearly convince anyone of. There is NOTHING illegal about me having unopened alcohol containers in a vehicle. The officer may THINK anything s/he wants, but without the reasonable suspicion aspect, there is no absolute right of the police to search the vehicle.
As to scanners and other radios, none of those items constitute anything against the law in NJ and, therefore, do not of themselves constitute any reasonable suspicion to get a search warrant.

Other than drugs, guns and open alcohol containers, nothing else (certainly not a radio except for a scanner in the handful of states that prohibit them in cars) you offer suggests any valid reason to justify a search or the confiscation (taking as evidence) of any radio equipment.

So what, we are talking about radio equipment, not drugs.

That law is targeted specifically at reverse engineering activity of corporate R&D organizations.

Has anyone been found guilty of that law?

Do you really see that law being used against a ham or anyone else who decides to take apart their TV, Stereo, CD player, PC or anything else just to learn more about it?

Bottom line, the DCMA is of NO consequence to individuals who like to tinker.

That too does NOT constitute any public outcry

There is nothing wrong with police using new technology to protect their frequencies from eavesdropping...BUT that is not at all anlogous to banning scanners altogether as you claim their is public support for.

Pretty much after the advent of PCs at an affordable price, interest in building anything electronic waned across the US. Kids stopped wondering how things worked, and started wondering how they were going to get the more expensive, latest version of whatever electronic gadget they owned currently.

Last year, for Christmas, I got my 8 year old a crystal radio kit. He was quite annoyed that it did not come with a CD option and Gameboy interface... sigh

That is not entirely true.
The police don't want convicted FELONS that are let loose and are still dangerous from owning such protective gear.

I didn't say the police, you ninny.
I said THE PEOPLE!

But, I have to admit that I was wrong in thinking it was a crime for a typical person to have or own.
I was misled by strange, left wing propaganda, as well as my own local police!
As far as I know now, there are NO laws regarding the wearing or purchasing of such clothing..yet!
Unless of course one is a convicted felon or use them in the commission of a crime.

> no state that I know
> of. And it is perfectly legal at the federal level.

I talked to my local Police in my state (NJ) and they said it is a FELONY for a CIVILIAN to wear, let alone HAVE, any bullet proof vest or Body armor.
He also said that is not just "NJ STATE" wide, but also," It's "Nationwide."

Apparently, nothing could have been further from the truth.

As having just called to "a" manufacturer, he told me "That cop is nutz and I want his badge number!"
"While it is perfectly OK to sell to the general public, the cops will never give you a straight answer, and even we refuse to sell to criminals or punks." he said in a 'round about way.

This place was VERY informative, and kind and they are in California.
He also said that the majority of his sales are NOT to LEO's!

I am curious. Do you feel that this is a good law?
I am thinking of someone who is say, transporting jewelry or cash.
So far as I can remember, I grew up in a country with a framework of laws that were protective without being needlessly restrictive.

Of course there were about 130-150 million in the country then, and that makes somewhat of a difference in this anecdote about laws:

When quite young though in my memory, I was injured (turned out to be just a broken collarbone) at a convention that my parents were attending at a rural town park. Dad got me in his (then new) '55 Olds and had a Legion buddy holding me down in the back seat. He later told me that we were going over 100mph to the hospital. We were stopped by a highway patrolman who in seconds was escorting us to the hospital, same speed, with sirens going and that was the last heard from the police. To me, that is non-restrictive law at work.
I wonder what would happen with the same circumstances today?

In the mid-sixties, I had a holiday job at a men's clothing store. After we closed at night, the owner would take the receipts to a night deposit at the other end of the mall....with his hand on a revolver. I have no idea if he had any kind of permit, but I seriously doubt it would have made any difference to a cop. So far as I know, he never used it.
About that I could only ask, who was hurt.

But what we have now is a country that says one law fits all at all times and by golly that is how it will be.

Cheers,

jim

And also, I have always been in favor of the people to do such a thing.

That's correct. If you refuse, they can get a warrant and detain you if it takes 12 hours to get it if they want. They will likely then tear your car apart looking for drugs, not reassemble it for you of course, while a drug dog is turned loose inside and outside your car with his claws scratching the shit out of your paint job. Don't be so naive as to think they can't ruin their day in any number of ways. Refuse a search and it's assumed you have something to hide. You do have rights but there are ways too numerous to mention how they can make your day a real bitch.

I witnessed a South Carolina State Patrol Officer chamber a round in a 12 gauge shotgun, ram it (and I mean ram) in the stomach of a fat, greasy looking truck driver because he was mouthing off as he was asked to step down from his cab. Needless to say, the driver shut the fuck up and said more "yes sirs" then he probably ever had previously in his life. Go ahead and tell them your rights, just be prepared for the consequences because they know them better than most motorists do.

Most states have laws on the books criminalizing the use of body armor while committing a crime. Owning the body armor in and of itself is not usually the crime.

That was why I was gentle. I thought you might have had wrong info.

I wasn't with him. Thank god the kid that he was hunting with was there. He had the military training plus he is rather big and strong. The right person to be there.

Unfortunately Kevin shot himself. We have three deer season: bow, muzzle loader, and shotgun. Kevin had his blackpowder rifle plus a blackpowder pistol for backup.
The pistol had worked lose in the holster and when he went to get up, it slipped out and discharged when it hit the ground (I know, it sounds really weird). As I said, he lost a lung and about 4/5 of his blood.
He is damned lucky to be alive.

Just went thru surgery to close everything up and should be out of the hospital before Christmas (they were expecting him to stay for another week). Again, even the best have shit happen to them.

Guess that this is another reason to buy body armor.

In my state there is one exemption to having a pistol on you in public (without a license, that is). And that is that your employer requires to have it. It is allowed for businesses to have armed staff who deposit money, no carry permit required.

No public demand, just behind the door lobbying by police organizations. Congress has passed some rather restrictive laws about scanners in the last 10 years.

The public wants scanners, the media wants them.
The cops would rather that you did not have them.

It will cause more problems that it is worth.
Right now most police officers use scanners to listen to adjacent patrol areas, other departments and others services. If radios are encrypted, you will only have those talk groups that are programmed into your radio. Already we have problems with various agencies not wanting other agencies on their talk groups. For example, the ambulance service does not want the fire fighters on their talk group. Makes it damned hard to co-ordinate at an accident scene or talk the ambulance in.

And you know that the media will be the first to be locked out. They are just now realizing that the cops might be pulling a fast one.

As a matter of fact, yes. 2600 magazine was found to be in violation of the law when they published DeCSS code (a DVD ripper program) by a federal judge in California. His decision was based on the fact that someone MIGHT use such code to violate copyrights. The case is currently under appeal. In another case, a software company was threatened with a lawsuit because they wrote a program that would play DVDs on the Linux platform. I don't know the details of this, but the corporate lawyers argued that since DVDs weren't designed to run under Linux by the manufacturers, copyright protection MIGHT be compromised. (or some other crazy argument to that effect)

A couple of weeks ago I went to my local RS to get an optoisolator and discovered, as you did, that they no longer carry many electronic components. I checked their catalog, and found what I wanted, but as RSU items (must be shipped), and the price was high, and had shipping on top of it.

Then I went home and logged onto Radioshack.com, found what I wanted (at less than half the RSU prices), and with shipping included. So I ordered a variety of items, and the box showed up about 2 days later.

In a way I regret that so many items are not available retail, however the cost of inventory, etc., and the limited demand, do make reducing inventory practical. I am glad that radioshack.com had the items at a decent price. Ordering the RSU items is absurd.

I am asking a question here, so don't think I am being smarty, OK? If an officer
"suspects" you of something and tears up your vehicle, paint, upholstery, etc., if he finds nothing, wouldn't there be recourse for the owner of the vehicle for damage of the vehicle.
That would seem most unfair to be able to rip up someone's car on "suspicion".

I don't muck with SC Highway Patrol troopers. Them 'ere boys invented the phrase, "Y'all in a heap o' trouble, boy, ya heah me?" I must say that, in my own experience, SCHP is the most unprofessional, untrained, uncouth, smart-mouthed bunch of pot bellied yahoos I have ever encountered. And the nationally televised clip of the SC trooper dragging a frightened woman out of her car while screaming obscenities and spitting like a mad dog PROVES it! I try to stay out of SC

if I can.

Besides, short of hard body armor (military hard panel insert stuff) none of the stuff you find in a cop shop will stop any of the typical hunting rifle rounds. Threat Level III soft armor (still pretty bulky) is only rated up to .44 mag pistol and 00 buck.

Since very few (if any) black powder pistols have any type of hammer block safety, knowledgeable shooters always carry in the field with the hammer resting on an empty cylinder. Percussion caps can self-ignite from static electricity alone... Even in the "cowboy days" with the good old SAA's, it was common practice to carry with the hammer down on an empty cylinder.

WHY do you use that STUPID word "MINDSET"?What the hell is a MINDSET?Do you mean it's how someone thinks?Can i buy this "mindset" in a store or shop???why don't you speak PLAIN ORDINARY commonsense ENGLISH??????????

I am british and i am SICK of the british using and picking up STUPID americanisms in the uk! WHAt other society in the world IMPORTS another countries language to replace it's OWN???????HOW pathetic!

MOST cbers as you call them in the uk who use SSB/AM ARE criminals and often get caught to.Any bad reputation the cb fraternity have is mainly due to their own illegal operations and behaviour.you REAP what you SOW!

It was a single shot black powder pistol,
not a revolver. Had he had a revolver, it might have been better. This was a hunting gun which he used to get a second

My state does not allow center fire rifles.
We only have a bow, black powder and shotgun/pistol seasons. Therefore a 3A vest might do. For high power rifle, yes you would need a Class 4 vest.

And why many jurisdictions (used to) have Deputy DAs ride around did that (as a DA) for several years in Phoenix. Made his "day"

Sheeeesh....none of my (Northern California) APCO colleagues
have expressed that concern. Their major concerns are over reliability and coverage of communications in difficult terrain and inter-system operability and they don't look to APCO 25 as the final answer. Several have tried and were underwhelmed by The Big Em's product.

Other than the ban on cellular recieving capability for newly manufactured scanners. Just what other restrictive laws about scanners are you thinking of.

So what! There is NO groundswell of support to outlaw scanners at all. The police will end up encrypting their channels and that'll be the end of any police concerns too.

Sounds like a police problem then. Are you suggesting

If encryption is a "fast one" it sure is taking a long time. The ability to encrypt has been around for years...nothing new on that technology.

I believe he's wrong. The Supreme Court ruling said that officers may check the passenger area for any weapons that might be readily accessible and thus present a danger. Complete searches require either permission of the driver/owner or a search warrant issued by a court based on valid information and stipulating exactly what is being sought in the search. Contraband found during the search is admissible. Drug dog scans do not require a search warrant.

Of course this does not apply to national border crossing searches which are indeed are legal.

Speaking from the perspective of thirty years direct working experience with law enforcement officers, the officers you describe are poorly trained and even more poorly supervised. Any supervisor who allows a junior officer to send any questionable case to the prosecutor is derelict. And he will shortly hear so from that prosecutor, who has no time for that sort of nonsense.Without exception he will have real work to do. And in the unlikely event the presecutor is just as green and sends it on the the court, the judge himself will set the whole bunch on the straight and narrow. He's the busiest of all.

It sounds like you've been talking with a bunch of rank recruits straight out of the academy who have yet to even meet their field training officers, who surely WILL set them straight.

No question, things are a bit different due to Sept 11. As an example, not long ago I drove across Hoover Dam, on the Arizona/Nevada border. There were plenty of warning signs that no commercial trucks nor RV's were allowed to cross, and must turn around long before approaching. Signs also warned of roadblocks, and of course I had read in the news media that the dam was being protected, so I expected all that, and expected to be checked. We were driving a full size pickup with a tenneau cover on the bed, with luggage and a few other articles inside, and my wife was driving when we arrived at the roadblock. They didn't ask to see any ID nor even drivers license, they just wanted to know where we were going, if we had any weapons, and they wanted to see inside the closed bed beneath the tenneau cover, which was locked. They told us to pull over to the side and open the cover, which we did. One glance inside was all they needed, and we were sent on our way. But technically that should require a search warrant, to search anything but the driver/passenger compartment. And there was one small pickup with a shell cover which was stuffed full of things that the driver was being made to unload so they could get a good look. He wasn't too happy, but he was doing it. I saw nothing there so unreasonable that I couldn't support it under the circumstances. If you don't like it, take another route.
We could say that the laxness of of immigration policies of liberal administrations and bureaucracies in the past has led to the current situation but that won't solve anything now...

That wasn't my experience. Most of the cops I knew were ok with gun ownership by citizens, and there were a few who had been helped outof a bad spot by armed citizens. It was not that unusual for a citizen who had heard a police dispatch on a scanner to contribute useful information on a case. Of course that was in an earlier era, though not many years ago. But trunked digital comm systems are a double edged sword. They are like the cell phone system - fine when working, useless when not. Earlier base to mobile analog distpatch systems were and are more reliable. And much less expensive, always a factor, especially in a time of fading economic conditions..

If they are allowed to get away with it that is the fault of the people who are having their cars confiscated - if they don't actually have drugs aboard.

Dick, without disagreeing with you, the police forces are fighting - and I think losing - being ground down by the burden of a lot of things including really stupid drug enforcement. This plagues the system from the cop thru the courts and the penal institutions. The NHP has become the I-80 drug patrol and as a result does most of its recruiting thru the truck inspectors; the OPD leads the planet in pot busts, BFD. When the MHP, KHP etc. are lining up to recruit at NebrOma's law enforcement program to compete for the decent you know that some warm bodies are being given badges and guns; the out of state patrolmen probably accomplish more traffic enforcement than the NHP during their body-snatching visits. We had a minor dust-up in the complex involving the Douglas County Sheriff's office and I thought the place was being invaded by Sea Scouts.

When you can't interest the Federal DAs office in anything that can't raise 10 grand or confiscate something, similar down at the local Prosecutor, it is no small wonder radio enforcement goes to hell. So we get bandaids like Tacoma in hopes the local gendarmes can cure TVI thru sheer force of personality. As a practical matter, an undermanned group takes up acting like the Marines and it is welcome time to the LAPD.

At the same time, as you point out, the radio-owning public has little to fear barring a complaint. The poor cop is out looking for drug mules to add one more rusty 82 Chevy to the impound lot.

Amazing, is it not? Amazing that so many would weigh in on so little.
LEO's, whether a one year or twenty year veteran, can only enforce the laws they are given, and even then Officer Discretion almost always comes into being and then only with PC (Probable Cause).
From what I have seen of this string, too much is being made of too little.
For the most part if you mind your own business and act accordingly, you have little reason to worry over seing the red and blue lights light up behind you.
Yes, some gung-ho newbie officers may carry things to extremes but they rarely operate outside of the laws they have at hand. Give the new guys and gals a year or two and they will usually calm down and most will get over the Wyatt Earp syndrome.
Be honest. Did not you first year officers feel just a bit full of youselves after you were sworn in? Did you not like wearing that badge on your belt while sporting the Dept. issue handgun...even when off duty? Be honest...you LIKED being recognized as the latest cop in town and many of you really didn't take great pains to hide the dept. issue weapon. Other newbies even go so far as to wear a handcuff case on their belt everywhere they go....that , too will soon wear off as you gain experience.
Many departments require that their officers go armed both on duty and off, and the new rookies often tend to shove a large handgun in their belts...or if they are at a singles bar, they like shoulder holsters. Makes them macho.
I have been there, guys. After the newness wears off (three or four years) you will find that the Job can be a real pain. You will no longer want to carry that large, crappy duty weapon on your off hours...after all, you carried it for nine hours on your shift and when you get home all you want to do is ditch it and that damn Sam Browne belt it rides on. As you spend more time on the job you may even find that you do not wish to carry an off-duty weapon despite department policies. After all, it is a pain to go visiting, swimming, or even to church while carrying a handgun. (I opt for an ankle holster, but the choice is yours)

The statement, " Most academy classes will see over half of the graduates out of law enforcement by 5 years" is not quite true. Most of this half will quit within the first three years and move on to other jobs. Yes, there is a turnover in Law Enforcement. Good people apply and pass the stringent requirements. Unfortunately these same good people find that a career in Law Enforcement pays little, has great risks, and affords no weekends or holidays off. As a result they move on to more stable positions within the private sector.

My outlook is that you have to want to be a cop above all else. Money is secondary.

Well part of that law made it illegal to reverse engineer any coding scheme
such as Motorola's trunking format.
Or their MDT coding. Mind you now, these are not encryption, just a computer code. It also restricted listening to pagers.

And remember, this only applies to civilians,
the police are exempt.

: So what! There is NO groundswell of support to outlaw
: scanners at all. The police will end up encrypting their
: channels and that'll be the end of any police concerns too.

If the average police chief had his way, there would be no scanners, body armor, or guns in the hands of private citizens. Hell, too many chiefs would be happy
if everyone was forced to take public transportation.
All except their wives and kids, of course.

: Sounds like a police problem then. Are you suggesting
: a total ban on scanners for public purchase?

No, but many in law enforcement would love
a total ban, especially for the newspapers.

And someone is going to sue once it is learned that different agencies can not co-ordinate. It is going to cost someone there life.

: > And you know that the media will be the first
: > to be locked out. They are just now realizing

: If encryption is a "fast one" it sure is taking a long
: time. The ability to encrypt has been around for
: years...nothing new on that technology.

Not cheaply and easily. Digital trunked radio has made it very easily. Except that digital trunking has not worked out as well as they had hoped.

: Sheeeesh....none of my (Northern California) APCO colleagues
: have expressed that concern. Their major concerns are over
: reliability and coverage of communications in difficult
: terrain and inter-system operability and they don't look to
: APCO 25 as the final answer. Several have tried and were
: underwhelmed by The Big Em's product.

Within my agency, and many of the local and state agencies I co-ordinate with, there have been comments that they really do not want private citizens listening, especially the press. Often someone overhears on site comments and makes it into a major political issue. The decision makers are wanting a bit of room to maneuver without lawyers, the press and the common citizen doing arm chair quarter backing. They want to be able to cuss
"in the heat of battle" without having to answer to every anti cop and anti government group out there.

The problem is that without citizens and the press listening, news becomes filtered and controlled. The political elements can spin things easier. Plus the average street cop will go back to treating the radio as a CB where they all tell their off colored stories about women and minorities. Or co-ordinate the stories so that the last incident that went bad will look good on paper.

: Amazing, is it not? Amazing that so many would weigh in on so little.
: LEO's, whether a one year or twenty year veteran, can only enforce the laws
: they are given, and even then Officer Discretion almost always comes into
: being and then only with PC (Probable Cause).
: From what I have seen of this string, too much is being made of too little.
: For the most part if you mind your own business and act accordingly, you
: have little reason to worry over seing the red and blue lights light up : behind you.
: Yes, some gung-ho newbie officers may carry things to extremes but they : rarely operate outside of the laws they have at hand. Give the new guys and
: gals a year or two and they will usually calm down and most will get over
: the Wyatt Earp syndrome.
: Be honest. Did not you first year officers feel just a bit full of youselves
: after you were sworn in? Did you not like wearing that badge on your belt
: while sporting the Dept. issue handgun...even when off duty? Be honest...you
: LIKED being recognized as the latest cop in town and many of you really : didn't take great pains to hide the dept. issue weapon. Other newbies even : go so far as to wear a handcuff case on their belt everywhere they
: go....that , too will soon wear off as you gain experience.
: Many departments require that their officers go armed both on duty and off,
: and the new rookies often tend to shove a large handgun in their belts...or
: if they are at a singles bar, they like shoulder holsters. Makes them macho.
: I have been there, guys. After the newness wears off (three or four years)
: you will find that the Job can be a real pain. You will no longer want to : carry that large, crappy duty weapon on your off hours...after all, you
: carried it for nine hours on your shift and when you get home all you want : to do is ditch it and that damn Sam Browne belt it rides on. As you spend : more time on the job you may even find that you do not wish to carry an

: off-duty weapon despite department policies. After all, it is a pain to go
: visiting, swimming, or even to church while carrying a handgun. (I opt for : an ankle holster, but the choice is yours)
: The statement, " Most academy classes will see over half of the graduates
: out of law enforcement by 5 years" is not quite true. Most of this half will : quit within the first three years and move on to other jobs. Yes, there is a : turnover in Law Enforcement. Good people apply and pass the stringent : requirements. Unfortunately these same good people find that a career in Law
: Enforcement pays little, has great risks, and affords no weekends or : holidays off. As a result they move on to more stable positions within the : private sector.
: My outlook is that you have to want to be a cop above all else. Money is : secondary.

Well said!!!

just got back from round trip to SF. what a nightmare. the security line stretched the entire length of the terminal into the next terminal.

carrying an HT won't really make a difference. they're randomly selecting folks for full baggage search (i got flagged 3/4 times going to airports...that's enough reason for me to want OBL greased)....

just be prepared to turn the rig on.

and if you're going to a big airport (EWR, SFO, SJC, ORD, etc), be prepared to wait for hours...

: Dick, without disagreeing with you, the police forces are fighting - and I : think losing - being ground down by the burden of a lot of things
: including really stupid drug enforcement. This plagues the system from
: the cop thru the courts and the penal institutions. The NHP has become : the I-80 drug patrol and as a result does most of its recruiting thru the : truck inspectors; the OPD leads the planet in pot busts, BFD. When the
: MHP, KHP etc. are lining up to recruit at NebrOma's law enforcement : program to compete for the decent you know that some warm bodies are being given badges and guns; the out of state patrolmen probably accomplish more traffic enforcement than the NHP during their body-snatching visits. We : had a minor dust-up in the complex involving the Douglas County Sheriff's : office and I thought the place was being invaded by Sea Scouts.
: When you can't interest the Federal DAs office in anything that can't : raise 10 grand or confiscate something, similar down at the local : Prosecutor, it is no small wonder radio enforcement goes to hell. So we : get bandaids like Tacoma in hopes the local gendarmes can cure TVI thru
: sheer force of personality. As a practical matter, an undermanned group
: takes up acting like the Marines and it is welcome time to the LAPD.

: At the same time, as you point out, the radio-owning public has little to : fear barring a complaint. The poor cop is out looking for drug mules to : add one more rusty 82 Chevy to the impound lot.
: Dick N&#65533;BK

Good points.

I, however, think that many out there just do not have an idea what the average LEO goes thru. Too many have an image of "Dragnet". Law enforcement has changed.

The average department is made up of younger (they just do not stay around like they used to),
more fit and a bit more hard nosed individuals
these days.

BTW, did you guys know that Buddy Hatchett had been a cop? (I think I spelled his name right, you know the fat little comedy guy).

Looking for a manual/ schematic for a Harris CU-2310/URC antenna coupler... will basically take anything (original, copy, taped together, musty, whatever!).

Yeah. Right. The same way that law-abiding gun owners bring on draconian gun laws.

Judging from your "credibility" statement about 2600, I doubt that your lawyer friend had to try very hard to convince you. If you want to find out how quickly this law was rushed through congress without any challenge as to its constitutionality, look up the congressional record to see how your represenative and senators voted.

We are going from Sacramento (Grass Valley, actually) to San Diego over the holidays. I'll probably use the .195 machine until I lose it about 30 miles south of Stockton. Does anybody have any recommendations (frequency AND pl, please) for 2 meter repeaters south of there into San Diego? Say, for instance, a good one in Merced, then another in Visalia, Bakersfield, and so on down through the LA basin and so on into San Diego?

Yes, I've been to the ARTSCI website and the ARRL website, but all they do is list the machines. I'd really appreciate it if you know of GOOD ones along this route.

Hi All,

The origins of English are found in the both the nordic and romance languages. That is, English borrows heavily from German and French.
There is, of course, a considerable amount of Latin (whose roots are found in India's sanskrit).

>PLAIN ORDINARY commonsense ENGLISH

From the Oxford English Dictionary we find:
Plain - Old French, plaign, or from French plein, or Latin planum;
Ordinary - early Old French ordinaire or Latin ordinarious;
Commonsense - Greek, or Latin sensus communis
English - Old Teutonic anglisko

>WHAt other society in the world IMPORTS another >countries language to replace it's OWN???????HOW pathetic!

Indeed....
What - Old teutonic hwat (English juggles spelling too)
Other - Dutch and German ander Society - Old French societe
In - Old High German, Teutonic
The - Sanskrit tat
World - Teutonic weorold
Imports - Latin importare
Another - see Other, above (English also compounds like german)

Country's (misspelled above) - Old French contrï¿½e
Language - French langage and Latin lingua
To - Old Teutonic ta or Lithuanian da Replace - Bingo! No derivation shown. its (misspelled above) - Bingo! however original English was hit Own - Old Teutonic aigano
How - Old Norse haug
Pathetic - Late Latin patheticus

Even the puffery of being Anglo-Saxon relates to the German tribes of Angles, Saxons and Jutes. Hence our correspondent above barely qualifies as English literate (at 10% for original English content with points lost for spelling throughout).

If you want correspondence in original English, from "Cï¿½dmon's Hymn"
Nu sculon herigean heofonrices Weard Meotodes meahte and his modgeï¿½anc weore Wuldor-Fï¿½der swa he wundra gehwï¿½

He ï¿½rest sceop ielda nearnum
heofon to hrofe halig Scyppend Da middangeard moncynnes Weard ece Drihten ï¿½fter teode
firum foldan Frea aelmihtig

The split in the stanzas is known as a Cï¿½sura, a pacing device, or pause during recitation.

Perhaps this little piece offers a compelling answer to that pining

Hi OM,

The olde fashion way, reading and typing. All references are within 6 feet of me. "Cï¿½dmon's Hymn" was courtesy of "The Norton Anthology of English Literature."

One of the pleasures of English found before Shaksper is that so much of it written seems like gibberish - until you hear it. With Shaksper's work, the language grew enormously (but his work was actually written in an old dialect that was not spoken during his time). Where the educated citizen has a vocabulary of say 10,000 words, his works reveal nearly three times that.

The conceit of Shaksper is a product of having just seen "The Beard Of Avon" two nights ago. [No that wasn't a typo, it is a comic stage play of the "authorship problem."]

I for one don't miss them a bit. I got into it as a hobby when I was a kid. Ripoff shack was my only source for parts (the only good suppliers were downtown and I was in the nether reaches of the east end). Even back then the salesdroids they employed were often ignorant and downright rude. On top of that the parts they did have were terribly overpriced (the estimate of 2000% overpricing is conservative). About the only thing that kept them going with electronics hobbyists in the 90's was their flirtation with a couple of HT's for the ham radio crowd and a a few scanners. I really am surprised that anyone is concerned that RS is abandoning their parts line. Frankly they've been the bottom of the barrel for years and I certainly won't miss them one bit.

Patrick,
As an 'aside', all other societies 'import' and use words and phrases from other countries or societies. Take English for example,
it's an amalgam of several other languages, with very few
'unmodified'
words from the original Saxon, Gaelic, Goth, German, Latin, and Engl remaining.

As you pass through the Los Angeles area, you can always listen to 147.435 (input 146.400) or 145.460-. However, don't transmit unless you don't mind Riley listening! :-)

In Bakersfield, 146.670- might be popular. There was (I don't know if it still operates) a 146.670- also in LA.

I belong to a club that operates one of the repeaters on Santiago Peak (coverage from I-5+CA-14 through to [northern] San Diego County), 146.925- (114.8 PL).

Remember that practically everything has a PL down here, even if I didn't list one.

Oh it gets worse. Pretty soon we will hear from the Latin scholar objecting to ending sentences with prepositions. This resulted in I believe Shaw and possibly used by Churchill replying to a critic with,
"That's the sort of nonsense up with which I will not put."

Looks to me that someone with just enough brains to use Geoshitties, has now bought himself a President Ham Radio and just can't figure out why they put all those little push buttons on a CB.

Hehehe, if it weren't so obviously pathetic, it might warrant an argument.

Of course you like it there because you don't have 20 stations competing for the same frequency. That's why it's a ham band and not a CB band cause if it was a CB band it would be like all the other channels cramped and hard to make a contact.
Just another reason why you as a CBer should request more frequency coverage so we don't keep going around in circles with good guy bad guy BS.
Hams don't want you on the frequencies because it gets real unruly quickly. Those who think they are rebels cause they go on frequencies that they have no right to be on soon find out that no one wants to talk to them. A ham will not talk to an unlicensed station not because they are being arrogant it's because it's the law!
You want to break the law and call yourself a rebel or the funniest thing i heard was patriot then go ahead. You soon find that you'll be talking to yourself.
The CB hobby is full of wantabees cause your all in it for yourself and can't organize to improve your hobby.

If you could get organized and talk with the FCC, you could have your frequencies clear and free with people who are polite and actually know something about radio and how to actually operate a radio. 95% of you don't have a clue. Your only concern is lots of power so you can walk over the other guy.

If that's your thing then stay on your side of the Chicken Band but if you want to improve things and work within the system, then you will get respect from others including hams. You need more frequency allocation then change your operating habits, learn something and show you deserve it and it will happen.

The reason CB is still the same as it was in the 70's is because you have no organization, no respect for rules or others.

As with the amateur bands, CB frequencies are a privilege and not a right. The FCC could take away that privilege any time they want. You don't own the frequencies but are given the privilege to use them. You don't like the rules then complain to the FCC.

Sorry but you are no more than a taxpayer with no choice in paying your taxes or they will be forcible taken from you. The mayor or the governor is who the police work for.
It is they who hire them.

Now if you are very rich or powerful, you might be able to dictate who the mayor is.
But most people, there is little recourse unless you band together in enough numbers to force the political establishment to listen.
And the police do know this.

AMATEUR RADIO NEWSLINE(tm) REPORT #1271 - DEC 21, 2001

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1271 with a release date of Friday, December 21st, 2001 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. A national ham radio society is asked to train new hams for government service. This story is first on this weeks Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1271 coming your way right now.

THE EDUCATION SCENE: HAM TRAINING LEADS TO SA GOVERNMENT JOBS

A government agency has asked a national ham radio society to help train new hams. The reason. careers with that agency. Its happened in South Africa as we hear from Q-News Graham Kemp, VK4BB:

In South Africa, their Department of Communications contacted the SARL with the request to train seventeen post graduate students as amateur radio operators. These students had already qualified in different fields, some technical and some in the Information Technology fields. There were nine ladies and eight men. From next year they will be employed by the Department of Communications, and the idea was to give them some experience in the field of radio communications.

Training was done by Henry Chamberlain, ZS1AAZ, over a period of one full month. In addition to lectures, the students could see practical demonstrations of amateur radio and they spent one period building and testing a Morse Code practice oscillator. They also visited ZS1AAZ's home shack. The seventeen students had already proved their ability by passing their previous studies successfully. It was therefore no surprise that they ALL passed the amateur examination.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Graham Kemp. VK4BB, of Q-News.

The seventeen will be assigned specific jobs with the South African Department of Communications in early 2002. (SARL, Q-News)

SPECTRUM SHARING: FCC SAYS YES TO HIGHER POWER UNLICENSED TRANSMITTERS AT 2.4 GHZ

The FCC has approved issued new rules permitting certain unlicensed Part 15 devices operating between 2405 and 2450 MHz to use higher power, but under significant restrictions. The band is allocated to amateurs on a co-secondary basis. Amateur Radio Newsline's Norm Seeley, KI7UP, takes a look at the FCC action:

According to the C-Q Magazine website, the decision was adopted on December 11Th. In it, the FCC approved a petition by Sierra Digital Communications, Inc. to permit unlicensed fixed point-to-point transmitters in the band to operate at field strengths of up to 2500 millivolts per meter. This is a tenfold increase over past power limitations.

Sierra Digital Communications manufactures and sells equipment for wireless data communications, including high-speed wireless computer networks and Internet links. The ARRL had opposed Sierra's petition on the basis of increased risk of interference to amateur and amateur satellite operations. This is because the downlink from the AO-40 satellite is in the 24 GHz band.

But the FCC said it believed the restrictions it is imposing on the higher-power transmitters will provide sufficient protection to other users. This includes industrial/scientific/medical equipment, radar and Earth exploration satellites, in addition to amateur radio. The new rules require highly directional antennas and high frequency stability of transmitters.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Norm Seeley, KI7UP.

In its decision, the FCC singled out an ARRL comment where the League clamed that Part 15 devices are permitted by the Communications Act of 1934 only where they have no interference potential to licensed services. The Commission called the League's interpretation of the law overly conservative. It said that its rulings to date appropriately provide a means for allowing unlicensed devices to share spectrum with licensed services with little risk of interference and adequate protection to licensed service. HAM RADIO AND THE WAR: MARS ON THE AIR FROM THE WAR ON TERROR

Ham radio is making it possible for those fighting the war against terrorism to phone home. This as the ARRL Letter announces that Army Special Forces on duty in Islamabad, Pakistan, and in other undisclosed locations have begun keeping in touch with home via MARS -- the Military Affiliate Radio System.

Phone patches provided by the Military Affiliate Radio System make it possible for troops to call their families in the US from areas where commercial communications channels are not available. Amateur Radio operators enrolled in MARS provide the connection between the Military Affiliate Radio System stations deployed overseas and the telephone system back home.

During the Vietnam War, phone patches were a major source of comfort to families and service members alike. MARS also responded during Operation Desert Storm. (ARRL)

HAM RADIO AND THE WAR: GODDARD ARC FEELS THE PINCH

The Goddard Amateur Radio Club says that it has been having serious problems with manpower lately and the war on terrorism is partly to blame. This is because new security restrictions imposed after September 11th require all visitors to Goddard to be escorted by a badged employee at all times.

According to Dan Schultz, N8FGV writing to the Amsat Bulletin Board, the clubs WA3NAN ham shack is located on government property we are bound by the new restrictions. This says Schultz makes it much harder to bring in control operators who are not Goddard employees. As a result, WA3NAN which for years has been the primary rebroadcaster of shuttle communications on the ham bands is not there as often as it would like to be.

Schultz also notes that the Goddard Amateur Radio Club currently has no president because no one has stepped forward to accept the job. The position of Shuttle Retransmission Director is also vacant, this is the person who makes the phone calls to get operators lined up to pull shifts at the retransmission facility.

Schultz says that the long term technical solution will be to automate the station with remote controls and telemetry for the transmitters so that the retransmission operator can operate from his home. But adds N8FGV, but that is still a little ways off in the future. As a result, WA3NAN is not there as much as it used to be. (AMSAT-BB)

AMERICA AT WAR: NEW HOMELAND TERRORIST ALERT SYSTEM PROPOSED

Homeland security chief Tom Ridge is considering a multistage system for terrorism alerts. Ridge is also weighing how to reimburse states for the costs of increased security since the terror attacks.

Since the September 11th terrorist attacks on New York and Washington, Ridge has issued three general warnings. None of the alerts identified specific targets.

Now, according to news reports, Ridge will propose a four-stage Threat Alert Network similar to the military's DEFCON'' system. DEFCON alerts military personnel to the seriousness of a threat. A private sector version would be aimed at helping state and local law enforcement personnel determine the level to react to a Federal government issued terror warning.

The proposal came to light after California Governor Gray Davis met with Ridge about a week and a half ago. Davis told Ridge he had proposed such a similar system for California, and said Ridge had asked him to wait pending a national model. Ridge told Davis that he hopes to unveil the national system by January 15th of 2002. Whether or not ham radio will play any part in such an alert system is not known as we go to air. (Published news reports)

AMERICA AT WAR: CONFERENCE HELD ON ALERTING THE PUBLIC

Still in there area of alerting the public, more than 120 leaders from the emergency warning community met November 30th and unanimously called for the creation of a public-private partnership. This, aimed at improving the delivery of timely and accurate emergency information to people at risk. Don Wilbanks, KC5MFA reports:

The group came together at a special conference arranged by the National Warning Organizing Committee. This is a group of emergency warning advocates representing the public and private sectors.

Those attending included federal, state and local government officials, not-for-profit organizations, and representatives from the private sector. And in the end the group has tasked itself to improve the delivery of warnings and emergency information to the public. This, through better education, research, standards creation and policy recommendations.

The Committee Chairman is David Liebersbach, Director of the Alaska Division of Emergency Services. He has appointed Peter Ward, formerly of the U.S. Geological Survey and chair of a White House-appointed working group on natural disaster information systems, to head up a committee to determine the new organization's structure and governance. Ward also serves as the new organization's spokesman. More news on the work of this committee as information is released.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Don Wilbanks, KC5MFA, in New Orleans.

The conference was hosted by The MITRE Corporation in McLean, Va. MITRE is a not-for-profit national technology resource that provides systems engineering, research and development, and information technology support to the government. (MITRE)

HAM RADIO AND EDUCATION: HAM RADIO MASS BALLOON LAUNCH

The Timberlane Regional High School, in Plaistow New Hampshire will be taking part in a high altitude experiment next spring. This with an announcement that the Coordinated Algebra II and Physics classes taught by Lorainne Mascioli, N1VYQ, and Lou Broad, N1RCA, are planning thier third year of ham radio and high altitude balloons in May of 2002.

Six student teams will attempt to launch their balloons at the Hosstraders Ham Fest at the Hopkington Fair Grounds in New Hampshire. Each team is responsible for design, construction, and operation of their system. Each balloon will carry a GPS receiver, a packet reporting system and several experimental payloads. This could include cameras, video, amateur television and cross band repeaters. At maximum altitude such systems will have a range of 300 miles and should easily cover all of New England and more.

The class has grown to 34 students and they are planning to launch six balloons in a two day period! This could make it a record breaking event in both ham radio and high altitude ballooning. For more information check out the CAPSAT Website located in cyberspace at

HAM RADIO SPOTLIGHTED IN POUGHKEEPSIE JOURNAL

New York’s Poughkeepsie Journal has highlighted ham radio in a December 6th front page article. The piece focused on the public service aspects ham radio with quotes and pictures.

According to Andrew Schmidt, N2FTR, who is an ARRL Assistant Director in the League’s Hudson Division, many Poughkeepsie area local hams spent time at Ground Zero or at the Red Cross centers in the greater NYC area following the September 12th terrorist attacks. Andrew says that their work is well highlighted in the article. The link is:

A SPECIAL AM EVENT: THE HEAVY METAL RALLYE

This is Paul Courson WA3VJB with news of an operating event Saturday night, December 22nd. It's the Heavy Metal Rally, featuring big iron, vacuum tubes, and the warm and inviting sound of AM on the shortwave ham bands.

Starting around local sunset listen for rigs in the 250 watt or 250 pound category to populate AM gathering points on 160, 75 and 40 meters.

Jim, W8MAQ was testing HIS 1947 Collins 300-G a few days ahead of the Heavy Metal Rally. The retired broadcast transmitter re-tuned to 75 meters sounded like this:

In-Q: it's been great to get on... 300-G..
Out-Q: forward to that

--

Prizes include a trophy, pictured as a posting on QRZ.com, for the best sounding station.

Last year more than a hundred stations took part -- and the winner was Mike, WN3B, on a Gates 250-C. He gave Jim an audio report the other night:

--
In-Q: It's got more highs....
Out-Q: Shure 55
--

The Heavy Metal Rally is sponsored by Electric Radio, a magazine featuring vintage ham radio, and published by Barry N6CSW. The event was pioneered by Bill, KD0HG of Colorado, a broadcast engineer with a knack for big homebrew rigs that sound great.

Frequencies and a website are listed on the news page of QRZ.com.

HAM RADIO BUSINESS: CITY ELECTRONICS - RIP

Alex Stalinsky, WA5UHT, who owns City Electronics, a small parts outlet in Houston for almost 50 years, has decided to call it quits. According to Chris Boone, WB5ITT, this place was one of the main sources of parts, components in Houston long before the likes of Mouser and Digikey took off in mail order sales.

Chris tell Amateur Radio Newsline that he bought many parts from City Electronics in his early days of repeater building. In fact, Chris says his mother claimed that he owned half of the local Radio Shack but she was wrong. It was really like he was a part of City Electronics as were many other young Houston area hams and Chris tells Amateur Radio Newsline, it will be missed. (WB5ITT)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: INTELS NEW WARP SPEED CHIP

In another step toward faster computers, Intel Corp. has developed two new technologies that will help the tiny transistors inside microprocessors run cooler, use less power and operate more efficiently. The new designs complement several recent breakthroughs in building minuscule transistors that form the basis of all modern computing as they switch on and off billions of times a second. Earlier this year, Intel unveiled transistors just 20 nanometers wide. Today's Pentium 4 has 42 million transistors, each about 180 nanometers. For reference, a manometer is about 10,000 times narrower than a human hair. (Intel)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: DTV ROLLOUT UPDATE

Roughly two-thirds of commercial television stations plan to broadcast a digital signal by a federal government deadline of May 1, 2002. This, according to the National Association of Broadcasters.

In a report to the Federal Communications Commission, the industry group said that many of those that won't make the deadline are waiting for equipment to be delivered and expect to have digital broadcasts on the air in the months afterward. But some stations in smaller markets are having a hard time paying for the upgrade, the association says.

Right now, most home television sets in use receive only analog signals. But congress has mandated that broadcasters must give up their analog channels to the government by 2006. As a result, there are concerns that consumers won't have made the costly upgrade to televisions that can receive digital signals by that date. (Broadcasting Daily)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: EXPEDITION 4 CREW NOW ON THE ISS

An all ham crew is now in charge of the International Space Station and will be for the next six months.

Three astronauts and cosmonauts now running the ISS. They are Russian Commander Yuri Onufrienko, RK3DUO, along with American Flight Engineers Dan Bursch, KD5PNU, and Carl Walz, KC5TIE. They make up what is called the Expedition 4 crew and all three are expected to be on the air regularly for school contacts and possible open QSO times made available to talk with hams worldwide, as time permits.

The Expedition 3 crew comprised of United States Commander Frank Culbertson, KD5OPQ, along with Russian Flight Specialists Mikhal Tyurin and Vladimir Dezhurov is now back on good old Mother Earth. They returned on Monday, December the 17th aboard the space shuttle Endeavour. (AMSAT-NA, ARISS)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE FROM VK5ZAI

Attention educators. If you are thinking about teaching the International Space Station, here is a bit of assistance.

Tony Hutchison, VK5ZAI has updated his web pages with links to help schools in obtaining educational programs associated with the I-S-S and space science in general. Hutchison says that this should be of interest students and teachers alike especially if they are contemplating applying for a ham radio contact with the astronauts on the station.

SPACE AND SCIENCE: CHINA ON THE BRINK

DX

In DX, 9V1YC reports that he and eleven other hams will be activating South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands in January and February of 2002. The operation will be strictly on the high frequency bands. Exact dates, call signs and QSL managers are not being made public until the group is actually on the air. The New Zealand registered vessel "Braveheart" of ZL9CI fame will be supporting this team for the entire 30 day trip. (RSGB)

A bit higher in frequency, Jeff Klein, K1TEO reports that December 6th was another great D-X day on the 6 meter band. Jeff who lives in Connecticut says over the VHFReflector that the band was open for a solid two hours beginning at 7:30 am local. And talk about D-X. On his very first C-Q he landed HB9QQ who was operating portable HB0. Even better, Jeff says that the fifth caller was 4X1RF. (VHF Reflector)

Over in Great Britain hams are actually D-Xing for charity. Jeramy Boot G4NJH, reports from Nottingham in the U-K.

Every year in September, the British Wireless Fund for the Blind -- a registered charity - organises a fund-raising event in which amateur radio clubs and individuals are sponsored for the number and distance of the contacts that they make. As of the 11th of December, the British Wireless for the Blind Fund reported that 'Transmission 2001' had raised £6681.48, with more coming in every day. They say that they hope the final total will reach £7000. The charity offers prizes to the club and individual raising the greatest amounts.

This year the Cray Valley Radio Society operating as GB2FB and taking part for the first time, won the prizes for the club raising the most money and for making the most contacts. Robert Guscott, M5GUS, operating as GB0WB, won the prize for the leading individual.

Jeramy Boot, G4NJH.

The bottom line. This is another way that hams can not only enjoy their hobby, but can help others at the same time. (G4NJH)

THAT FINAL ITEM: A HAM RADIO CHRISTMAS STORY

And finally this week, the story that we wait all year to tell you. Its the ongoing story of hams who care about hospitalized children and what they do to bring a bit of holiday cheer to those kids who cannot make it to the mall to spend a few moments with old Saint Nick. Here’s Amateur Radio Newsline’s Joe Moell, K0OV:

As most hams know, propagation is very good this time of year. It's so good that it's easy to make contact with the North Pole. Many clubs around the country are taking advantage of these propagation conditions to set up QSOs with a very special North Pole station. They're making these contacts from hospitals and rehabilitation centers, and they sound like this:

--
Santa and Kids Audio Here
--

That's what the North Pole Network sounds like in southern California, where it's celebrating its 25th anniversary at Childrens Hospital of Orange County. In the past few days, I've heard from other clubs in the North Pole Network, including the AkSarBen ARC in Omaha and the Southwest Missouri ARC in Springfield. And YOUR club could bring holiday joy to hospital patients. There's a how-to article on the subject, with a dozen suggestions for your best North Pole Network ever, currently running on ARRL's Web site. That's arrl.org, of course. And there's even more about North Pole Network in southern California, plus lots of photos showing a quarter century of holiday fun, at the Hospital Disaster Support Communications System Web site, www.hdscs.org. Not quite gov'nor

I was merely re- iterating the level of intelligence by paraphrasing(if you know what the word means) which i think the CRETIN who insulted me possesses.
I was demonstrating how i think the CRETIN speaks,judging by the level of illiteracy which he exudes.You and he both clearly miss the point of my message.

You don't impress me at all by misquoting what i originally said,which is out of context to the original message.ANY fool(you as an example)can cut and paste.You are not clever.

I think you're making more of my comment than I said. Simply explaining that you have a ham radio and a federally issued license to operate it is nothing at all like showing your Federal Pilot's License and expecting to ride in the flight deck.

Languages evolve. Meanings of words change while new words emerge. (Remember when "gay" didn't mean homosexual?) And don't give me shit about our language not being English. The French spoken in Canada is different from that in France, but it's still called French. Same goes for Mexico and Spain with the Spanish Language. As long as people communicate their thoughts and understand each other, why should you or anyone else criticize? Get a clue, you stupid-arse wanker!

That is not the primary purpose. The primary purpose is so that all radios have one communications standard, so that they will be interoperable between systems. Understandably, the manufacturers are not overly happy about this - as it eliminates their propriatory functionality that generates their real money maker - the sale of radios.

Digital encoding all by itself stops most people from receiving the communications. There already exists the capability to encode analog communications so that the public cannot monitor traffic,
if desired.

Some police forces might wish to keep the public ignorant. But with the use of MDTs becoming more and more common, there isn't much spoken over the radios that would be of concern - except for special ops communications, which are already scrambled.

With a trunking system, you only have the talk groups that are programmed into your radio - the same is true for systems.
This is no different than for conventional repeater setups.

With a trunking system - there is no need for different agencies
to be on the same talk groups - except for the designed interagency groups. Those interagency groups are meant for use when such coordinated operation is desired.

I speak from practical experience here. I have performed the design and implementation of various trunking systems.

Even conventional systems have had encryption for many years.
The delay is over the cost of replacing the current systems with new equipment. The repeaters/controllers are relatively inexpensive - it is replacing all the handhelds and mobils that is most expensive.

Funny. I wonder how Radio Shack can sell their trunking scanners then?
They were designed and built after the law was passed.

Further, there is (as far as I know) no law against analyzing the
over the air signals and producing a receiver that works based on that information. As it is digital, it is really not very difficult.

From what? Hacking trunking schemes? Monitoring cellular communications?
The police cannot monitor cellular calls without a warrant - at least,
not legally.

Police chiefs are politicians. They often have never had any experience on the street.

Ah, but different agencies can coordinate - as long as the radios are all in the same band. Such system interoperability is trivial to set up.

What is wrong with digital trunking? From my experience, it has worked out quite well. A much larger number of communications are carried out on the same number of repeaters, and you don't have to listen on a channel before transmitting to make sure it is clear.

All trunking systems have a fallback mode. If the controller fails, you now have a standard conventional system.

Digital does have a somewhat shorter range than analog, but not much.

You are correct that the conventional systems were/are less expensive.
But they have their own shortcomings.

There will be a swimming class open to all ages at Kennebunkport, Maine next weekend. Ted Kennedy will be the instructor.
Ted will be giving first-hand accounts of how to survive a dunking in twelve feet of water. He will also touch on how to swim free of a submerged vehicle while intoxicated.
Ted will then touch on the legalities of how best to avoid negligent homicide charges. He will point out how to walk away from a death scene and escape unscathed.
Cocktails will be served.

That is not true, as others have pointed out. For example, say I have a locked briefcase in the trunk of my car. The officer does not have the right to even look in the trunk, much less the briefcase. That is a long way from "anything that is (in) a car".
He did not qualify the statement by "within reach of the driver".
For that matter, a locked briefcase that is within the reach of the driver is also probably not searchable without a warrant or probable cause.

Oh yes I do. And some of the things they have been doing under the pretext of the so-called "war on drugs" are frightening.

: Funny. I wonder how Radio Shack can sell their trunking scanners then?
: They were designed and built after the law was passed.
: Further, there is (as far as I know) no law against analyzing the
: over the air signals and producing a receiver that works based on
: that information. As it is digital, it is really not very difficult.

I do not think that law was passed. There was a good deal of opposition from within the ham community. I believe that it was in committee last year and was quietly dropped.

But the idea is still on the backburner, so to speak.

: > And remember, this only applies to civilians,
: > the police are exempt.
: From what? Hacking trunking schemes? Monitoring cellular communications?
: The police cannot monitor cellular calls without a warrant - at least,
: not legally.

The police can not use information gathered in court if it has not be subject to a warrant. But the law exempts the police. They can buy scanners, or even modified cellular equipment, and listen to whatever they want. There is no restrictions on them, or us, about listening. It is that they can not official gather "intelligence" without a warrant.

: > If the average police chief had his way, there would

: Police chiefs are politicians. They often have never had any experience
: on the street.
: > And someone is going to sue once it is learned
: > that different agencies can not co-ordinate. It
: > is going to cost someone there life.
: Ah, but different agencies can coordinate - as long as the radios
: are all in the same band. Such system interoperability is trivial
: to set up.

In the "heat of battle", it is too late. What happens now is that each patrol area or agency vehicles can monitor each other via scanners. If things are encrypted, it would mean that dispatch would have to move everyone
to a common talk group which would take time.

Give you an example. I was talking over lunch with a sheriff's deputy who transfers prisoners from the jail to the court house. He has the sheriff's talk groups but does not have the baliff's nor the downtown police talk groups.
If he were to have a prisoner escape, he would have to co-ordinate everything via dispatch. It may take several minutes to inform everyone. Some may be totally out of the loop and even have the escaped prisoner go right by them. Scanners help in such cases to keep everyone informed.

: > : > And you know that the media will be the first

: What is wrong with digital trunking? From my experience, it has : worked out quite well. A much larger number of communications are : carried out on the same number of repeaters, and you don't have : to listen on a channel before transmitting to make sure it is : clear.

Read http://www.strongsignals.net on a regular basis. Much of the digital systems are not working well. Now they think that the NYC FD digital radios may not have worked thus not informing the fire fighters to leave the WTC in time.

: With a trunking system, you only have the talk groups that
: are programmed into your radio - the same is true for systems.
: This is no different than for conventional repeater setups.
: With a trunking system - there is no need for different agencies
: to be on the same talk groups - except for the designed interagency
: groups. Those interagency groups are meant for use when such
: coordinated operation is desired.
: I speak from practical experience here. I have performed the design
: and implementation of various trunking systems.

And if everything is encrypted then one can not monitor other agencies. Many LEOs have scanners in their vehicles.

: That is not the primary purpose. The primary purpose is so
: that all radios have one communications standard, so that they : will be interoperable between systems. Understandably, the
: manufacturers are not overly happy about this - as it eliminates
: their propriatory functionality that generates their real money
: maker - the sale of radios.
: Digital encoding all by itself stops most people from receiving
: the communications. There already exists the capability to encode
: analog communications so that the public cannot monitor traffic,
: if desired.
: Some police forces might wish to keep the public ignorant. But
: with the use of MDTs becoming more and more common, there isn't
: much spoken over the radios that would be of concern - except
: for special ops communications, which are already scrambled.

And look at how pissed everyone got when Bill Cheek broke the Motorola encoding for their MDT's! Just because the NYC PD department had a bunch of cops using the MDT's to pass their off color jokes about women and minorities.

Life is risk, and ALL jobs require a certain level of risk acceptance to perform. Miners must risk their lives to perform their jobs.....they know the hazards and the rate of death in their industry, yet they accept that and continue to work.

You're just pissed, again, because people aren't buying into your "I'm superior to you because I'm military" crap.

What I find really interesting is how on one hand you claim you have to risk your life as part of your job, then on the other gripe because "the yuppies" send you out on missions that risk your life.

If risk is in your job description (and I would like to see you document that), then quit bitching when you are asked to risk your life in the performance of your job.

Loose it to what? The imbecilic, pathetic, moral-less banter amid the squeals and howls of mis-tuned transmitters, roger-beeps and echoes characteristic of CB now? Why do you think that abuse is better than no use at all? Jeez-0-Pete; I can't even tune into 11 meters with the kids around.

Corporate expansion? What's that supposed to mean????

Do you think law-abiding, cooperative, knowledegable hams are going to happily loose 10 meters like they did the 11 meter band all those years ago?

Take a deep breath and consider this: there are other people in this world but you - and they DON'T exist solely to provide you pleasure and comfort, or support you when you don't get your sophomoric way. The law IS the law. Just because you don't like it doesn't make it less so.

Alternatively, study and get your ticket. Try it - it can build character!

grammer or spell laming, Woger, you fucking idiot." in <9rrsbb$53e$4@dosa.alt.net>

Joanie shows off that 2nd grade education with the following IKYABWAI:
"You're "Guide to Gay Lifestyle" handbook doesn't count." in <9r3sr9rkib@dosa.alt.net>

Joanie shows off his "William and Mary" [William and Mary School for the Mentally Handicapped, that is] education when he drooled:
"And what's you excuse?" in <9u2v8g$vp7$6@pita.alt.net>

Joanie the Pulitzer prize winner slobbered incoherently:
"I cant' believe I'm agreeing with you, Woger."

Ah, but that's just it. I do NOT recognize your claim to superiority because of your occupation. Nor does risking your life within your occupation automatically confer some form of superiority upon the members of that occupation. If you don't like the pay, then you better find another career.

Of course you'd probably take a cut in pay since it's apparent that your skills couldn't compete on the open market with those inferior civilians...

: If risk is in your job description (and I would like to see you document : that), then quit bitching when you are asked to risk your life in the : performance of your job.

Give you a little choice in this matter.

We can continue down the path we are going.
We now have a mercenary military, police and fire force in this country that is divorced from the people. They see themselves as more superior, a warrior class. It is taught to them in Basic Training (Marines are the best at such attitudes), in their academies. And the public reinforces that belief.
Just look at the panic among the yuppies every time there is a shooting in a workplace or school.
A bunch of sheeple.

The yuppie ruling class wants more police, more fire fighters, more military. But do not take their sons. Oh, and please disarm all those rednecks and gang bangers too, they cry.

Watch as our police force becomes bigger, much larger than the military, reaching 5 to 10 million men. We will do as we do with the military and allow foreigners to serve. And we are already recruiting special ops folks to be police officers.
Just talked to a guy yesterday who spent 11 years in the Rangers and is now a local cop. Heavily recruited. Why? Maybe the mayor wants a private army? And that is happening everywhere, cities are looking for former Marines, Rangers, Special Forces, SEALS and members of the military intelligence community (especially Signal Intel so they can listen to cell phones). And you do not think people with this type of training will not see themselves as superior to the average yuppie sheeple or the white trash or the gang bangers?

You may see the draft as a violation of the 13th amendment but is having 75% of your income taken any different? Because that is what it is going to take to support such an elite cadre.

The other choice is to do what the Founders wanted:
that the police, the military and fire protection be a community effort with ALL able bodied (those who are fit to serve) men serving part time. The intent was that the public be involved, not in service but in the decisions to go to war. Everything was to be shared.

What do we have today? An American people who have abdicated their responsibilities, willing to allow the government to make their decisions, others to be their protectors. But the draft is still the law, re-authorized by congress in 1994. There are National Guard officers in every state who man the draft boards, waiting for the word (and the money) from congress.

So what is the choice? An elite government, protected by mercenaries? Or a nation where everyone is involved?

Why, when it was of no interest to all the other groups?

And good mayors, governors, etc. will demand that their police force personnel and anyone else that is employed by government understands and respects the fact that they ARE public servants. Unfortunately, there still are jurisdictions that operate on the "Dukes of Hazard School of Local Government." Thankfully, with the media coverage today, that is becoming far more difficult to do and the bad attitude employees will find it more difficult to thumb their noses at the public that employs the,.

Translation...you can't have it both ways. If you don't want it encrypted (or trunked) to keep most scanner owners from listening...then you have to live with the fact that they can listen. There are far too many receivers already in existence to ever consider any ban on people owning/listening to police frequencies. Indeed, most any radio can do so with a simple converter in front of it.

There are NO such laws against ham equipment.

I'd not stop any cop from taking the radio...BUT that cop better have a valid reason when I follow-up with the authorities to get it back and to learn just what/why it was taken in the first place.

??? So in order to prove your point, you dish out a totally unintelligible and illiterate post? Not to mention the drunken mumbling about "asians", "scandinavians", etc.

> You and he both clearly miss the point of my > message.

That you dislike americanisms in the English language, yet are unable to write a coherent sentence in the language you're "protecting"?

> You don't impress me at all by misquoting what i originally said,which is > out of context to the original message.ANY fool(you as an example)can cut > and paste.You are not clever.

Any fool may be able to cut and paste, but that's one skill you apparently lack. Let me give you a few pointers: sentences begin with a capital letter. There is always a space between a word and parentheses (with the exception of whatever the parentheses contain) as well as between the period at the end of the sentence and the next word. Ditto for commas, exclamation marks and question marks. Writing whole words in upper case is considered tacky and in poor taste (also yelling in ng's), especially if it's done randomly. "Reiterate" is not spelled with a hyphen (let alone with a space after it). Nationalities and other words describing belonging to a geographical group are always capitalized. A sentence cannot begin with either "or" or "but". Abbreviations for countries are always capitalized (i.e. UK instead of uk). Learn the difference between "its" and "it's", as well between "countries" and "country's". Ditto for "too" and "to".
Also, you seem to be perplexed about certain nationalities, so let me enlighten you: we call Pakistanis and Bangladeshis Asians because they are from Asia.

Simple, isn't it? Likewise, it is perfectly normal to call Swedes Scandinavians and Americans - North Americans. The reason we don't call Britons "Britains" is because it is a word made up by you and no one else uses it.

And finally, language is a live, complex and fluid concept. To reject new words and phrases simply on the basis of their origin is to show an extreme close-mindedness that borders on stupidity. Most repressive governments usually take it upon themselves to regulate the language instead of allowing it to develop naturally. Therefore, your mindset is clearly similar to the one of a linguistic fascist. Notice that even though "mindset" can be described as "how someone thinks", there are few synonims for the word - ergo, there is nothing wrong with the word and the fact that it hasn't been around in the time of Shakespeare does not invalidate it in any way. As long as I'm mentioning Shakespeare, I wonder what you would have called dozens of his made up words which are today standard English. At least you have to agree that it is more natural to say "mindset" than "how someone thinks" in a sentence.

Poor KC8JBO. Meals-on-Wheels will come in Christmas day to feed Big Marie. Woger will smell the great food, want to eat, but no one will cook for poor Woger. No one loves poor Woger, save maybe the lavendar lads gang at O'Leary's Hourly Motel in Glendale. Woger will get vewy vewy angwy

Hi All ---

In my earlier message I wrote them Standard HT model numbers from memory, incorrectly I might add. Therefore, I would like to correct my posting and state that the Standard HT's that I reallt do have are as follows: C168A, C228A, C528A, and C628A.

I am still looking for extended TX mods for these radios. I have reviewed the suggestions made so far, and the keyboard sequences are not working for me. Specifically, the FUNCTION + D combo produces a tone which indicates it was not accepted. This is probably because this key combobation is used to assign memory channels, and the mode radio is in at the time it is pressed is not valid. Thought's anyone ?

I got one suggestion which would require openning up the radio and perform some micro-surgery on the/ curcit board. Thanks for the suggestion, I am saving these suggestions on the last resort pile. I am resonably convinced that with all of the smarts in the radio, that some key-combo should do the trick. After all, the MARS/CAP mods on the radio cannot not be that difficult.

Andy,

Found this on the 14.313 news page. I nearly peed myself laughing.
The author deserves a case of Samuel Addams beer fer-sure !

For the boys on 313:

'Twas the night before Christmas, and boy was it neat.
The kids were both gone, and I, Caracus Mike was in heat.
The doors were all bolted, the mike off the hook,
It was time for some nooky, by hook or by crook.
Momma in her teddy and I in the nude,
Had just hit the bedroom and reached for the mobil lube.
When out on the lawn there arose such a cry,
That I lost my boner, and momma went dry.
Up to the window I sprang like an elf,
Tore back the shade while she played with herself.
The moon on the crest of the snowman we'd built,
Showed a broom up his ass, clean up to the hilt.
When what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a rusty old sleigh and eight mangy reindeer.
With a gay little driver, half out of the sled,
A sock in his ear and a bra on his head.
Sure as I'm speaking, Summers EVE was high as a kite, Whoa Shithead, whoa Asshole, whoa Stupid, whoa Putz, Either slow down this rig or I'll cut off your nuts.
Look out for the lamp post, and don't hit the tree,
Quit shaking the sleigh, 'cause I gotta go pee.
They cleared the old lamp post, the tree got a rub,
Just as Santa leaned out and threw up on my shrub.
And then from the roof we heard such a clatter,
As each little reindeer now emptied his bladder.
I was donning my jockeys, to cover my ass,
When down the chimney Dave came with a crash.
His suit was all smelly with perfume galore,
He looked like a bum and smelled like a whore.
"That was some gay hotel," he said with a smile,
"The reindeer are pooped, and I'll just stay awhile"
He walked to the kitchen for himself poured a drink,
Then whipped out his pecker and pissed in the sink.
I started to laugh, my wife smiled with glee,
The old boy was hung nearly down to his knee.
Back in the den, Old Dave reached in his sack,
But his toys were all gone, and some new things were packed.
The first thing he found was a pair of false tits,
The next was a handgun with a penis that spits.

A box filled with condoms was Dave's next find,
And six pair of panties, the edible kind.
A bra without nipples, a penis extension,
And several more things I shouldn't even mention.
A recording of NTI, a photo of OTK, and all types of oil,
And a dildo so long that it lay in a coil.
"This stuff ain't for kids, Mrs. Santa will shit,
So I'll leave 'em here, and then I'll just split."
He filled every stocking and then took his leave,
With one tiny butt plug stuck under his sleeve.
He sprang to his sleigh, but his feet were like lead,
Thus he fell on his ass and broke wind instead.
In time he was seated, took reigns of his hitch, Saying,"Take me home, Rudolf. This night's been a bitch!"
The sleigh was near gone when we heard Davey shout,
"Thank God the K1MAN bulletin service is on the way out!!!"

As long as we're talking about state's laws, The differ wildly.

Here, there aren't any carry laws for law-abiding citizens.
There aren't any licences either, which is a double-edged sword.
I can carry anywhere in the state (other than the obvious places
- schools, courthouses...) no license required. OTOH, I can't get any benefit from reciprocal agreements either, since I have no permit. ..concealed or not.

I'm afraid there is a lot of truth in what you are saying. Contacts in the military are saying that units have been training for domestic operations for some time now. Dropping the draft in the 70's was a huge mistake, but one that could not be avoided politically. But it was not nearly as big a mistake as Carter forgiving all the draft dodgers>
A free people cannot forever secure their freedoms with a few dollars. If it's not worth personal participation it cannot be appreciated and will be given away without the givers even knowing what they give.

I'm on my 4th Dodge van....2 B150's, a B-250, and now a B-350 (Maxi).

the first three had 318's, Carter BBD 2 barrls and were fine for their application (200 k, 265 k and 240 k respectively), but the B-350 is used to haul a 16-ft car trailer that is most often loaded to the top of the side rails with transmissions, or somebody's 4WD pick-up I'm hauling in to rebuild its transmission, generally about 5000 pounds or so if you count the half-acre of mud hanging under it.

I doubt the 318 would have the ass to do the job, the 360 just purrs along (but at only about 9 mpg if you let the secondaries on the TQ open very often).

A Ham's Night Before Christmas

(Yet another corruption of Clement Clarke Moore's classic Christmas tale, this time distorted by Gary Pearce KN4AQ, Raleigh, NC, December 2, 1996.)

'Twas the night before Christmas,
And all through two-meters,
Not a signal was keying up Any repeaters.

The antennas reached up
From the tower, quite high,
To catch the weak signals
That bounced from the sky.

The children, Tech-Pluses, Took their HT's to bed,
And dreamed of the day
They'd be Extras, instead.

Mom put on her headphones,
I plugged in the key,
And we tuned 40 meters
For that rare ZK3.

When the meter was pegged
By a signal with power.
It smoked a small diode,
And, I swear, shook the tower.

Mom yanked off her phones,
And with all she could muster
Logged a spot of the signal
On the DX PacketCluster,

While I ran to the window
And peered up at the sky,
To see what could generate RF that high.

It was way in the distance,
But the moon made it gleam -
A flying sleigh, with an Eight element beam,

And a little old driver
who looked slightly mean.
So I thought for a moment,
That it might be Wayne Green.

But no, it was Santa,
The Santa of Hams.
On a mission, this Christmas,
To clean up the bands.

He circled the tower,
Then stopped in his track,
And he slid down the coax
Right into the shack.

While Mom and I hid Behind stacks of CQ,
This Santa of hamming
Knew just what to do.

He cleared off the shack desk
Of paper and parts,
And filled out all my late QSLs
For a start.

He ran copper braid,
Took a steel rod and pounded
It into the earth, till
The station was grounded.

He tightened loose fittings,
Resoldered connections,
Cranked down modulation,
Installed lightning protection.

He neutralized tubes
In my linear amp...
(Never worked right before -- Now it works like a champ).

A new, low-pass filter Cleaned up the TV.
He corrected the settings
In my TNC.

He repaired the computer
That would not compute,
And he backed up the hard drive
And got it to boot.

Then, he reached really deep
In the bag that he brought,
And he pulled out a big box.
A new rig? I thought!

A new Kenwood? An Icom?
A Yaesu, for me?!
(If he thought I'd been bad
it might be QRP!)

Yes! The Ultimate Station!
How could I deserve this?
Could it be all those hours
that I worked Public Service?

He hooked it all up
And in record time, quickly
Worked 100 countries,
All down on 160.

I should have been happy,
It was my call he sent.
But the cards and the postage
Will cost two month's rent!

He made final adjustments,
And left a card by the key:
"To Gary, from Santa Claus.
Seventy-Three."

Then he grabbed his HT,
Looked me straight in the eye,
Punched a code on the pad,
And was gone - no good bye.

I ran back to the station,
And the pile-up was big,
But a card from St. Nick
Would be worth my new rig.

Oh, too late, for his final came over the air.
It was copied all over.
It was heard everywhere.

The Ham's Santa exclaimed
What a ham might expect,
"Merry Christmas to all,
And to all, good DX."

Hope this is the right newsgroup...I just bought this Kenwood radio yesterday from a fellow at a flea market whom said that if I hooked it up to a battery and (some kind of ?) antenna that I could use this in my pickup truck (Ford) for talking CB. I paid $170 for it because I figured the bigger the better...was this too much? Will it display 19 or 40 chanels or some kind of frequency numbers? How much power does it have? The wires seem simple enough...(I presume) black for ground and red for positive. After visiting Radio Shack, their magnet mount antennas have the same connector as the one in the back of this radio...anyone with suggestions on which antenna to use with this Kenwood; should it be a short one or one of the bumper-mounted long ones? I want it to "get out" as much as possible. It came with a large (police department style) microphone, but I would rather have a hand held model, instead...where can I find one or would someone care to do a swap? Lastly, I'm planning to use Velcro to hold this under my dash...is this the best method?
Thank you in advance for any help,

No, you are only showing how you and your acquaintances feel.

I would qualify as one of the "educated elite". Yes, I am active in politics and with the local police/fire departments. I am also fairly well educated. It is funny that none of the people I know ever display the attitude you exhibit. Either they hide it well or you are an aberation.

Many politicians enjoy the power, I agree about that. Most of them actually believe that they are doing the ordinary citizen a favor by passing more and more restrictive laws.

They have no "authority and power" to enforce the laws. All they can do is provide the funds and hope the appropriate agencies use it as they intend.

> Doctors see themselves as more valuable than > most working class (blue collar) individuals. So

Yes, some doctors feel that way. But that is slowly changing as more and more people realize that doctors are not infallable. It has been a pleasure for me to see people starting to demand that they be allowed an active role in deciding what will be done to solve a medical problem. A doctor IS more valuable, when it comes to medical matters - but not so when it comes to areas outside the medical profession.

I don't know a lot of college professors, but have never felt that they have treated me as inferior in what associations I have had with them. Again, if it comes to knowledge about their area of specialization, then they are certainly more valuable as sources of information. But put a physical education professor in with a group of physicists, and the physical ed professor is going to feel inadequate and out of place.

It is obvious that you don't know much about trunking systems. All that is required is that the people switch to the interagency channel.
That is a simple turn of a knob or flipping of a switch.

On some systems, the dispatcher CAN move everyone - which takes a few seconds. But it is unnecessary on a properly set up trunking system.

All that shows is an inadequately designed talkgroup design.
It is not a fault of the system - it is the fault of whomever assigned the talk groups.

The WTC firefighters would not have received any warning. No one expected such a catastrophic collapse, or for it to happen so quickly. Even if they had, many of the firefighters would have gone in anyway - to get as many out as possible.

The LEOs would not need the scanners, if their trunking system were set up correctly.

The only people who would not be able to listen would be anyone outside the police/fire etc departments that were not programmed with the proper decryption codes.

Which is one of the reasons why police etc should not be allowed to

MDTs is another matter.

Poor Big Al, he'll suck off his reatrded son John again this year as part of the Xmas eve family tradition. Then he'll get drunk and jam up and down the band again until Riley kicks him off the air for good this time. Then he can concentrate all his energies on manufacturing and distribution of kiddie porn. Big Al will prepare his Xmas dinner of a TV dinner and Abernathy supremes. Unlike Big Al, Woger can cook for himself, or can go out to eat because he has money and doesn't spend it on drugs and booze like Big Al.

I wonder if Steve Turdeater will snort cocaine and babble on the air this year again?

Indeed, this is how the police service in Sydney, Australia now operate.
It's (I believe) 512 bit encrypted with the key built into a smartcard assigned to each officer).
The officer must insert the key before being able to decode, and hear the transmissions. This was all put in place as part of the Sydney 2000 Olympic games to protect police service transmissions from being eavesdropped by potential terrorist groups.

It's only a small step from production use in Australia, to test usage in the United States.

Perhaps, but under the idea of freedom they should have that choice. To force people to do something they don't want to do "because it's good for them", is usually the hallmark of oppression and tyranny. If fewer people want to serve, and we would like to have more serve, then we need to determine what and why they no longer have a desire to serve, and fix it.

Quite likely, if you had refused the search you would have been arrested,
and
then searched.

If you attempted to refuse the search and turn around, you would have been arrested and then searched.

More often then not, state cops look at the way people react and make decisions
based on gut feel. Most often they're right.

: Perhaps, but under the idea of freedom they should have that choice. To : force people to do something they don't want to do "because it's good for : them", is usually the hallmark of oppression and tyranny. If fewer people : want to serve, and we would like to have more serve, then we need to : determine what and why they no longer have a desire to serve, and fix it.

Then why do you allow yourself to be forced to pay taxes? That takes your labor from you as much as the draft would.

And the problems within the American population not easy to fix. Look at how vast the idea of pacifism has become among the yuppies (professional class, moderates) as well as the neo-Liberals. Or how we now have neo-Victorianism that is trying to train out any form of male behavior.

We are now a nation of cowards, of wimps. We no longer have the farm boys who knew how to fix things and were taught to be self reliant. Instead we have a lot of little rich kids in the suburbs who are spoiled rotten and mostly play video games. Over weight, lazy, no major life styles (first aid, shooting skills, knowledge of how things work or mechanical skills) who go on to college and become our leaders. IT IS THAT BAD!!!

There is talk in Congress of reactivating the draft.
As you know, congress did reauthorize it in 1994.
We have National Guard officers who man the draft board in each state capital, just waiting for the word (and the money). If you feel strongly against the draft then you MUST be willing to file a lawsuit against the US, based on your views of the 13th amendment, to force the courts to declare the draft unconstitutional. It is your right to do so.

No, Texas is a "shall issue" state, but they do have carry permits. I live in Vermont where there are no laws concerning permits. It's amazing since there is a law for most everything else in one's life, (like breathing).

See: http://www.packing.org/ for an unofficial interpretation of the laws in the various states.

You serve as proof that today few realize that freedom really isn't free.

I've been trying to get the PED CW pile up trainer to work without success (v4.11 and v5.19).

Loads fine until I copy a call and type it in, hit enter and nothing. The pile up continues ... I continue to type in calls, hit enter ... nothing.

What gives?

Thanks and 73!

I've never had any problems refusing a "consent search". However, I usually ask why first, and when they can't establish cause, it's to late to make something up. Sorry, but I'm not going to waste my time, energy plus having to pack and unpack my car just because some cop is on a fishing expedition. Either he has cause at which point he does NOT need to ask me, or he's going to need a warrant. I will NOT volunteer for such a search. I would also tend to claim that by asking for a search the cop is admitting that he lacks probable cause to search as otherwise he wouldn't bother asking your permission. I think I could make the judge see things my way, particularly when the cop doesn't find anything.

Congress has been given the power to tax, the 13th prohibits the draft.

Enslave me so I shall be free?

Freedom means BEING ABLE TO CHOSE. You deny choice, you deny freedom. People SHOULD serve, but they and they alone should make that choice for themselves. If fewer people chose to serve, then that should be taken as a warning sign that something is wrong in the system.

And before you get on your high horse claim I am proof that freedom isn't free, let's see you post a scan of your DD-214. That is assuming you even know what that is......

Where in the 13th amendment does it is say that the draft is covered by that amendment.
If you look, the 13th exempts the government.

what? no more Rat Shack bashing? :)... i wanted to put a 440 in my Dodge RAMCharger (truck)... only one problem... the 318 in it refuses to die.

> I'm running one in a 66 ragtop,...can't roll-bar it,..or tub it.

awesome! my truck burns some gas too... i somehow doubt the 440 will get much worse mileage than now... well, as long as i can keep my foot off the floor.

> 318's / 360's .....when you want the very best (there, that oughta > liven things up)

the 360 can put out some serious torque if set up right... hmm, maybe i should replace the 318 with a 400-cube 360 stroker.

how about a 440 with a paxton centrifugal supercharger :).

the 318 is a very reliable motor, that is for sure. i replaced my 2 bbl carb with an edelbrock 600 cfm 4 bbl, also put in edelbrock cam, manifold, and 6" high K&N circular air cleaner. there was this young guy recently in a mustang next to me at a light who tried to 'race' me... he found out the hard way that he can't shift worth a damn lol... his gf was less than thrilled. i don't speed so seconds later he went wizzing by but by then the damage was done... beat by a 4500 lb truck... hehe :D

"Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction."

> If you look, the 13th exempts the government.

Where please?

Section 1 is posted above, section 2 states

"Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

There are no other sections. No exemptions for the government.

> What legal scholars support your wild ass > views?

Oh, it's something called the Constitution of the United States of America as Amended.

I don't need to appeal to authority. The facts themselves support me.

> What court ruling support your off
> the wall hype libertarianism?

I see, so unless an authority supports you, then you can' t be right. No wonder Galileo was locked up, all the authorities said he was wrong.....but damn the facts supported him. Now who is see to have been right, the one supported by the fact, or the "authority"?

Appeal to authority is a useless undertaking, either the facts support you at which point it doesn't matter what authority states, or you are wrong and agreement with authority isn't going to make you right.

6581. Fuel pump RFI in 2000 Grand Marquis

Good afternoon folks

The fuel pump of my 2000 Grand Marquis appears to be generating at least an S 7 noise level in the 17M, to 10M bands. I've added a combination of HyPass capacitors and chokes in the external fuel pump leads as they enter the tank, through the trunk. While this effort reduced the original noise level by several S units, it remains high enough to obscure relatively weak signals.

Any suggestions on how to further reduce fuel pump RFI?

My rig is an FT1000MP, antenna is an SGC 303 with SGC 230 antenna coupler

Thanks for your help

There are a good deal of elitism out there.
For whatever reason. The Marines teach
it. So do the police academies.

AHHhh - "a rose by any other name is STILL a rose"

OR, to break it down into language even a CBer can comprehend - obtaining a Ham License does NOT automatically, or instantly, transform a raving crude IDIOT into a useful, considerate and law abiding operator. BUT, CBers entering the Ham ranks soon find that their former operating habits loom as objectional on the Ham bands as does a fart in church - and they quickly either modify their

RETEST Roger (whaddafuckingidiotheis!)

GLENDALE, WV: The FCC requested July 11, 2000, that Roger L.
Wiseman, KC8JBO, retake the General examination
elements under the supervision of an ARRL-VEC volunteer examiner
team. Wiseman must appear for retesting by September 11, 2000, or his license will be canceled. Applicants appearing for re-examination are granted an Amateur Radio license consistent with the elements passed. The FCC had written Wiseman on March 29, 2000, advising that it had been made aware of "an ongoing personal dispute" between Wiseman and another licensee that included allegations of interference or jamming on 20 meters. FCC Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement Riley
Hollingsworth invited the two licensees to contact him
to discuss the matter. Additionally, the FCC had sent Wiseman a Warning Notice last November in response to allegations of deliberate and malicious interference on 20 meters.

What we have is the language of the 13th Amendment. What we do not have is any language that would support YOUR opinion that the government is excluded from the provisions of the 13th Amendment.

Yep, but the language of the 13th Amendment sure as hell does, and it doesn't say anything about excluding the government.

Yep, now we see it people. The Constitution is just bullshit.

Nice to have your finally confirm your position on the Constitution.

So much for your oath.

I see. So according to you, racial discrimination is legitimate because Courts ruled it was Constitutional?

Sorry, but the Court is nothing more than another opinion...heck they even CALL their decisions opinions... What about that?

I think you are pulling authority out of your ass again, and that they have said no such thing.

Sorry, but my family doesn't listen to demented people such as yourself.

Nor would I listen to you, except that pointing out the errors in your position is so much fun.

CERTIFIED MAIL RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED

Mr. George A. Ashley 1138 Collierville Arlington Road
Collierville, TN 38017

Subject: Warning Notice: Amateur Radio Station W4FQF

Dear Mr. Ashely:

Information before the Commission indicates that you have engaged in deliberate interference on the 75 Meter Amateur Band (3.901 MHz) at various times since October 2000. Some of the interference included tape recordings. We note that on January 7, 1999 you were warned about such activities on the 20- Meter Amateur Band.

This constitutes a second warning that any further incidents of such operation will result in enforcement action being taken against you, including license revocation, monetary forfeiture, or both.

Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 18 U.S.C. Section 308(b), gives the Commission the authority to obtain information from licensees about the operation of their station. Pursuant to Section 308(b), you are requested to respond to this letter within 20 days of the above date. You are also requested to furnish the following information.
1. Describe the radio transmitting equipment, including antennas, you have at the 1138 Collierville Arlington Road Address. State the manufacturer, model and serial number of each item. If any items were constructed or modified by you, describe the item in detail.
2. Describe any radio transmitting equipment, including antennas, you have at any other address in Tennessee. State the manufacturer, model and serial number of each item. If any items were constructed or modified by you, describe the item in detail.

Please be advised that Congress has made punishable a willfully false response to a letter of this type. See 18 U.S.C. Section 1001.

Sincerely,

W. Riley Hollingsworth

Special Counsel
Enforcement Bureau

Funny how Hal Turner offers a TOLL-FREE number to the U.S. when, according to FCC rules, shortwave broadcast stations are not authorized to direct their programming to domestic audiences.

What a sorry attitude. Thankfully here in NJ the mayor is in charge and the press, the courts and the public do not take kindly to rogue policing. We support good police...but we don't support a police state.

I guess it depends on where you live. You have your perceptions

The police/Marines/doctors/professors etc ARE the elite, when it comes to their areas of expertise. Outside that, they are no better

A Tail (spelled correctly) of Two Hams.

In a place far, far away in a time not so long ago (actually Cape Cod 1991) there were two hams who were friends. Moose, KF1OF, and Dick, KC1HOT. It came upon a great contest weekend in November (yes I know great contest is a contridiction of terms). The contest was called Sweepstakes not to be confused with the so called "SS" infamous during World War II. Although both SS's had a tendency to push out the small guy, the ham radio version is more benign. KD1OF was intent on scoring big in the contest. In fact he formed a special club called the Old Farts of Cape Cod (he used the suffix of his call to get the name), this club gathered huge sums of money by selling off the estates of dead hams in the name of education and then spent the money on Japanese radios, American beams, and computers in order to build the ultimate contest station.

The great day came (pun?) and the members gathered together. They pooled their best cliches (finest kind, Righto, Fine Business, none of your beeswax, Ciao, HI HI, Thunderbumpers, QSL, Let me be honest wid ya, anywho, destinated, arrivanated, 59 (but never ever Six nine), let me drop it (never said in mixed company). They all practiced saying, "Cq Contest, contest, contest, contest contest, contest, contest contest, contest, contest contest, contest, contest contest, contest, contest contest, contest, contest contest, contest, contest" and then listening. They drank a few 807's (beers). They ate some popcorn and beans (in order to sing the club song-named after the club). Finally the big moment arrived (or should we say arrivaniated). But where was the ham who could really score, KF1HOT, Dick? No one could find him. It was decided a Contestpediation would be sent out to Dick's house as the L A N D L I N E was all twisted up in a knoted pair.

The Contestpediation arrived at Dick's house, all was quiet, the beam was erect but not rotating, the dipoles were lying in the trees softly, and the whip (on the car) was slightly bent. The hams knocked on the door, but there was no answer, even though a few lights were lit softly and both cars were in the driveway. The hams gave up in despair, and they headed back to prepare for the SS. On the way back they laughed that Dick probably was doing "honey Dews" (honey do this, honey do that-hams love to use this term). They lamented that Dick was fixing the rugs, or hanging plants, or doing light plumbing.

Moose got suspicious that there was more to this disappearance, and headed back to Dick's QTH. When he got there he peeked through the blinds and what did he see? He saw that the lights were dim, but not out. He heard the music from the movie "10." He saw Dick's wife of 15 years dressed in a light silk blouse. As he watched it was clear that the love and affection of this couple was as warm as it was genuine. They playfully went from room to room with an occasional kiss and warm embrace. It was clear Dick was not going to be at the contest, but he was not going to miss it.

When Moose returned to the rest of the hams they inquired as to what was up at Dick's home. Moose replied to the hams, "you wouldn't understand", but Moose understood. Moose left the hams to their astonishment, and went home. Upon arrival his wife greeted him at the door and said, "Honey you are going to miss the contest!" Moose replied, "I will never miss another contest, there is nothing about contests to miss." Moose and his wife drew the curtains and began life.

Disclaimer: Nothing in this story relates to any hams living or dead (assuming any hams are alive in the first place). The story is complete fiction.

Wogie does too have a social life! He begins it each and every morning by helping his incontinent momma to the porcelain fixture. There he steadies her so she won't slide off the slippery seat and then he assists her back to her easy chair in the small living room. Wogie fixes her a cup of tea and then slinks off to the computer to see what was said about him during the night. This usually occurs between 6:30 and 7:00 a.m. on a daily basis.
Roger has only a half hour or so to post his responses, so he types ever so furiously so as to get in the most responses possible in so short a time. (this explains the poor spelling, grammar and cheap plagiarism)
Roger then reluctantly trundles off to the auto parts store to earn his daily bread. Roger punches in around 8:00 a.m., grabs a paper cup of coffee and heads for the back room where the inventory computer is. Roger does a quick check of the incoming and outgoing inventory, which takes him about five minutes since most people in Glen Dale don't own automobiles. He then sticks his thick neck out the door and glances up and down the aisle to be sure the boss is not around. Thus satisfied, he logs on to Usenet again and again types furiously in response to posts about him. This takes him 20 minutes at most since all of his posts are the same old tripe.
Wogie then takes the 1976 company truck out to drop off a few spark plugs at the local gas stations and he often pulls into a local playground to eat the luncheon sandwhich that Big Marie had prepared for him the night before. He SO enjoys watching the little kids as they frolic to and fro.
Later, after lunch, Rogie returns to the auto parts store where he once again heads to the computer and once again goes straight to Usenet where he promptly posts more filth.
After work Rogie returns home, makes supper for Marie and retires early so as to rest up for the next morning's foray on Usenet.
See? Rog does have a social life! Usenet is his life. Usenet is Roger. Usenet is his sole identity. Usenet is his addiction and all that he has...all he is, and all he will ever be.

Guess "HerbieKV4FZ" <HerbKV4FZ@KV4FZlives.com only "social life" his his right hand. It must be tough not able to connect to your so-called "family" since they told you not to come to family gatherings and got a court order

There is the problem. Because they are elite every other aspect of society. Because they are competent, they tend that no one else is.

And if they do not know how to do it, then no one else should be able to do so either.

buhahahahahahahahahhahahaha.. lllllllllardass llllloyd you are a molesting little prick with an obsession for balls.

I restate the obvious once again.

FUCK OFF DAVIES. Christmas Day is a good day for you to commit suicide.. do it Davies, prove you can do something right, turn the gas up in the trailer, wrap the windows in weatherproofing, and stick your head in the oven... oh shit that won't work, you have a hot plate and a toaster oven... well just attach a knife to the counter, and charge at it from the other end of the trailer... a good 15' headstart just may do it. rofl

Where is RETESTroger?

GLENDALE, WV: The FCC requested July 11, 2000, that Roger L.
Wiseman, KC8JBO, retake the General examination
elements under the supervision of an ARRL-VEC volunteer examiner
team. Wiseman must appear for retesting by September 11, 2000, or his license will be canceled. Applicants appearing for re-examination are granted an Amateur Radio license
consistent with the elements passed. The FCC had written Wiseman on March 29, 2000, advising that it had been made aware of "an ongoing personal dispute" between Wiseman and another
licensee that included allegations of interference or jamming on 20 meters. FCC Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement Riley
Hollingsworth invited the two licensees to contact him
to discuss the matter. Additionally, the FCC had sent Wiseman a Warning Notice last November in response to allegations of deliberate and malicious interference on 20 meters.

6629. Roger DOES have a social life!

This is worth repeating:

Wogie does too have a social life! He begins it each and every morning by helping his incontinent momma to the porcelain fixture. There he steadies her so she won't slide off the slippery seat and then he assists her back to her easy chair in the small living room. Wogie fixes her a cup of tea and then slinks off to the computer to see what was said about him during the night. This usually occurs between 6:30 and 7:00 a.m. on a daily basis.
Roger has only a half hour or so to post his responses, so he types ever so furiously so as to get in the most responses possible in so short a time. (this explains the poor spelling, grammar and cheap plagiarism)
Roger then reluctantly trundles off to the auto parts store to earn his daily bread. Roger punches in around 8:00 a.m., grabs a paper cup of coffee and heads for the back room where the inventory computer is. Roger does a quick check of the incoming and outgoing inventory, which takes him about five minutes since most people in Glen Dale don't own automobiles. He then sticks his thick neck out the door and glances up and down the aisle to be sure the boss is not around. Thus satisfied, he logs on to Usenet again and again types furiously in response to posts about him. This takes him 20 minutes at most since all of his posts are the same old tripe.
Wogie then takes the 1976 company truck out to drop off a few spark plugs at the local gas stations and he often pulls into a local playground to eat the luncheon sandwhich that Big Marie had prepared for him the night before. He SO enjoys watching the little kids as they frolic to and fro.
Later, after lunch, Rogie returns to the auto parts store where he once again heads to the computer and once again goes straight to Usenet where he promptly posts more filth.
After work Rogie returns home, makes supper for Marie and retires early so as to rest up for the next morning's foray on Usenet.
See? Rog does have a social life! Usenet is his life. Usenet is Roger. Usenet is his sole identity. Usenet is his addiction and all that he has...all he is, and all he will ever be.

I don't buy it, N9MWO. There is and always has been elitgeism amongst the elite in any human endeavor, and that elitism has served for far more good than evil in free societies. I've known a lot of elite police officers in the past 40 years and darn few of them showed any tendency to transfer that to the sort constitutional violations you describe. Things change, and sometimes pretty fast, but if we're headed down that slippery slope, I haven't seen a lot of evidence of it. Of course I have seen some. One of he most gregarious cases was in New York Cit. In 1962 I watched a NYPD street cop give a guy an awful cussing in public while he stood with his hand on the butt of his revolver as if he dared the guy to respond in any way. The fellow' soffense was cuttting across one extra traffic lane to get to a (rare) parking spot. There was no safety reason for him not to do that, except the LEO noted his out of state license plate, and after all, some jerk behind who wanted the spot himself honked.....

Of course Roger, being the submissive milquetoast he is, ran hiding behind Big Marie's curtains. He heard that a big guy with a funny red suit would be landing on his roof and Roger immediately thought that one of the Usenet guys was after him.
Rog grabbed his little security blankie, grabbed his favorite moth-eaten teddy bear and headed to his favorite spot at the end of Big Marie's bed. Once there he pulled the blankie over his bulbous little head, inserted his thumb in his mouth and assumed the fetal position.
Of course Roger's mom had no way of knowing that he was cowering at the foot of her bed. She lost her hearing many years ago and she does not see well in the dark.
Roger will be up soon, however. As soon as the sun peeks through Big Marie's window ol Roger will toss the blankie from his head and immediately leap to Marie's computer. He will boot up the computer while he twists his nail polished fingers in anticipation of the repetetive filth he is preparing to spew.
Roger will be up within a couple hours of this post. He will do his usual...post thirty or forty responses...and all of the will be a cheap repeat in some way of all his others. Nothing original...just pure, unadelterated filth.
After all, what can one expect from one who has so little going for him?

PS: Rog...don't bother slamming me ref. anonymous posts. As Mysterian 2001 you have done the same.

Yeah, but Glen Dale doesn't have toilets on the street that overflow and flow into the street, adding to the stnch that France already is by it's people.

You would have a five-to-thirty minute delay while an ambulance was called, then you'd be on your way to the hospital and your father would be on his way to jail for reckless endangerment.

I got to help get a drunk driver off the road that way once on I-95. I had heard the report on the MDSP frequency, and not 30 seconds later there he was in front of me. Got on Channel 9, which was the only "interagency" radio I had and reported the guy. Three minutes later, I had two trooper cars pulling him over. Blew a .23 -- I'm surprised he was staying on the road, never mind between the lines.

But it was a darn good thing I had a ham ticket to go with the scanner.

A vertically oriented tightly-wound helical antenna. What would the polarization angle be, I wonder?

Hi Dick,

When I got my driver's license in 1964, there was an NCHP trooper in that county that did everything he could to make certain teen drivers got tickets. He would check DMV records to see who was newly licensed and deliberately stalk and follow them--sometimes so closely that one could not even see his headlights. He absolutely HATED anyone under 21 years old--even though he wasn't very old himself. He was arrogant, self-centered, egotistical, and a real SOB.
Not long after I was licensed at 16, sure enough, he appeared at a local store lot, and when I turned onto the main highway, he immediately got right on my bumper and held his handset up to his ear as tho he was calling in my tag #. I had been warned by the other kids about this, so I wasn't concerned except for his dangerous tailgating. He did this to me several times. My Dad reported him to the Sergeant to no avail. Another day, I started to town on an errand assigned by my Mom, and he began tailing me. I found a wide shoulder, signaled and pulled off the road. I got out and pretended to be looking at the car as if something were wrong. Finding nothing, I got back in and continued. Corporal C had stopped just a few yards behind, making no effort to hide his harassment. I drove a couple more miles and pulled off, again pretending to inspect the car for a problem totally ignoring Coporal C who, again, had stopped as well. I continued to do this every few miles until finally, when I signalled to pull off again, he turned on his light and stopped right behind me. He gruffly asked me what was wrong. I calmly said the car was making a "squeaking noise" like there was a bad bearing or something. He looked at the car and, finding nothing (of course!) he, pointed his finger at me and said, "You BETTER be having trouble, boy, or I'll run you in!" Huh? He then left quickly. I was pretty sure there was nothing he could do to me because there was no law against "suspecting" there is something wrong with one's car. I think maybe he caught onto what I was really doing, and it made him mad that a kid was making a fool out of him.

I heard that he pulled over a football player (senior, 6' 5" and 260lbs) and started cussing him out for swerving to dodge a pothole. The kid didn't hesitate and knocked

Corporal C down into a ditch (full of water) and out cold. Richie (not his real name) drove away and left the muddy, sopping trooper to wake up alone. The odd thing was, Richie never heard anything from it...even though he expected a yard full of NCHP cars at any moment for the next couple weeks! Did ole "C" KNOW he was out of line, but just enjoyed hassling teenagers? Maybe this story was a bit enhanced--I don't know----, BUT there WAS another witness that said he saw trooper C climbing out of the ditch with mud from head to toe, and he didn't know why because there was nobody around except the now VERY wet trooper and a lonely Ford patrol car with blue lights blinking. He didn't stop because, "I HATE that sonuvabitch"!

Trooper C, I heard after I moved away, got into deep doo doo when he began to harass a young girl. I'm told she was quite the looker, JV Queen, Cheerleader, etc. His interest became MORE than giving her tickets--he became obsessed with this one girl. He followed her, both in and out of his patrol car, he harassed and threatened her steady boyfriend, and finally tried to force her to do "things" with him in exchange for dropping "charges" that were bogus to begin with. Her Dad's brother was a State Representative. He pulled a few strings and they had her wear a wire (bug). They got what they needed, and Trooper C found himself facing charges-- to the laughter and delight of all--especially the high school kids he had been such grief to.
It couldn't have happened to a 'more deserving' fellow! LOL!

This happened to me when I was 17. A neighbor with conjestive heart failure had an attack and was near death. I had a 1961 Chevrolet with a pretty "peppy" engine. We got Mr. Parham in the car and started out to the hospital. I was driving at around 85 MPH with flashers and lights on. NCHP caught up alongside and I pointed at my passenger whose head was lolling back on the seat and made the "cutthroat" sign. The trooper nailed that Plymouth and led us to the hospital at 85-95 MPH. He made certain that we DID have an emergency, and that done, there were no ramifications. We lived at that time a full 12 miles from town-- out in the boonies. To wait for an ambulance would've meant certain death for our neighbor because there just weren't any rescue squads out there. It was the one time I got to drive at a high rate of speed (I am not thrilled by that anymore) without being ticketed. I do remember the sound of that Quadra-jet moaning as we raced to the hospital.

Depends on the feed wire, since the feed wire will pick up about as much signal as the antenna, if it's approximately the same length as the broomstick. If both the broomstick and the feed wire are vertical, the polarization will be vertical.

Excuse me all to hell but 11 meters was given to the Amateur Service in Region 2 after the 1947 WARC cut 20 meters; it was never a treaty band and was never available in Region 1 (Europe and Africa). When 15 meters, a treaty band out of the same WARC, was cleared of its Marine occupants in the early 50s, 11 became a wasteland and was returned to Land Mobile in the late 50s. I was on 11 in 1957-58 fiddling with A4 when 11 was the only legal place to do it and believe me it was e-m-p-t-y. As the good Baron put it, I vas dere Sharlie. We did not lose a thing anyone cared about.

You might also note that being a treaty band, the FCC lacks the authority to redesignate ten meters in any case.

6658. Once upon a Time (was TT Vx HRO)

Once-upon-a-time, and it hasn't been all that many years ago, relatively speaking, Amateur Radio sales was a good business. It was a business where there was a place for large and small dealers alike. It was a time when a dealer could load up and go to a swap and basically bring home the empty van and a whole bunch of cash.

Yes, it was hard work and long days, but there was good money to be made.

Somewhere around the late 70s, or very early 80s something changed. The cost of doing business went up. Overhead went up drastically. Now this was around the time of the gas shortage and high prices. People quit buying big ticket items. Rigs were in the process of moving from tube, to hybrid, to fully solid state.

As a group we Hams have always been known to think our rigs to be worth near as much as we paid for them, even a few years later. Hams came to expect to get that kind of payback and were insulted when people wouldn't offer near what they wanted. If someone else had the same kind of rig they'd say it wasn't worth near that much, but couldn't understand why people didn't think theirs was worth more.

Sooo...we pay as little as possible, taking advantage of the hospitality of those dealers who will take the time to work with us and then purchase where ever we can pay the least. <sarcasm on> Then we wonder why there are so few left that offer in store service? <sarcasm off> Amateur radio is not a high volume market and a dealer has to be able to make money at least in one area.

They either have to make money on new rigs, on service, and/or on used gear.

The profit margin on rigs is relatively small, unlike SUVs where the margin has been much larger than on cars.

A dealer can sell small parts at, or close to retail so those help a lot. BUT as one other poster pointed out, a dealer does not have to make a profit on every sale. What they do have to do, is make an overall profit large enough to pay store rent/lease, or in the case where they own it, taxes. They not only have to take a clerks wages out, but there is SS, unemployment, and a myraid of other charges to be accounted. For a low volume business that overhead can be a killer. By-the-way, one of the big expenses is bad checks. You have to sell a lot of rigs to play "catch up" for just one on which the check bounced when you may have been working on a 10% margin.

When all is said and done, they still have to make enough profit to live on from a low voulume, low profit margine, long hours, business.

It boils down to a dealer would have to have a huge turnover in inventory to be able to offer both sales and service to the customer. Even then, every minute away from actual sales cuts into profits which were not large to begin.

Sooo...In general a dealer can offer good mail order prices, or good personal, in store service with higher prices.

IF I know what I want (I usually do, but not always), I quite often use Texas towers, particularly for tower installation parts. (I've always had the parts within two days) I use a local (more or less - He's within about 150 miles) dealer (ComDac) for those items they can supply. I go to AES for those items I need right away that they are more likely to have in stock.

I've found all of the established dealers are good to deal with. They would soon go out of business if they weren't. Sure, each and every one has something go wrong now and then.

The biggest problem today is that there isn't a good place where the new customer/ham can go and personally get good, unbiased advise. The very nature, due to what most of us expect, percludes such a set up.

W32A owners:

I am interested in purchasing (if anyone has one for sale, please let me know!) a RigBlaster NOMIC and using it with a W32A. Before I would purchase one, I am curious if anyone has been successful in such an endeavor?

What are the pinouts for the jumpers inside? What are the pinouts for the cables? Are the cables hard to make?

Found in alt.radio.pirate:

A radio pirate in the Barnes Road area of St. John's, Newfoundland, Canada has had his equipment confiscated by Industry Canada. The pirate, who, they describe as 'not too bright' and dressed in woman's clothing was awakened from his sleep by a squad of agents, who searched the house and seized thousands of dollars of radio transmitting equipment. The pirate was caught when while under the influence of alcohol, mistakenly broadcast his address on the air, while soliciting free beer from listeners. Charges are pending.

Wonder if he also operated on 14.313 and fancied an "erotic exotic relationship" with a certain ham in Vermont? ;)

: I don't buy it, N9MWO. There is and always has been elitgeism amongst
: the elite in any human endeavor, and that elitism has served for far more : good than evil in free societies. I've known a lot of elite police : officers in the past 40 years and darn few of them showed any tendency to : transfer that to the sort constitutional violations you describe.
: Things change, and sometimes pretty fast, but if we're headed down that : slippery slope, I haven't seen a lot of evidence of it. Of course I have : seen some. One of he most gregarious cases was in New York Cit. In 1962 I : watched a NYPD street cop give a guy an awful cussing in public while he : stood with his hand on the butt of his revolver as if he dared the guy to : respond in any way. The fellow' soffense was cuttting across one extra
: traffic lane to get to a (rare) parking spot. There was no safety reason
: for him not to do that, except the LEO noted his out of state license
: plate, and after all, some jerk behind who wanted the spot himself
: honked.....

While I do agree with you that elitism has been more good than bad as our country was founded on elitism (our Founders were men of learning and property, to even vote required that one had to own land). And also the French ideal of equality has created more suffering than good (the French revolution was at the root of a good deal of the wars since then).
However, what I have a problem with is that so many in the US just can not accept that someone might be better than they.

And elitism can be carried too far. One of my friends is Purdue cop. He had been a Lafayette officer. He told me of how one of the Lieuteants on the LPD and he were coming out of city hall.
the LT spotted a local bum (drunk), called him over and asked to look at something. When the bum looked over to see, the LT just beat the hell out of him then turned to my friend and ordered him to write it up and charge the bum with something.
My friend refused, because there was not way for them to force him to. But from that time on he was labeled a troublemaker.

And remember this is a college town.

Oh, the west side cops have a little technique where they get a mouthy college student on the ground, bring his arms up behind him then twist (it is an old wrestling move). They call it "imprinting" as it tears the muscles and the kid will always have pain. Hard to prove in court.

Huh? 5 for $4 and 3 for $10? Am I missing something?

Do you take cash? I trust you more than I trust PayPal.

I think he means 3 groups of 5 for $10 vs. $4 each group of 5.
Fuzzy math but it works. :-)

How about this... 3 each
3 - LM7805-C
3 - L7806-CV
3 - LM7808-CT
3 - LM7812-T
For $10

Usually impossible to prove. And cops who do that stuff will be protected from the discipline (and removal from the force) that they deserve by the "code".
That should not be, and sometimes it blows up on them, big time. Seen it happen.

: Simply speaking, the morale of us yanks ain't what it was twenty years :ago, either. But then, we had a clearer agenda back then. There was a greater
: sense of cultural homogeneity and purpose. There was an expectation that
: cops were to go out and do the job they were paid for, all the while
: possessing the peace of mind of knowing that other segments of the justice : system would let the chips fall where they may. There was an :understanding that certain crimes were crimes, and not routinely subject to
:democratic validation, or populist review.

What do you expect given the liberalism of the last 30 years? If you destroy the past and the traditions then one should expect these types of problems.

: Cops weren't surrogate parents, municipal whipping boys or social workers.
: We weren't continually being dismissed as abusive and racist and :perceives "public order," "peace officer" and "judicial system" as oxymoron's, :and police brutality as business as usual.

All societies are like a three legged stool.
It is balanced between the family, the church and the government. If things run well, they all reinforce each other. But if you destroy the family and weaken the church, as has happened over the last 30 years, then the police are forced to become both priest

: For cops to be held to a higher and not vacillating
: standard, and to be as recognized for the great amount of good that they
:do as they are vilified for the negligible amount of bad things they do.
: Similarly, for communities to expect as much of themselves as they do of
: cops, and to hold their own ethically-challenged and sociopathic numbers
:as accountable as they desire cops to be.
:
: For America (and the U.K.) to carefully consider who they want to make :their cultural icons, and to recognize that in continually pushing the envelope,
: they create an atmosphere for more and ever greater acts of depravity to
:be emulated.
: For idiots (many of whom can be counted among the foregoing icons) to be : recognized for the idiots they are.
:
: For convenient re-considerations of cops' relative merit in the wake of
:9/11 to be more permanent estimations of what we do, and how important we : are in maintaining law and order.

Many civilians do not understand that you see yourselves as the "thin blue line" of blue knights who are the final line of defense in keeping society civilized. Nor do they superior to the masses.

: For our pay to be more commensurate to our performance, with our safety a >and continue to work.

True, but the main difference is that coal miners' risks are pretty much physical force-of-nature types that can be alleviated but not completely controlled. A police officer's risks are primarily ones of social interaction, and they've got that big hunk of iron on their hips to control it. This leads to "shoot first, shoot second, shoot until the clip is empty" mentalities that result in a black man with no rap sheet dying on his own porch for handing over his wallet to (what he probably thought) were a bunch of muggers.

In the big city, a cop's first duty is to make it to the end of the shift alive. "Protect and Serve" is nothing but a big PR gag -- no citizen can legally expect either as a matter of law and precedent.

And it doesn't get any better when it is well known that people who score too high on intelligence tests will be washed out of the hiring process, quite legitimately and legally (actual court case in CT about two years ago).

Long gone, in this nation at least, are Sir Robert Peel's 9 Principles:

The basic mission for which the police exist is to prevent crime and disorder.

The ability of the police to perform their duties is dependent upon public approval of police actions.

Police must secure the willing co-operation of the public in voluntary observance of the law to be able to secure and maintain the respect of the public.

The degree of co-operation of the public that can be secured diminishes proportionately to the necessity of the use of physical force.

Police seek and preserve public favour not by catering to public opinion but by constantly demonstrating absolute impartial service to the law.

Police use physical force to the extent necessary to secure observance of the law or to restore order only when the exercise of persuasion, advice and warning is found to be insufficient.

Police, at all times, should maintain a relationship with the public that gives reality to the historic tradition that the police are the public and the public are the police; the police being only members of the public who are paid to give full-time attention to duties which are incumbent on every citizen in the interests of community welfare and existence.

Police should always direct their action strictly towards their functions and never appear to usurp the powers of the judiciary.

The test of police efficiency is the absence of crime and disorder, not the visible evidence of police action in dealing with it.

I'm in southern California, so I can't help you with specifics. Here's what I offer:

- Your Frequency Coordinator is NARC (for Northern California). They have a web site.
- Your Packet bandplan is the #CCA area's plan. California has 4 packet bandplans; one for each region (#CCA, #NCA, #SCA, and #WCA).

I'm going to send Hard Turder a present for Christmas: Poop, in a pretty box, all tied up with ribbons. Along with the poop will be a card that reads:
"Merry Christmas, Hard! I couldn't afford to buy you anything for Christmas, so I thought I'd make you something!"

How's that sound?

That was standard NYPD practice in those days. I too saw it done and was appalled, even though I grew up in NYC, because I had been exposed to four years of the California Highway Patrol's extra courteous manners in the interim.

> : 4. Hey, you must've been doin' about 125 mph to keep up with me! Good job!

Well actually....

I said something close to this. And got a verbal warning for it.

I was being chased by two officers in a really hopped up Nova in Bethlehem PA back in 1980. I took off from them at a light and I didn't realize they were cops. When they 'followed' me (I was on my bike, a 1978 CBX) and was afraid they might do a 'bump and run' to me, I wanted to keep my distance. Things got out of hand, and I ended up downshifting and taking off at redline and full go.

High beams came on and they really came after me. I made a turn onto a street under construction and got 'bogged down' in gravel. I was looking for a cop (usually all over downtown Bethlehem at night back then) but none was to be found. Suddenly I hear a siren.

Great!

Then I realized it's the Nova....

I had my license and registration in my hand as I stood next to my bike when they pulled up, the bike off with the kill switch, but the lights still on.

They came up and one said "Looks like that thing moves pretty good" (They indicated they were over 100mph and I was visibly pulling away at one point)

My reply was something on the order of their Nova being pretty hot too.

I should point out that at that time, I was in a three piece suit, my bike was stock (but with engine guards and back rest/rack), and I had a Dan Wesson in a shoulder holster.

They gave me some grief, and I ended up telling them if they ticketed me for my lane change, I'd think about it (that's what started the whole thing), but ANYTHING after that light and my eventually taking off, I'd fight it.

They gave me a verbal and let me go.

Mike

Hal again needs your support. He has enough funds to keep the show going through the first of the year.

If you like to hear Hal, and enjoy his show, his webpage, or his wonderful message board, then please send Hal a dontaion to keep it going.

You can subscribe to his archives, like I do. He also has "Savage Negro Beasts" Coffee mugs!

Send Donations Via Pay-pal or snail mail. Remember, send a donation to Hal today, so you can hear him tomorrow!

Lloyd, I would like to send Hal Turnip a genuine gift wrapped human-turd-in-a-box for his upcomming fund raiser. What are your measurments? I need to make a crate for you. Don't worry, I'll put some MRE's and a battery operated TV inside so you can watch The Jerry Springer Show while ur in transit...

See Llllardasssssssss Lllllloyd and his melon-shaped head, porky-pig like N0VFP, Llllardasssss lllllloyd has said to a cop, "Can I slurp your nutsacks to let me off these felonies?" See, Lllardasssss lllloyd has quite a criminal record, for buggering boys , cows, and pumpkins in and around Athens, AL.

This was just faxed from the Birminham Field office:

The Great Pumpkin
Birmingham Post-Herald
October 14, 2000

Police arrested Lloyd A. Davies, a 27 year old white male, resident of Athens, Alabama in the Anderson Pumpkin patch at 11:38pm Friday. Davies will be charged with lewd and lascivious behavior, public indecency, and public intoxication at the Athens Municipal Courthouse Monday. The suspect allegedly stated that as he was passing a pumpkin patch, he decided to stop. "You know, a pumpkin is soft and squishy inside, and there was no one around here for miles. At least I thought there wasn't." he stated in a phone interview from the Athens Municipal Courthouse Jail.
Davies went on to state that he pulled over to the side of the road, picked out a pumpkin that he felt was appropriate to his purposes, cut a hole in it, and proceeded to satisfy his alleged "need". "I guess I was just really into it, you know?" he commented with evident embarrassment. In the process, Torrance apparently failed to notice the Athens Municipal police car approaching and was unaware of his audience until officer Brenda Taylor approached him. "It was an unusual situation, sure." said officer Taylor. "I walked up to (Davies) and he's... just working away at this pumpkin."
Taylor went on to describe what happened when she approached Davies. "I just went up and said, 'Excuse me sir, but do you realize that you are screwing a pumpkin?' He got real surprised as you'd expect, and then looked me straight in the face and said,
'A pumpkin? Damn... is it midnight already?"

Damn, I was beaten to the punch. I wanted to be the first to come up with a photo of Woger. Oh well. I'll have one of his mommie's house in a few days. By all reports it's a beat up shack.

Deliver charges are a bitch on a 2 tonne tub of shit, why not chop him into smaller pieces and send them seperately? Smaller packages can be sent by

Really? he's admitted himself he couldn't pass the A+ certification, so i doubt he has anything else, its one of the easier certs to aquire... he does deliver pizza on his peddle bike.. Bet he has the paper route for his trailer park... 2 subscriptions, the two people that can read, read the paper to the rest of the residents, and sometimes act out the events... lllllardass lloyd helped in the production of the twin tower crash reenactment... they used him to play a building, because he was both the same weight, and it gave them good reason to throw something really hard at his face ... llllardass fell into a neighbors trailer causing 50$ in damages (appraised value of home on wheels) rofl.

The photo is about 20 years old. Roger tried to pass himself off as looking younger. Truth is Roger is fat now, very fat, with gray hair and looks beyond his years from smoking dope.
Marshall county property tax records are on line and show the house Roger lives in is owned by his mother and only his mother, despite Roger's lies otherwise. Property evaluation is $35,000, so it must be a typical WV hovel.

Roger Wiseman, the troll-on-demand. Boss Hog at the auto

Had a former platoon sergeant who had been a Los Vegas motorcycle cop in the late 1970s. (He got out of the Army, became a cop then went back in). In those days, the jails were mostly for the tourists and the locals received "street justice".

He had arrested a street prostitute for not have her
"Green Card", the monthly card from the health department (which you can only get if you were working in a house, which she was not). Her pimp got pissed, and decided to get even. So one day my sergeant was getting back on his cycle after lunch and just putting on his helmet. The pimp shoots him with a sawed off shotgun. Thanks to the leather coat and helmet (and the fact that the pimp was standing so far away that the shot from sawed off gun just lost its force) he was unhurt. He turned, drew his .44 Mag (big thing back in the days of revolvers, especially out west) and knee caps the jerk. Then called for an ambulance. End of Story.

Such was it back in simpler times.

AMATEUR RADIO NEWSLINE(tm) REPORT #1272 - DECEMBER 28 2001

A NOTE TO THOSE WHO ONLY “READ” AMATEUR RADIO NEWSLINE(tm)

For those of you who only know of the Amateur Radio Newsline (tm) as a text newsletter we would like to invite you to listen to the audio version. This Amateur Radio Newsline (tm) script is actually written for the “spoken word.” It is recorded each by professional broadcasters and is available for private listening or rebroadcast over your repeater. Three methods of delivery are available: Streaming audio using RealAudio, FTP RealAudio or dial-in telephone. Please visit our website at http://www.arnewsline.org for a list of telephone numbers (you have to pay your own long distance charges) and links to audio servers providing our voice newscast (for free).

==========

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1272 with a release date of Friday, December 28th, 2001 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T.

A not so welcome FCC Christmas present for several hams and an ARRL survey says that most hams no longer want the novice bands. These stories are first on this New Years week edition of the Amateur Radio Newsline coming your way right now.

ENFORCEMENT: FCC DESIGNATES KEVIN MITNICK, N6NHG, LICENSE RENEWAL APPLICATION TO PUBLIC HEARING

A convicted computer hacker now has to face an FCC if he wants to keep his ham radio license. This, as the regulatory agency designates the Amateur Radio license renewal application of Kevin David Mitnick, N6NHG, for hearing. We have this report:

According to the FCC, Kevin David Mitnick is best known to the world as a hacker who admitted that he broke into a number of computer systems and stole proprietary software belonging to Motorola, Novell, Fujitsu, Sun Microsystems and other companies. He has also admitted using a number of means to commit his crimes including social engineering, cloned cellular phones ad sniffer programs placed on a victims computer system. Mitnick even acknowledged altering the programming of computer systems belonging to the University of Southern California and using these computers to store programs that he had misappropriated.

Mitnick was sentenced to forty six months in federal prison for his August 9th 1999 conviction. He had previously been sentenced to twenty-two months in prison for possessing cloned cellular phones after his arrest in North Carolina in 1995 and for violating his supervised release that had been imposed after his conviction for unrelated computer fraud in 1989. He is currently on probation following his release from prison in January of 2001. And in December of 1999, Kevin David Mitnick, N6NHG, applied for renewal of his Amateur Radio Station and his General Class Operators License.

His license expired on December 12th 1999. The FCC put the renewal application on hold pending further inquiry. Now the agency has made public that it intends to challenge Mitnick’s right to hold a ham radio license and has issued a Hearing Designation Order. In plain English, that means Kevin David Mitnick has to prove to the government why it should renew his ham ticket or have his license cancelled.

The FCC is challenging Mitnick’s license renewal request on the ground that his past criminal behavior raises a substantial and material question as to whether Mitnick possesses what the it terms as the requisite character qualifications to remain a Commission licensee. The FCC says that in the context of broadcasting licenses, it has long held that evidence of any conviction for misconduct constituting a felony will be considered as relevant to its evaluation of an applicant’s character. It also says that the broadcast character qualifications standards have been used as guidelines in the evaluation of non broadcast licenses including those in the Amateur Service and that the courts have upheld the Commission’s right to do this.

The agency cites two recent cases. That of Herbert L. Schoenbohm, the ex-KV4FZ and Leslie Brewer who used to be KC4HAZ. Brewer, also known as the Tampa Party Pirate lost his ticket because of his unlicensed broadcasting in the commercial F-M band . Schoenbohm lost his based on a fraud conviction of using an unauthorized telephone access device. And the FCC says that any conviction for fraudulent conduct calls in question a licensee’s ability to act in a manner consistent with FCC regulations.

And so the FCC has ordered that a hearing be held before an Administrative Law Judge to determine the effect of the criminal convictions of Kevin David Mitnick on his qualifications to be a Commission licensee. It also says that pursuant to provisions of the Communications Act, the burden will be on Kevin David Mitnick, N6NHG, to provide proof that his license renewal application should be granted. Mitnick was given 20 days of the mailing of the Hearing Designation Order to file a response.

The hearing designation order on Mitnick’s license was adopted by the Commission on December 11th but not released until Friday, December 21st. Ironically, less than twenty-four hours earlier, Mitnick had made a guest appearance on Art Bell’s Coast to Coast A-M where he discussed his future plans. At that time he was apparently unaware that the FCC had some plans of its own in regard to whether or not N6NHG will remain a radio amateur and Commission licensee.

The complete text of the Mitnick FCC Hearing Designation Order is on the web at: http://www.fcc.gov/Daily_Releases/Daily_Business/2001/db1221/fcc01359.txt (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: GERRITSON LICENSE PLACED ON HOLD PENDING POSSIBLE HEARING

Kevin Mitnick, N6NHG, is not the only person hearing from the FCC in recent days. So have a number of others including another Southern California resident who could face the same kind of a hearing. Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, is the FCC’s Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement:

Hollingsworth: “We notified a Bell California licensee; Jack Gerritson, ex-KG6IRO, that the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau, had set aside his Technician grant so that a recent conviction for radio interference could be evaluated. Now, he has no authority to operate Amateur Radio equipment until the matter is resolved.”
--

The action to place Gerritson's license up for hearing was taken November 14, 2001 and is based in part upon complaints about the operation of his station and questions regarding Gerritson's qualifications to be a Commission licensee. The FCC says that both issues were raised as the result of Gerritson's 1999 arrest and year 2000 conviction for interference to police radio communications. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC REOPENS KY-W.VA REPEATER CASE

The FCC is also continuing its crackdown in the area of repeater interference issues. In fact it is taking a second look at a coordinated versus uncoordinated issue in the Tennessee and West Virginia border area. Again, Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH:

Hollingsworth: “We notified parties in a repeater dispute in West Virginia that we would be reopening that case after information that one of the repeaters is coordinated after all. We had declined to intervene earlier this year in that case.”
--

The letter stating that the FCC is reopening that case went to Michael Horn, KB8GDF, of Lenore West Virginia, Kenneth Brown KF8HL of Davin West Virginia and Carl Tussey, KB4UCE of South Williamson Kentucky. Back on January 24, 2001, had notified the three that it had received a complaint that they were operating an uncoordinated repeater on 145.390 MHz in Mingo County, West Virginia, and that this repeater was causing interference to the coordinated KC8FKP repeater operated by the Portsmouth Radio Club that uses the same frequency. The matter was closed when the FCC interpreted a notation in the South-Eastern Repeater Associations Repeater Journal that the status of the KC8FKP repeater was not known and interpreted this as meaning that the repeater was also was not coordinated.

But now the FCC says that it has recently come to it's attention that although in the SERA Repeater Journal says that the KC8FKP repeater may be listed as unknown, it is still a coordinated system. Therefore, the FCC is re-opening its review of the issues in this matter. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: IS A GOVERNMENT AGENCY RUNNING A HAM REPEATER?

Is a government agency operating ham radio repeaters in violation of Part 97 rules? Specifically, the FCC wants to know who is really running the KD6LSO and W6SON repeaters in Sonoma County California.

The FCC says that it has received allegations that the county is in charge not the hams whose call signs appear on the machines. Since a county governmental entity cannot be an Amateur licensee, the FCC is collecting information in order to determine if there are breach of its rules. (FCC)

RESTRUCTURING: ARRL STUDY SAYS NOVICE BANDS MAY NOT BE NEEDED

An ARRL study group has recommended doing away with the current novice bands and divvying them up among the remaining licenses classes. Amateur Radio Newsline's Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the details:

An ARRL Novice Spectrum Study Committee has recommended that the League petition the FCC to eliminate the CW novice subbands. It also wants a rules change that will allow Novice and Technician licensees with element 1 credit to be permitted to operate Morse code on the General 80, 40, 15 and 10 meter C-W allocations at up to 200 watts power out.

These are just two of the suggestions contained in a report that will be presented to the Leagues Board of Directors when that group convenes in mid January. The study committee will also suggest recognizing portions of the 80, 40, 15 and 10 meter Morse bands for what it calls ''slow CW operation.'' The committee says that this would aid new operators in enhancing their Morse code skills.

Finally, the panel also recommends re-farming -- that’s another way of saying reapportioning -- reapportioning the current Novice and Tech Plus subbands in part. This, to allow expansion of the phone allocations on 80, 40 and 15 meters.

What will the ARRL Board of Directors do? We should know in less then a month.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Norm Seeley, KI7UP

The committee's determinations were based on opinions expressed by 4744 hams who respond to an ARRL Novice Spectrum Study survey launched last June. Those expressing their opinions included ARRL members and also non-members. What’s really interesting is that nearly 61% of those responding were Extra class licensees. (ARRL bulletin)

FCC INSPECTOR GENERAL'S REPORT: THE NAMES THE SAME

The latest report of the FCC's Office of the Inspector General contained very few items of intrigue. But according to the C-G-C Communicator, one of the more colorful incidents involved a person who allegedly used the name of an FCC employee to obtain the government-rate for a hotel room in conjunction with a government-sponsored event.

Well, it turns out that the subject was legitimately attending the event, was entitled to the government room rate and just happened to have the same name as the FCC employee. The bottom line: Case dismissed.

The complete report is on the FCC website at http://www.fcc.gov/oig/Semiannual093001-1101.pdf (CGC Communicator)

AMERICA AT WAR: NYC PHONE SERVICE STILL SPOTTY

It's been almost four months since the attack on the World Trade Center, and telephone service near ground zero in lower Manhattan is anything but normal.

According to news reports, repair people have restored service to most customers, but thousands of lines still aren't working. As a result, customers complain that some business lines can call out, but customers can't call in.

The collapse of Seven World Trade Center crushed thousands of underground cables at Verizon's nearby switching station. About 200-thousand telephone lines and three-point-five million data circuits were affected. The company says it'll spend as much as one-point-nine billion dollars to repair the damage. (Telecommunications Online)

INTERNET SECURITY: PROBLEMS WITH XP

If you just bought a new computer equipped with the Microsoft X-P operating system, or have upgraded your old one, listen up. The Federal Bureau of Investigation says that you should take certain steps to protect yourself against hackers who might try to take advantage of major flaws that have been found in X-P.

The bureau's National Infrastructure Protection Center says that in addition to installing a free software fix offered by Microsoft on the company's Web site, consumers and corporations using Windows XP should disable the product's universal plug and play features as well. The FBI also warned computer system administrators to actively monitor for specific types of Internet traffic that might indicate an attack was under way.

The FBI did not provide detailed instructions how to disable plug and play. Outside experts also caution that disabling the affected Windows XP features threatens to render unusable an entire category of high-tech devices about to go on the market. This includes a new class of computer printers that are easier to set up. But the same experts also acknowledge that disabling plug and play in X-P could afford some protection against similar flaws discovered in the future.

Microsoft considers disabling plug and play options as being unnecessary but the company does acknowledge that Windows X-P suffers from serious problems that can let hackers steal or destroy data files across the Internet or implant their own unwanted software. The FBI says that the glitches were unusually serious because they allow hackers to seize control of all Windows X-P operating system software without requiring a computer user to do anything except connect to the Internet. THE LAW: A FIGHT AGAINST GRAY MARKET ELECTRONICS

A group of American high-tech companies is opening the year 2002 with a campaign to protect consumers from unwittingly buying consumer electronic products intended for foreign markets. Electronics that the manufacturers claim may not work in the United States.

Compaq Computer is one of the companies involved in the campaign. It says that the group will warn consumers about the dangers of buying such products, and how to avoid getting duped. The other companies in the group are Hewlett-Packard, 3 Com, Nortel Networks, and Xerox. The effort may prompt more lawsuits against distributors who resell so called gray market items in the United States. (Computer Products Daily)

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: BADGER STATE SMOKE SIGNALS EDITOR JIM ROMALFANGER, K9ZZ - SK

I’m Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF.

The ham who put the state of Wisconsin on the ham radio map has passed away. This, with word that Jim Romelfanger, K9ZZ died Saturday evening December 22nd of an apparent heart attack..

According to Romalfanger's close friend Ken Ebneter, K9EN, Jim has been in declining health for some time. Romalfanger had a stroke a few weeks ago, affecting his right arm which was already weakened by polio. But Ebneter says that K9ZZ seemed to be improving until just recently. Ebneter says that Romalfanger had been in the hospital early last week but was home when he passed away of an apparent heart attack. In fact, K9ZZ had stopped by to visit a ham radio friend that afternoon. Another friend found him dead that evening when he stopped by to visit.

His full name was Arthur James Louis Romelfanger but to the world of ham radio he was Jim, K9ZZ. And Jim Romalfanger made Wisconsin a ham radio household word by editing as three decade state-wide ham radio monthly newspaper called Badger State Smoke Signals -- and doing so as a volunteer.

Notice we said newspaper and not newsletter. This is because Smoke Signals is just that. A newspaper that at its peak ran up to 40 pages filled with articles about ham radio in the Badger State. In addition to being the 32 year editor of Smoke Signals, Romalfanger was nationally published over the years in CQ, QST, 73, Ham Radio, Popular Electronics, and other magazines.

Jim Romalfanger was first licensed January 1958 in Pacific Beach, California, as KN6LWB. Upgraded to General in May of 1958. He returned to Wisconsin that summer and became K9PKQ. In 1977, changed call to K9ZZ and held that call sign the rest of his life. Funeral services were scheduled for Friday, December 27th at St. Joseph Catholic Church in Baraboo Wisconsin.

Jim, from all of your friends at the Amateur Radio Newsline: We are going to miss you. (The Baraboo News Republic, K9EN, WB9QZB, and other friends of K9ZZ contributed to this report.)

INTERNATIONAL-AUSTRALIA: CSIRO MICROTURBINES

Australian hospitals, restaurants and schools could soon source clean, reliable energy from mini power generators that operate independent of the main grid. This as CSIRO has installed Australia's first commercial microturbine, at their North Ryde Laboratory, Sydney.

The size of a small refrigerator, the turbine produces 30 kilowatts of power, independent of the electricity grid. And it does this with reduced greenhouse and other gas emissions. Thirty kilowatts is enough to power a medium commercial building such as a restaurant.

Along with fuel cells, gas engines, storage technologies and some renewable technologies, microturbines can be used to generate power close to the end-user and provide major gains in reliability and power quality. Once the design can trickle down to the home user level and price range, it could offer hams a way of always having emergency power always at hand. (Q-News)

SHORTWAVE MONITORING : RADIO NORWAY CLOSES

The Board of Directors of the Norwegian Broadcasting Corporation has decided to stop its own programs by Radio Norway International. This is effective as of December 31st of 2001.

According to DF5SX and G3VGW, Radio Norway’s final show was hosted by veteran broadcaster Einar Lie on New Years Eve. Also, the 1200 kilowatt Medium Wave transmitter on 1314 kHz on Kvitsoy was supposed to cease operation by December the 31st as well.

The Norwegian Broadcasting Corporation will have to negotiate with transmitter providers Norkring and Radio Denmark to close down as well. The Norwegian Broadcasting Corporation and Norkring have a contract for running the transmissions that goes through December 31st, 2003. The agency also has a leasing agreement with Radio Denmark for the same period. (Media Network)

THAT FINAL ITEM: RILEY SAYS THANKS

And finally as the year 2001 comes to an end, the FCC’s Chief Rules enforcer, Riley Hollingsworth has some words of praise for the ham radio community. He passed them along through his bi-weekly Enforcement Log at www.rainreport.com, and thanks to them, we have is words for you:

Hollingsworth: “I would like to point out Hap, that this is the end of the third year of Amateur Radio enforcement and I will honestly say that the overall level of compliance in the Amateur Radio Service is outstanding. The Amateur licensees do a great job and they do a great job of showing that the Amateur Radio Service is -- indeed -- the only fail-safe communications system in the world and we are very proud of them.”

And if I can take off my reporters hat for a moment and editorialize a bit, I guess I speak for many who truly appreciate what you have done to return the Amateur Radio bands to the law abiding members of the nations ham radio community. (ARNewsline(tm), RAIN)

What we need is for the CW/digital portion of the

The safety and serenity of Alaska provided an atmosphere conducive to deprogramming, despite the pandemonium that ensued. Mark Phillips was the first man who not only did not abuse us, but cared for our welfare and well being. His patient, gentle manner was therapeutic, while his propensity for handling weapons and apparent intellect kept us safe against all odds. Through his noble actions, Mark taught Kelly and me that the world of human interaction in which we had existed for so long was contrary to most human behavior. We learned that goodness does exist on this Earth, and that there were those in Washington, D.C. who refused to tolerate the mind-control atrocities they witnessed us and others enduring.

As my eyes opened and I woke up to reality, I became enraged. Enraged for the traumas inflicted on my daughter. Enraged for a lifetime of abuse at the hands of our country's so called "leaders". Enraged that the American public had no idea as to who and what was/is running their country. Mark helped me refocus my rage in a productive direction when he told me, "The best revenge is total recovery."

I began recovering at the rate of 18 hours a day through intensive therapy destined to restore my memory and, ultimately, my mind. I learned the ins and outs of my own mind and recovered my memories in a journal. The stack of journals grew as over a decade of White House/ Pentagon-level abuse flooded my mind and intruded on my thoughts. Pictures from my past flashed across my mind as neuron pathways opened in my brain. I was regaining access to my own mind and control over my future by recovering my memory of my past.

Best of all, I was falling deeply in love with Mark Phillips. Why wouldn't I fall in love? He rescued my daughter and me from certain demise, restored my free will, and was helping me recover in total safety, and was the polar opposite of my abusers. He treated me with love, respect, and thoughtful consideration . Equally as important, Mark proved to be an ideal father figure to Kelly. He provided here with unconditional love and deep understanding. Through him, Kelly caught a glimpse of how kind men could be--and how good life could be. I had long since ceased to know that such a man even existed.

The love factor in my recovery is considerable. Not only did Mark Phillips save my life, but now I had a reason to live it! The love we share kept me going at times--like when Kelly was institutionalized in 1989 for homicidal/suicidal behavior. The loving relationship that Mark shared with Kelly during our short year together as a family was sufficient to arm here with the strength to survive her ensuing ordeal as a victim of the so-called mental health and criminal justice system.

Kelly, now 15, remains a political prisoner in the custody of the State of Tennessee where she is denied qualified therapy for the MK-Ultra Project Monarch Mind-Control abuses she endured. The state of Tennessee, under the politically powerful influence of Kelly's abusers, is in violation of numerous laws and basic civil rights in their determined efforts to keep Kelly from qualified therapy and the family she loves.

While many of those in positions to make a difference in Kelly's case operate on a "Need to Know" basis rather than deliberately conspire with the bad guys, a closer look into Kelly's case history should raise serious questions in their minds. Questions like; "What could a child have to do with the so called "National Security" of our country?" The Juvenile court judge presiding over Kelly's case closed the doors to the media and onlookers for "reasons of National Security" while gross and blatant violations of laws and rights ensued.

For over three long years, Kelly and I have been denied our right to an unbiased attorney while court-appointed advocates and so-called "guardians" join forces with attorneys paid off by me pedophile father. My own court-appointed attorney, who doubles for the Juvenile Court judge when he takes a day off, has yet to represent my interest. My interest is in Kelly's well being and future-- and if she will have a future at all.

While Kelly is still amnesic with regard to most of her past, she is deliberately denied therapeutical access to her past, due to who and what she will recall. I am denied access to Kelly for fear she would be triggered into remembering by my mere presence. As for my deliberately "triggering" Kelly to remember what she was supposed to forget, as her abusers fear, it has been my experience that recovery must come from the inside out. Not from outside input. I want no less for Kelly that the piece/peace of mind I have gained through qualified rehabilitation. Which raises the questions: Why has the Juvenile court prohibited us from saying the name "George Bush?" Why is the "Wizard of Oz" a taboo subject for Kelly while the State of Tennessee provides her with Stephen King horror novels? Why are Kelly and I forbidden by the court to say the words "President," "politics," New World Order", and "mind-control"?.

In an attempt by state employees to "normalize" our relationship, Kelly and I are forbidden to discuss the past, my immediate efforts to affect her dire and desperate situation, or future plans as a family.

Most appalling and unjust in Kelly's view is the State of Tennessee's refusal to allow her any contact whatsoever with Mark Phillips. While I am hindered from having private conversations with my daughter due to court ordered supervisions and censorship, Kelly is denied the right to even wave to Mark across the parking lot. Considering that, like me,

Mark has never been named as an abuser, declared unfit, or violated any court orders, the questions must be asked: "Why does the State of Tennessee go to such lengths to ban all communication between Kelly and the man who rescued her and taught her the meaning of unconditional love?"

Kelly has asked these questions for years to no avail. The State of Tennessee refuses to even acknowledge her request for"an unbiased attorney who will represent her interests instead of those of the state". Kelly's pleas for an attorney to represent her go no farther than the deaf ears of the assigned state social worker "managing" her case. This social worker is operating on a "Need to Know" basis that has no basis, and she "Needs to Know" that she, along with the State of Tennessee, will be held accountable in the event that Kelly hurts someone or herself.

Kelly's frustrations have mounted beyond her ability to cope. I applaud Kelly for her determined but weakened efforts to stay in control of her own mind despite being denied qualified rehabilitation for the devastating results of Project Monarch Mind-Control abuses. Kelly's daily attempts to accomplish the impossible by psychoLOGICALLY managing her psychiatric disorder is proportionate to her high intellect and willful determination. But it is not enough to fend off the Psychological Warfare that has been waged against her through CIA Damage Containment practices designed to keep her contained in amnesic silence. She needs help. She needs a collective voice.

Kelly can be helped through public outcry and through abolishment of the 1947 National Security Act (and 1984 Reagan Amendment to same) that has destroyed the true security of our once great nation. You can write the State of Tennessee demanding to know why Kelly is being denied her right to qualified rehabilitation.

Thank you. - Cathy O'Brien

Thanks for your picture. you look very pretty and professional. I have had a long day of work today. I have to work tomorrow and then get packed up to head to iowa. I'll be there for about a week over Thanksgiving. Means I'll be here by myself for Christmas. I'm tired tonite. I've had alot on my mind. More than usaual.

Take care and have a good weekend,

Did you have a good weekend? Had to work all weekend. I'm getting ready to visit my Mom next week in Iowa. I'll be gone all next week for Thanksgiving.
You got Thanksgiving plans? You'll probably goto warm Florida! Iowa gets very cold this time of year.

I'm gonna get my picture taken this week to send to you. I have a digital camera. I'll send it as soon as I get it taken.

Are you still in School? I did'nt know If you were or not.

Love,

Nothing radical about that. Anyone who cracks a cap at a cop is paid for, then or now. Pimp was VERY lucky he didn't get the slug in the gut.

6774. Alliance HD73 - Need info ASAP!

Hopefully somebdy can help me with this one quick before I fall off my tower into a snow bank!

There was some remodeling done in my room where my rotot box was once hooked to my Alliance HD73. Problem is, the wires were removed from the control box without being marked.

So, here is the good part, I broke down, in 20 degree weather, with snow flying, wind blowing, I climbed to the 30 foot height and opened up the rotor wire cover to see what wires went where.

Here is the part I couldn't totally confirm for sure, I could only see a number "2" mark on one terminal connection.

So, here is the terminal connections as if the rotor was oriented as it were mounted in a tower and you where standing on the ground looking at it:

A 2 C
X X X

X X X
D E F

The "X"'s represent the terminal hookups. The letters represent the terminal (number) hookups in question. The "2" was the only terminal I could confirm.

So, the question is, which terminal is which number?

My rotor is the latest model, the HD-73-1, I believe its called. I found the manual online (ftp://bama.sbc.edu/downloads/alliance/hd-73/) - but it was for the HD-73. I went to the troubleshooting section and found where it tells you was resistance to look for between the wires to help straighten out which wire is which. All the resistance values checked out except the last note on the troubleshooting section where it says "Also, leads 1,3, and 6 should not show continuity to leads 2,4, or 5"

I see a some resistance between all combinations of these leads they state should show "no continuity" (open?)

Help, please!

Scott.

Typical forgery by the AKC trouble maker club king. First I write what I think is a truthful post about my gay past hoping that my little buddy will get the hint and move on from that topic. Now he's forging me from an account that the addy looks almost the same as mine. BE ON THE ALERT. I have switched to this hotmail account in order to confuse the little troll.
Now all he can do is imitate me. We'll see who is the real Landshark.
Here's a test: do a lookup on "Landshark"
in the usenet archives. You will find all kinds of flames, innacuracies and crap posted by me,
the real Landshark.

End drug prohibition.

If the US of A alcohol prohibition is any guide it will take 20 to 30 years after ending to restore public confidence.

Do you favor drug prohibition because it finances criminals at home or do you favor it because it

This is funny coming from a clueless nutsack who had to take the ham

Alcohol prohibition caused these problems in the 1920s and 30s.

Drug prohibition is causing these problems today.

Police are too stupid to learn from history.

The liberals are just taking advantage of police stupidity. When the police wise up trends will begin to reverse. As long as the police ask for more prohibition as the cure for prohibition they deserve what they get.

Here is a bit I wrote to improve police morale.

Enjoy!!!!!!!
==========

What did you do in the war, Daddy?

I chased criminal plants. I tore up fields of hemp. A plant that looks like marijuana but has no psychoactive effect. I filled the jails with drug users, letting untold numbers of violent criminals get a free pass to make sure there was room for dealers and users of the wrong kinds of drugs. I let terrorists go free in order to concentrate on jailing people out for a little drug induced fun. Of course I ignored those using the most harmful drugs commonly available in society, alcohol and tobacco.

I stared a war to repress the people of Bolivia and Columbia. I did it because some of our citizens prefer snorting Bolivian cocaine to drinking Columbian coffee. I did this based on the same religious intolerance that led to alcohol prohibition. I did this based on Puritan totalitarianism rather than American pluralism. I knew from history that in every single instance of American prohibition that the side effects of the cure were worse than the disease. Yet I persisted.

I contributed to the loss of Bill of Rights for all Americans by taking away those rights from the demonized drug users. I got the rules of evidence changed at the Federal level so that no evidence of a crime is necessary. Just some snitches word. I worked hard to see that such snitches were well rewarded either with money, drugs, or shortened jail sentences. I also worked hard to make sure that profits on the prohibited substances were high enough so that criminals could easily afford to corrupt our police, border guards, and politicians.

I turned some neighborhoods into shooting gallerys where armed bands fought over marketing rights in various territories. If there were not enough murders in these neighborhoods I shortened the supplies of the various commodities to up the economic pressure until violence broke out. If that didn't work I weakened the dominant militia until a rival could dispute its marketing territory, there by increasing the clamor of the local citizens for protection from the armed thugs. It worked. Our budgets kept growing. I worked as hard as possible to see that the American police spent 50% or more of their time chasing Americans pursuing the wrong kind of happiness.

I worked hard to get children to inform on their parents. We got quite a few to turn in their parents for indulging in a substance safer than aspirin. Of course we jailed the parents and made the children jail orphans. Then we decried the breakdown of the family. Such fun.

I stole medicine from sick people. I jailed them when I could and I prevented any new research on their medicine of choice because I knew that their medicine worked. At every point I arrested and stalled because my job was more important that relieving peoples suffering.

And while making war on 5 to 10% of all Americans I ignored any warnings of terrorist threats and concentrated on the civil war against users of the wrong kinds of drugs. It seemed like the right thing to do at the time.

After years of doing my best to enrich the criminal class and destroy America I finally came to my senses. September 11th woke me up. Real unavoidable terror had come to America. What postal worker wouldn't be happy to have avoidable cocaine fall out of an envelope rather than unavoidable anthrax? I decided that all the police effort going into preventing people from pursuing happiness could be better spent chasing real criminals and terrorists. I asked my boss if I couldn't transfer to airport security, the FBI, border patrol, or any other job where I could really fight the terrorist enemy instead of supporting them directly or indirectly. And my boss understood. He was already thinking along the same lines himself.

I'm happy to tell you I got my transfer and I got my self respect back.

This weeks saying:

What is the difference between drug prohibition and alcohol prohibition? Seventy four years so far.

Ask a politician:

Do you support drug prohibition because it finances criminals at home or because it finances terrorists abroad?

Do you support drug prohibition because it finances criminals at home or because it finances terrorists abroad?

How does supporting prohibition maintain civilization?

No wonder police intelligence is an oxymoron.

Prohibition has never worked, is not working, and will never work. I always thought facing reality was part of civilization. You guys ought to ask the Wizard for brains. There is no lack of courage. But that is not enough.

I wrote a bit about it. See below.

==========

For a very long time I have wondered what the Libertarian Party would do or say in the face of the Fascist menace that caused World War
Two. I think I have my answer.

The party would have counselled that it was America's fault for meddling and would have asked Germany and Japan what we could do to eliminate the grievances of these two countries. Does Japan need more oil for its conquest of China - done - because America has no interest in the welfare of China and if Japan wishes to rule China that is between China and Japan. As long as Japan has the money we must sell it the oil. The same goes for the dispute between England and Germany.
Does Germany want America to stop selling and giving arms to England - done - after all American people are being taxed to support England.
If England can't support herself America has no interest in foreign entanglements.

Lets look at the world today. A new/old fascist ideology has arisen based on religion. The fascists have just grievances and Americans have been taxed to support the only democracy in the lands of the fascists. Unfortunately this democracy is run mainly by Jews. And we know this current fascist ideology like the one that preceded it hates Jews. Especially the Jews in its midst. After all hadn't all the countries of this fascist league each in its own way expelled all the Jews from its various regions? Why should American tax dollars support these Jewish interlopers who had lived in small numbers in the region for over two thousand years and in large numbers since the end of World War Two? Why not sell them out and let their neighbors take care of them. Wouldn't it be cheaper?

There is no doubt American foreign policy is less than perfect. Our drug prohibition inspired adventure into the Columbian civil war is an unmitigated disaster and is bringing untold suffering to the people of Columbia. We are desperately in need of a better policy in the region. For starters if we ended prohibition we could deal rationally with Columbia's problems. But I am reminded that despite the suffering we inflicted on Vietnam, twenty five years after the war a great many of the people of Vietnam wish we had won the war. There would have been no mass slaughters in the aftermath, no reeducation camps, no boat people and a democratic capitalist economy would have brought a measure of wealth only now beginning to be realized as Vietnam slowly changes its economic system. Even when badly done American influence is still better than the alternative.

At this point I think a movie review is in order. And the movie I want to review is the Wizard of Oz. The essence of the movie is the search of each main character for something missing in their life. And this search is done in the face of unlimited evil. And what are the missing parts? The Scarecrow needs a brain, the Tin man needs a heart, and the Lion needs courage. I think the message here is that no person is fully formed without a head, a heart, and courage.

What do we know about the Libertarians? They certainly have a head. Their analysis is exquisite and to the point. Detailed and nuanced based on the most logical of rules and as internally consistent as a political philosophy can be. But logic makes up less than ten percent of human experience. I say this well aware that as an industrial controls designer I make my living from logic. So the Libertarians have logic in spades. But it is a cold heartless logic. A pocket book oriented logic. And if you look over the mass of the party and especially its local expression they do not have the courage of their convictions. The party's support for Dr. Dunkel and the Libertarian tax protesters and E.J.'s run in with the law over marijuana sales have been less than courageous. In fact they have been for the most part cowardly. This is especially galling to me in E.J.'s case since he gave his heart to advancing the cause of the party.

Thus I find that although I am in the main in philosophical agreement with many of the party's positions I can no longer affiliate myself with such a group. There are still individuals that I can support and I will. There are still party positions I can support and I will. But from here on the party no longer gets my blanket endorsement. As of now consider me an independent political activist.

Let me close with a quote from John Stewart Mill:

"War is an ugly thing but not the ugliest of things; the decayed and degraded state of moral and patriotic feelings which thinks that nothing is worth war is much worse. A man who has nothing for which he is willing to fight, nothing which is more important than his own personal safety, is a miserable creature and has no chance of being free unless made and kept so by the exertions of better men than himself."

Don't forget to ask a politician:

Do you favor drug prohibition because it finances criminals or do you favor it because it finances terrorists?

This week's politician is:

Senator Dave Syverson - District 34
200 S. Wyman Suite 302
Rockford, IL 61101

M. Simon is an industrial controls designer and independent political activist.

Do you favor drug prohibition because it finances criminals at home or do you favor it because it finances terrorists abroad?

: End drug prohibition.
: If the US of A alcohol prohibition is any guide it will take 20 to 30
: years after ending to restore public confidence.

Then we will have millions of folks killing each other for other reasons. It is not drugs, hell drugs were prohibited back to the 1940s. It is the weak family structure (welfare has much to do with that) and the fact that the religious community has been falling apart for the last 30 years. Drugs are more of a manifestation of generation after generation of children being produced by dysfunctional families. The kids use drugs to self medicate for emotional illness and emotional pain. They are fatherless and without hope.

All societies are equally supported by family, church and government. Given that family and church have been weak for so long, the police have become both father and priest. These are jobs that they do poorly.

Once society gets its act together then we will see the police return to normal duties. As we have seen since Sept. 11th, people are now returning to families, slowing down their lives. That is a start.

We will deal with drugs but not in the way you hope.
Oh, pot will most likely be legalized. And marketed by the big tobacco companies. Joe Camel will be pushing pot to 6 year olds on TV. But the harder drugs will be distributed by the government, maybe thru medical clinics where they will be used on site. Thus drug users will be treated as people with mental illness.

While no prohibition works, our drug problem is more due to disfunctional families. Too many who are abusing both drugs and alcohol do so because they are self medicating for emotional illness (emotional pain from early childhood).

Even if we end drug prohibition (and it will not be done in a manner that libertarians will like), it still is within society's responsibilities to clean up the disfunctional family problem (society, not government) and to deal with the millions emotionally ill individuals who use drugs and alcohol as a medication.

These are two different problems, both which have to be addressed.

I don't see any connection to Radio Shack.

From the RS website....
In 1970, he (Charles Tandy) bought Chicagoï¿½s Allied Radio Corporation, a major RadioShack competitor, but he sold most of the Allied stores in 1974 in the face of possible anti-trust action.

GOTCHA Woger, SPANK. The Air Force discharge is a DD-4762-Q and it is not on a DD-214, only the character of the discharge is on the DD-214, thus proving you never received a honorable discharge!

The very funny thing is that I can't find where Woger paid any federal income tax. Funny thing though, his mommie Marie claims a dependent. I suspect it is 50 something Woger. This is the loser that laughed the hardest about Henne having to move back in with his mommie.

Really, then how cAn I explain those papers that are right in front of me now?
BWHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!
The AIR FORCE DISCHARGE was issued on a DD-256-AF when I served, DUMBFUCK. The DD-214 is the Report of Seperation of Active Duty, the section e. has character of service in which "Honorable" is typed there.which proves you never fucking served at all.
Why does W4NTI discuss his DD-214 if it doesn't exist. You are one dumb fucking, taliban supporting, UNAMERICAN .

Don't retune it. Why not just use it on 10M? That's where most CBers are using the lower channels where there is only morse code on.

usual, around 8 a.m. tomorrow and begin his daily spew of filth and hate across all his enemies on Usenet is himself. Yes, Wogey Wiseman hates himself. His postings cofirm just how much this angry little pointed

I note that the BARF web site features a photo of and link to one Kevin Strom. For the enlightenment of visitors to this newsgroup, here is a listing of suggested readings re: Kevin Alfred Strom.

http://www.splcenter.org/cgi-bin/goframe.pl?refname=/intelligenceproject/ip-4i4.html Contains an interview with Mr. Strom's ex:
QUOTE
A former insider speaks
For four years, Kirsten Kaiser, 36, lived with her husband on or near the West Virginia compound of William Pierce, the leader of the neo-Nazi National Alliance and author of the racist fantasy novel The Turner Diaries. Kaiser was married to Kevin Alfred Strom, who co-hosts Pierce's racist and anti-Semitic radio show and is one of Pierce's closest associates. In that role, she got to know Pierce's inner circle and some of its members' thinking. Over the nine years of her marriage, Kaiser came to question the violently racist views of the Alliance -- especially after the deaths of 19 children in the Oklahoma City bombing, which was patterned on an attack portrayed in The Turner Diaries. Today, she is living in Minnesota and going through a divorce from Strom. The Intelligence Report interviewed Kaiser about her life and acquaintances inside the Alliance, and how she came to leave.

http://www.adl.org/poisoning_web/kkk.html

QUOTE
Now led by Shane Crowe of Louisiana, this group has numerous sites on the Web as well. Unlike Robb's sites, those of the Michigan faction do not soft-pedal their bigotry. At the Web site of its Oregon chapter, this Klan openly and honestly declares, "we believe in White Supremacy. The Klan believes that America is a White man's country, and should be governed by White men." Blatant extremist views can also be found at the national Web site for Crowe's Klan, which features a prominent link to Stormfront, the text of Kevin Alfred Strom's "The Beast Is Saint," and a reprint of Henry Ford Sr.'s "classic" anti-Semitic text, The International Jew.

QUOTE
Excerpted from: "Evil in High Places", by Kevin Alfred Strom.

THERE IS EVIL IN HIGH PLACES in America today... because there has been a revolution in this country and the American people lost. The revolution... the takeover of America by [Jewish] aliens and the traitors who served those aliens... was engineered and executed by the same forces who... brought the scourge of Communism to Europe.... The Jewish revolution is now complete - but the revolutionists feel far from secure. Now that they are in power, their main concern is staying there... They want to infiltrate agents into groups they merely suspect of lawbreaking. And who do you think they "suspect"? The Mafia? Jewish organized crime gangs in New York and Los Angeles? Homosexual activists who fling AIDS-infected blood at innocent churchgoers? Jamaican cocaine dealers who kill almost with impunity on our city streets? No. It is you and I, it is anyone who opposes their evil agenda, it is anyone who wants a return to the values that made America great... They would take away the last of our freedoms, the freedom to speak, and they would frame, they would plant evidence, they would lie, they would kill to stay in power .
[I urge you to] speak out against those who would turn our beloved America into a brutal Third World police state.... When our people realize that hundreds of thousands of us are speaking out, they will join us, and when enough of them do that, we will be the state - the American government will once again be in the hands of true Americans. The outward-bound 747s will be... overloaded with traitors and alien subversives and their ill-gotten lucre, heading for Israel or elsewhere where their evil revolution may still be in power. But the Jewish revolution will be finished here. America will be America once again. And our sons and our daughters will be able to look with clear eyes into a future once again brighter than the sun.

QUOTE
British neo-fascists and youth
Wider-ranging recruitment efforts are currently under way. While the council has been largely made up of aging southern proponents of "the lost cause," last year it began an effort to recruit a younger generation of followers, setting up an education committee and a youth chapter.
The youth chapter was developed by Mark Cotterill, using the false last name

Cerr, around Washington, D.C. Cotterill, a Briton, is said to have brought 100 young people into the CCC. What Cotterill doesn't boast openly about are his connections to the National Alliance - his friendships with Alliance founder William Pierce, and Pierce's chief deputy, Kevin Alfred Strom. Pierce's novel of a future race war, The Turner Diaries, served as the blueprint for the deadly 1995 bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building.

Cotterill is well known in Britain, which he left three years ago. There, he was associated with the neofascist National Front and its successor, the British National Party, as well as American distributor of a far-right periodical, Right Now. He also has been linked to the Ulster Defense Association, a paramilitary Protestant group in Northern Ireland.
END QUOTE

http://hatewatch.org/who/pierce.html Mr. Strom may have a real future:
QUOTE
Presenting an image of restrained academic bookishness in front of main stream media, Pierce is more blunt in the company of "friendlier" audiences. Shortly following the death of poet Allen Ginsberg, who was Jewish and gay, Pierce stated frankly that he believed that persons who published material such as Ginsberg's should be shot. This speech was reproduced at his Web site, which is emblazoned with the motto "Free Speech." He also once wrote in an Alliance encyclical that "all the homosexuals, race-mixers and hard-case collaborator in the country who are too far gone to be re-educated can be rounded up, packed into 10,000 or so cattle cars, and eventually double-timed into an abandoned coal mine in a few days' time." This statement is, of course, eerily similar to the actions of Hitler's Third Reich.

Despite Pierce's stark neo-Nazism, the National Alliance is a consistently growing organization, research shows. Pierce has actually been successful in starting National Alliance chapters nationwide including the New York metropolitan area which has one of largest Jewish populations in the world. National Alliance meetings begin with a roll-call of members (first names only) but always include the names of three specific individuals: Revilo Pendleton Oliver, a deceased, Illinois-based professor of Classics who wrote several racist and anti-Semitic tracts during the 1960s to 1980s, Bob Mathews and David Lane of the Order. At the calling of these three names, all members present shout "Here!"

Now In his mid-60s, it is unclear who will follow Pierce when he dies. Speculation that he would be succeeded by his media-savvy lieutenant Kevin Alfred Strom lessened when Strom left the National Alliance (at least publicly) nearly two years ago. This was also the case with Milton John Kleim, Jr., Pierce's one-time "point man" for the Internet who is in his mid-20s, but he too has left the National Alliance, and the far-right, racist movement altogether. Kleim has thoroughly recanting his previous points of view. Pierce's most visible lieutenant is his North Carolina lieutenant, Will Williams. But Williams, with his southern accent and inability to harness his blatantly racist point of view into anything that can sound even remotely rational, would not likely be a successor that would be sanctioned by Pierce. However, if Pierce does not have a hand-picked successor, then the future of the National Alliance without a William Pierce would seem in question.

http://www.faem.com/oliver/oliver-1.htm

http://www.loop.com/~bramble/conspir.html
QUOTE
Dave Middleton, editorializing in The Capital Christian News, the Christian Coalition's publication for Rensslaer County, NY, believes that the U.N. is poised to take over the U.S., aided by (Jewish) humanists and scientists. Middleton claims that three orbiting satellites can project 3-D holograms onto the planet and people "will be fooled by the false signs and wonders" into accepting the invasion.
The ancient paranoia has resurfaced in response to the modern plague: An organization in Orange County, California, believes that HIV was created by the KGB as part of a plot to take over the U.S. According to this theory, mandatory quarantining of HIV-positives is the only way to stop the Communist invasion.

Christian Identity Online features one of the finest HIV-conspiracy speeches. Kevin Alfred Strom, speaking on the "American Dissident Voices" radio show (July 10, 1993), blames the spread of HIV on "the homosexualization of America" through "the power of organized perversion" and "the controlled media." The media, of course, is run by "the multicultural, one-world agenda" of the "forces behind Liberalism" -- those pesky Jews!

Strom pumps up the volume when he tells people to avoid the "trendy, fashionable part of town whenever possible," as "this is often where the highest percentage of homosexuals are to be found." People should move into "racially, culturally, and medically healthier" [read: racially pure] areas that offer lower risks of contact "with those in high-risk groups, including Blacks, Third-World immigrants, homosexuals, and drug users."

And don't think that crazy ideas about gays spreading epidemics started with Christian fundamentalists. After the original outbreak of Black Death in 541, Emperor Justinian decreed that people had provoked God to anger and retribution because of "perpetrating vile acts with other men

The pay as you go cell phones are available from places such as 7-11 stores.
You 'buy' the phone then prepay for air time you may or may not use. Once you use the air time you pre-paid, you can no longer place calls until you pre pay for more time. This is akin to one of those scams where a person
'rents' furniture with a promise to buy. It is aimed at those who have no bank accounts, no credit, and no other means of collectability.
The Dimmy's have had a couple of cell phone accounts that have been duly shut off for non-payment. They now have to use 28.310 as their mode of communications. They also may be heard on the 222MhZ band where they often argue between themselves.
Dimmy still comments every once in a while that he is hauling down $90,000 a year as a registered "engineer". Dimmy is lying, and is lucky if he grabs $27,000 per annum.
So much for this highly successful "Engineer" and his cell phones.

Indeed, does anyone, anywhere, know if the ugly pointed head angry gnome from Glendale WV has any friends anywhere?
How about you ham ops? Does Wogey Wiseman talk to anyone on ham radio that he actually calls a "friend"? Does Wogey have ONE friend anywhere in the world? The pathetic little gnome must have made at least one friend somewhere?

While Orasssssss is the target of the many CBers in his area, he is most unwelcome on the CB bands. That's why he has that CB audio on the ham bands.
Rich's picture mooning Orasss on the 313 web page is what most people think

hi i just listed a hw16 on the eham site, i have a hw16 thats very clean although some of the lettering is worn off the back side, it works quite well and i have used it for qso's on 40 meters. only thing i can see thats different from stock is someone replaced a couple of sections of the multicap in the power supply by adding a couple of capacitors across the orginal. asking $85 plus shipping

I used to have either a small program or the link to a website that would calculate the distance between two people using their latitude and longitude. Does anyone know where I can get such a thing on the web? Thanks!!

RUN -- don't walk -- RUN to the nearest hardware store. Buy a heavy-duty galvanized bucket. Make certain it will fit over your head then wear it like a hat, 24 hours a day. The transmissions from the Ruby satellites are getting through the aluminum foil hat you're wearing.

And take your meds.

FCC Amateur Radio Enforcement Letters for the Period Ending December 15, 2001
FCC Enforcement Letters
A representative listing of recent Amateur Radio enforcement-related letters from the files of the FCC Enforcement Bureau (letters are in alphabetical order by city of address):

NOTE: Issuance by the FCC of a Warning Notice indicates that the FCC has what it believes to be reliable evidence of possible rules infractions and not necessarily that the recipient has violated FCC rules. The FCC has the authority, pursuant to §97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered by a volunteer examiner. These enforcement letters are representative of recent Advisory Notices, Warning Notices, Notices of Violation and other FCC communications to licensees and others involving possible serious rules violations. Unless otherwise indicated, all letters were signed by FCC Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth. This listing is not a comprehensive record of FCC Amateur enforcement actions. Follow-up correspondence will be published as provided. Address all inquiries regarding this correspondence to FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, rholling@fcc.gov.

Mr. Glenn A. Baxter
RR 1 Box 776
Belgrade Lakes, ME 04918

RE: Warning Notice--Amateur Radio license K1MAN
Dear Mr. Baxter:

The Commission has information that you have sent numerous so-called "Standard Felony Complaint Affidavits" to various Amateur Radio licensees that you perceive to either cause interference to your Amateur Radio station K1MAN or do not relinquish to you the frequency on which they are operating. Inasmuch as you have successfully completed an examination for an Amateur Ra dio license, you should be aware that all Amateur frequencies are shared. You have no greater rights whatsoever to an Amateur Radio frequency than any other Amateur Radio operator.

We also note that on January 5, 1994, the United States Attorney for your jurisdiction, Jay P. McCloskey, warned you about the mailing of such "Standard Felony Complaint Affidavits" and stated:

DO NOT send any more Standard Felony Complaint Affidavits to our office. The interference you allege, even if intentional, is not a federal criminal offense over which our office has prosecutorial jurisdiction.
The letter from United States Attorney McCloskey also referenced letters that you had sent other Amateur operators alerting them of supposed criminal charges instituted by McCloskey's office. In his letter to you, McCloskey stated:

It is against the law to write and mail this type of threatening communication, especially when it has no basis in fact. If you continue sending this type of letter, you may be subject to federal criminal charges for misrepresentation and for using the mails to make threats. You may also jeopardize your Amateur license.

You are advised that any attempts to threaten or intimidate Amateur Radio licensees operating on the Amateur bands will reflect adversely upon your qualifications to remain a Commission licensee, and will be the subject of a license revocation or renewal hearing.

December 10, 2001

Mr. Douglas W. Shock
4635 Enchanted Circle N
Colorado Springs, CO 80917

RE: Amateur Radio license K0ZU

Dear Mr. Shock:

Enclosed is a complaint regarding the operation of your station on 28.390 MHz on December 3, 2001. The complaint concerns interference as well as indecent or obscene language.

The Commission's rules prohibit Amateur stations from transmitting obscene or indecent words or language. You are advised that, for indecency purposes, the Commission treats Amateur transmissions the same as commercial broadcasts. Utterances of "any obscene, indecent or profane language by means of radio communications" are prohibited by Title 18, U.S.C. Section 1464. Under the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, the Commission may revoke any station license for violation of Section 1464 of Title 18. See 47 U.S.C. Section 312(a)(6).

Obscene speech is not protected by the First Amendment and cannot be broadcast at any time. To be obscene, material must meet a three point test: (1) an average person, applying contemporary community standards, must find that the material, as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest; (2) the material must depict or describe, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined by applicable law; and (3) the material, taken as a whole, must lack serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value. See Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15 (1973).

The Commission defines indecency as language or material that, in context, depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards, sexual or excretory activities or organs. The Supreme Court has repeatedly rejected arguments that this definition is unconstitutionally vague. See Action for Children's Television v. F.C.C., 58 F.3d. 654 (D.C. Cir. 1995), FCC v. Pacifica Foundation, 438 U.S. 726 (1977).

Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, gives the Commission the authority to obtain information from licensees about the operation of their station. Accordingly you are requested to respond to this letter within 20 days of its date. Please send your signed and dated response to 1270 Fairfield Road at the letterhead address.

Mr. Thomas P. Neuhaus
189-34 45 Drive
Flushing, NY 11358

RE: Warning Notice--Amateur Radio license WB2CLN
Dear Mr. Neuhaus:

Monitoring of transmissions from your station between 12:01 P.M. and 12:20 P.M. EST on December 6, 2001, on 3.860 MHz, indicates that you are not only seriously misinformed about the basis and purpose of the allocation of spectrum for Amateur Radio, but seriously misinformed about the Commission's enforcement of the prohibition against obscene or indecent Amateur radio transmissions as well. A summary of the transmissions is enclosed.

The Commission's rules prohibit Amateur stations from transmitting obscene or indecent words or language. You are advised that, for indecency purposes, the Commission treats Amateur transmissions the same as commercial broadcasts.

Utterances of "any obscene, indecent or profane language by means of radio communications" are prohibited by Title 18, U.S.C. Section 1464. Under the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, the Commission may revoke any station license for violation of Section 1464 of Title 18. See 47 U.S.C. Section 312(a)(6).

Obscene speech is not protected by the First Amendment and cannot be broadcast at any time. To be obscene, material must meet a three point test: (1) an average person, applying contemporary community standards, must find that the material, as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest; (2) the material must depict or describe, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined by applicable law; and (3) the material, taken as a whole, must lack serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value. See Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15 (1973).

The Commission defines indecency as language or material that, in context, depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards, sexual or excretory activities or organs. The Supreme Court has repeatedly rejected arguments that this definition is unconstitutionally vague. See Action for Children's Television v. F.C.C., 58 F.3d. 654 (D.C. Cir. 1995), FCC v. Pacifica Foundation, 438 U.S. 726 (1977).

Your operation as described above is contrary to the basis and purpose of the Amateur Radio Service as set out in Section 97.1 of the Commission's rules. Furthermore, it degrades the Amateur spectrum for legitimate users. Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, gives the Commission the authority to obtain information from licensees about the operation of their station. Accordingly you are requested to respond to this letter within 20 days of its date. Please send your signed and dated response to 1270 Fairfield Road at the letterhead address.

Enclosure: (1)

November 1, 2001

Mr. Kenneth P. Kelly
P. O. Box 7477
Greensboro, NC 27417

SUBJECT: Amateur Radio license WT2FBI
Notice of Cancellation
Dear Sir:

The Commission, pursuant to Section 97.519(d)(2) of the Commission's Rules, 47 C.F.R. Section 97.519(d)(2), has the authority to re-administer any examination element previously administered by Volunteer Examiners (VEs). The Commission may either administer the examination itself, or under the supervision of a Volunteer Examiner Coordinator (VEC) or VE designated by the Commission.

On September 5, 2001 we required you to re-take the Technician Class Amateur examination under the supervision of a VE of the American Radio Relay League. The examination was to have been completed on or before October 30, 2001.

You did not appear for this examination, and as a result the Wireless telecommunications Bureau has cancelled your Amateur license. Continued operation of radio transmitting equipment would be a violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, and would lead to criminal penalties in cooperation with the United States Attorney in your jurisdiction.

December 10, 2001

Mr. Salvatore Viglione
9235 S Timberline Terrace
Inverness, FL 34452

RE: Amateur Radio license W4SAL
Dear Mr. Viglione:

We have received the enclosed complaint alleging that you deliberately interfered with ongoing communications on December 8, 2001 on 3.945 MHz, and subsequently moved to 3.941 MHz and operated with a transmitter "I.F. filtering configuration and carrier point altered to increase the bandwidth", thus continuing to interfere with communications on 3.945 MHz.

Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. Section 308(b), gives the Commission the authority to request information from a licensee regarding the operation of a radio station. Accordingly, you are requested to respond to the complaint within 20 days from the above date.

Address your response to 1270 Fairfield Road at the above letterhead address, and please be advised that Congress has made punishable a willfully false or misleading reply to a letter of this type. See Title 18, Section 1001 of the United States Code.

Enclosure (2)

Jonesboro, GA 30236

RE: Amateur Radio license K4VD

Dear Mr. Reeves:

On November 13, 2001 we notified you that we had received a complaint regarding your radio operation on 3.895 MHz. We enclosed the complaint and requested a reply within 20 days.

We have reviewed your reply and find it acceptable. Additional information indicates that someone was using your call sign on that frequency at that time, and we have closed this matter. Thank you for your cooperation.

December 10, 2001

Mr. Joseph D. Bushel, Jr.
7212 175th Drive
Live Oak, FL 32060

RE: Amateur Radio license W2DWR--Repeater Operation

Dear Mr. Bushel:

We have received the enclosed complaint alleging that you are operating a repeater on 146.94 MHz after being denied coordination by the Florida repeater Council. The complaint alleges that your operation is causing interference to coordinated repeater K4EHM, which is coordinated for that frequency. The complaint further alleges that you are transmitting a digital voice recording on that frequency without identifying.

Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. Section 308(b), gives the Commission the authority to request information from a licensee regarding the operation of a radio station. Accordingly, you are requested to respond to the complaint within 20 days from the above date.

Address your response to 1270 Fairfield Road at the above letterhead address, and please be advised that Congress has made punishable a willfully false or misleading reply to a letter of this type. See Title 18, Section 1001 of the United States Code.

RE: Warning Notice--Amateur license ND8V Case EB 2000-57

Dear Mr. Guernsey:

On October 1, 2001 we sent copies of complaints that had been filed concerning the operation of your Amateur station ND8V. The letter required a reply by October 23, 2001. We have not received a reply from you. If you wish you may send the reply by facsimile to 717-338-2698. It should be filed immediately.

We also note that a recent change was made to your licensing records with the Commission, indicating that the Travis Road address is in Kalamazoo rather than Parchment, Michigan, although you have received mail at that address in Parchment. Please take immediate steps to clarify your correct address.

December 13, 2001

Mr. Thomas J. Banks
250 S. W. Moselle Avenue
Port St. Lucie, FL 34984

RE: Amateur Radio License KB4AN: Warning Notice

Dear Mr. Banks:

On November 14, 2001 the St. Lucie Repeater Association Trustee requested that you refrain from using their AF4CN repeater system. The request was made as a result of your failing to follow Commission rules and operational rules set forth by the licensee/control operators of the repeater. Information indicates that you have not adhered to the request.

The Commission requires that repeaters be under the supervision of a control operator and holds such control operators and licensees responsible for the proper operation of the repeater system. Control operators may take whatever steps are appropriate to ensure compliance with the repeater rules, including converting the repeater to a closed repeater or taking it off the air entirely. We do not require them to convert the repeater to a closed repeater in order to ensure compliance among the users.

Please be advised that we expect you to abide by the request to stay off the AF4CN system and your failure to do so after receipt of this letter will jeopardize your Amateur license. If you use the repeater again we will initiate enforcement action against your license, which may include revocation, forfeiture or a modification proceeding to restrict the frequencies on which you may operate KB4AN.

Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. Section 308(b), gives the Commission the authority to obtain information from licensees about the operation of their stations. Pursuant to that section, you are requested to respond to this letter within 20 days stating what action you have taken to comply with the November 14, 2001 request by the AF4CN repeater trustee.

We also note that your address in our database shows 4356 Dorothea Drive in Lake Worth. Please take immediate steps to correct it.

Mainly, because you SUCK at flaming.

Joanie shows off his "grammar" skills and hypocrisy with the following

"You're "Guide to Gay Lifestyle" handbook doesn't count." in

Joanie shows off his "William and Mary" [William and Mary School for the

"And what's you excuse?" in <9u2v8g$vp7$6@pita.alt.net>

Joanie the Pulitzer prize winner slobbered incoherently:
"I cant' believe I'm agreeing with you, Woger."
in <9unp1urm0@dosa.alt.net>.

Joanie the ill-educated, perverted pedophile slobbered:

For your sake you had better hope so, just because you wanted to sound like a tough guy to impress your rec.radio.cb friends.So if Riley does show up at your QTH your gonna kill him right thats what it sounds like to me If your gonna bust a cap in his ass what end result woul you be looking for. Ever

That is a pretty good trick woger since I haven't been on a local repeater in several years. Just what is the identify and callsign you reported to Riley, woger? Like you think Riley is going to listen to someone he has caught jamming?

Did not admit to anything, woger, and I never heard of this Perry guy you seem to have a thing about. As I stated in a previous post, I haven't been on a repeater in a number of years, so try again. Good God, you're dumber than dumb.

You should not ask Woger Wiseman to produce facts or proof.
Woger can only spew filth and lies. The pathetic Glendale WV pointy-headed gnome is best known for keeping a clean toilet at Boss Hog's Auto Parts Store, since that is where Woger conducts his important business.

You should not ask Woger Wiseman to produce facts or proof.
Woger can only spew filth and lies. The pathetic Glendale WV
pointy-headed gnome is best known for keeping a clean toilet at Boss Hog's Auto Parts Store, since that is where Woger conducts
his important business.

If I recall, Roger Wiseman, KC8JBO, published a list of his enemies here not too long ago, a lengthy list indeed! So Wogey, how about publishing a list of your friends? Then again, you and I know, you have zero friends, save for the "companions" you have brief moments with down at O'Leary's Hourly Motel & Lavendar Lounge.

6940. ADI AR-146+misc motorola stuff

I need help with an ADI AR-146 mobile radio. All front panel controls act like they are locked yet I can lock and unlock (accoridng to the LCD) them using the "F"+"lock" key combination. Yet they still do not seem to function. i have reset the radio according to the manual etc. Any ideas? This radio has not had any jumpers cut etc. It was a surplus item and I wish to use it to check some other gear I have for functionality (it is the only multi frequency radio I have, the others I want to test are all crystal bound to one or two frequencies)

Also I have a question involving the old BIG motorola tube type two way mobile radios (the ones that fit in a bracket and lock with a key and weigh about 35 pounds apeice). I am a relative novice with these radios, but I have two that are identical. Their crystals are for different frequencies, however they both have two identical crystals in them. I assume one is a transmit crystal and the other is a recieve. Would it be possible to use the transmit crystal from one unit in the recieve portion of the other for testing of functionality? Or would it require complete realignment of the radio (which I do not have the equipment to do)? I hope these topics are appropriate

Thank you,
Eli

P.S. Before anyone jumps me, yes I am going to apply for the license to use these things if I can get two working from my stack of radios, I just don't see a point in getting a license if I have no equipment.

Then give some specifics or shut up moron. As I said, I haven't been on a repeater in several years, I don't even own a VHF/UHF rig. Like I say, you're dumber than dumb.

Like I say that is going to be a pretty good trick since I don't even own a VHF/UHF rig. Kind of hard to operate through a repeter
